Thomas Gaffy shot and killed Edward Buggy at Dunscombe. Gaffer was the rejected suitor of a girl with whom Buggy was walking when killed. The slayer is in jail. Mob violence is feared.

The safe in Reed & Heath's Victor roller mills at the old town of Lima Springs was blown open by burglars and robbed of its contents—only $5.38. The door was blown completely off. There is no clue to the burglars.

H. M. Belvue at Des Moines filed an information charging Senator George L. Finn with assault and battery. Senator Finn paid the fine and the matter is settled as far as Finn is concerned.

Tom Sutton was run over by a Burlington passenger train at Waterloo, near Nora Junction, and was instantly killed. He was a farmer, residing near Nora Springs, and was walking home on the track. He was 40 years old and leaves a family.

In a saloon next door to the Democratic head quarters at Burlington occurred a shooting affray. Ginther, the saloon-keeper, got into a dispute and shot Tom Wall, a notorious crook, in the arm. Another onlooker was wounded in the hand.

Fire broke out in the Globe Building, Dubuque, occupied by Platt Bros., clothiers; The Metz book bindery, the Illinois Central offices and others. The principal damage is to Platt Bros., who estimate the damage caused by water at $8,000 to $10,000. the loss otherwise is light.

W. F. Knapp, a brakeman on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern road, was run over by a switch engine, at Iowa Falls, and instantly killed. His home was at Goodwell, where he leaves a wife and three children. He formerly lived at Forest City.

Fire in a dry goods store of J. H. Mayneham at Sioux City caused a loss of about $30,000. In the same building is the wholesale dry goods house of H. A. Jandt & Co., having a stock valued at $200,000. Water and smoke damaged this about $15,000. All loss is fully covered by insurance.

DOLLAR FOR A KISS.

How a Drummer Was Saved From Ruin.

A traveling man, who was also the head of a prosperous firm, promised his newly wedded wife, says the Michigan Tradesman that he would give her a dollar every time he kissed her, and in that way she could save plenty of money. Things went on in this way for several years, and as he made plenty of money he faithfully kept his promise. Finally reverses came, and the once prosperous traveling man found that he was virtually a pauper. He went home to his wife and told her all. She, however, did not seem worried, and he was somewhat surprised when she asked him to take a ride with her that afternoon, but he accepted the invitation. Passing a large block on a well-known street she said: "That's mine." Soon she came to a handsome flat and said: "That's mine." Well, she showed him several places with the same remark, until he began to be suspicious and inquired: "How in the deuce did you acquire so much wealth?" Do you remember the contract you made when we were first married?" she said. "Yes," he replied, "I do." "Well, I invested it, and it has made us rich." The traveling man hung his head and said nothing. This was kept up for thirty minutes, until his wife became alarmed, and she asked; "What in the world is the matter, and what are you thinking about?" He said: "I was thinking of how rich we would be if I had done all my kissing at home."

A Corrected Estimate.

The Prince de Joinville, who made a loud profession of patriotism and hostility towards the English, once remarked to a British naval officer:—

"It is my most ardent wish to lie, in a sea-fight, for twenty minutes alongside an English man-of-war of the same burden."

The Englishman politely made answer:—

"Allow me to tell your Royal Highness that ten minutes would be amply sufficient!"—

A Substitute for Carbon Pencils.

Rolls of wide gauze, coated with chromates, are now used instead of carbon pencils for producing electric arc oxy-hydrogen lime light, and as the pencils only burn ⅛in. per. hour, a light can be maintained for twelve hours with a consumption of 1½in. of the metal. The arc is very steady, but has to be protected by a globe, else air currents would blow it out. Ordinary arc lamps can be adopted to burn these pencils, which are the invention of Mr. Isaiah L. Robert, an American electrician.

Natural Inference.

Beware of trying to deceive children. How often must parent's be taught this lesson?

"Why, mamma, you've got a gray hair in your bang!"

"Yes, dear. That came because you were so naughty to mamma yesterday."

"Oh mamma, what a naughty little girl you must have been to grandma! All her hairs are gray."—Demorest's Monthly.

DID NOT KISS HIM.

Nettie Boyd Testifies in the Williams Divorce Case at Rapid City, S. D.

She Often Dined and Drove With Mr. Williams, but Denies Kissing Him.

Rapid City, S. D., Special Telegram, March 15.—The Williams divorce case was resumed in the circuit court to-day and several sensations occurred. The cross-examination of Nettie Boyd was concluded. The witness admitted that since 1887 she had been on terms of intimate friendship with the plaintiff, knowing at the time he was a married man. She had driven to places of entertainment and had dined with him at hotels frequently, but she had never kissed him or been criminally intimate with him.

The proprietor and clerk of the Hotel Harney were then put on the stand to prove the date that plaintiff came to Rapid City. More depositions and witnesses arrived from Rochester, N. Y., this morning, and Judge Fuller admitted the former in evidence. This afternoon the court room was so crowded that the doors had to be locked and the corridors cleared. Mrs. Eliza T. Williams, the defendant, arrived this morning and was put on the stand. She bears unmistakable signs of good breeding, and her face and manner stamp her at once as

A PERFECT LADY.

Once just after taking the stand, she broke down for a few moments, and later caused something of a sensation by asking the court to allow her to talk for a few moments with the plaintiff, her husband. Her eyes wandered almost constantly to where he was sitting, and for a part of the time she appeared to be hypnotized by him.

Notwithstanding this, her testimony, it could plainly be seen, was absolutely true, and was believed by all. It refuted almost all of the testimony given by the plaintiff, and by 5 o'clock whatever hope the plaintiff had of securing a divorce had totally disappeared.

She declared that the O'Malley girl, to whose influence Williams attributes his troubles, was not a Catholic fanatic and that their relations were simply those of warm friendship. She admitted that their relations had never been happy, but said she had hoped for a better understanding. The charge of adultery has virtually failed and the case will probably be decided on the questions of desertion and refusal to cohabit.

The counsel for the defendant, by permission of the court and opposing counsel, then amended their answer, and Mrs. Williams is now suing for a divorce. It is thought the case will be finished to-morrow and Mrs. Williams be given the divorce. Over an hour was taken up to-day in a discussion and exposition of the Roman Catholic doctrine regarding divorce.

RAILROAD MEN DISCHARGED.

The Canadian Pacific Management Dismissing Disloyal Employes.

Winnipeg, Man., Special Telegram, March 15.—The Canadian Pacific management, finding evidence that a conspiracy had been formed, partly through outside influences, to bring about a strike of its conductors and brakemen on its Western division, decided on Saturday to dismiss all who were found to be disloyal, and the dismissals commenced Sunday, every man refusing to stand by the company being promptly paid off. Some delays to trains were feared, but all of them up to this time have been kept moving, and nine emigrant trains which left Port Arthur for Winnipeg Sunday and Sunday night, were got through without difficulty. The dismissals resulted in vigorous efforts on the part of the leaders and discharged men to induce the others to quit work, but, so far, without success. The company claims to have enough available men to move all its principal trains, and, therefore, not much further trouble is feared.

Ashland's New Academy.

Ashland, Wis., Special Telegram, March 15.—The incorporators of the new Congregational academy have decided to call for bids in a few days. The plan is to have a New England academy similar to Phillips, Exeter. Articles of incorporation have already been filed, and it is expected that Prof. Burr, now at Beloit, Wis., will have charge. It is anticipated the stone will be laid some time during the coming summer, when Congregational clubs from all parts of the West will assemble in Ashland to celebrate the anniversary of "Plymouth Rock" on Madaline island, the largest of the apostle group, where the missionary, Rev. L. H. Wheeler, built the first Protestant church in the State of Wisconsin in 1857, and which is still standing. It is expected many prominent persons will be present and delegates from all Western states. The old mission property has been purchased and the old church, now tumbled down, will be rededicated.

Bound for the Encampment.

Huron, S. D., Special Telegram, March 15.—Ex-Department Commander Langley, with Department Chaplain Shanafelt, left here to-day with a large delegation of old soldiers for the state encampment at Mitchell. They were joined here by delegations from Miller, St. Lawrence, Hitchcock, Gettysburg and Redfield. The company nearly filled one car. Several members of the Woman's Relief corps accompanied the old vets. The next department commander is likely to be Col. Holt of Aberdeen, and Huron hopes to secure the next department encampment.

Evangelization Conference.

Pittsburg, March 15.—A city Evangelization conference will be held in this city to-morrow and Wednesday. Among the cities represented will be Cleveland, Chicago, Cincinnati, Buffalo, Boston, New York, Baltimore, St. Louis, Detroit, Pittsburg, Brooklyn, Indianapolis, Washington, Milwaukee, Jersey City, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Omaha, Denver and Kansas City.

Dubuque & Sioux City Meeting.

Dubuque, Iowa, March 15.—The annual meeting of the Dubuque & Sioux City was held in this city to-day. Besides the Dubuque members of the directory there were present Stuyvesant Fish, J. C. Welling and J. T. Hanrahan, Chicago; S. L. Dows, Cedar Rapids; A. S. Gaaretson and James F. Peavy, Sioux City. The company's report showed gross earnings of $1,450,000; net earnings, $444,000. The only change in the directory was the election of W. H. Torbert of Dubuque to take the place of J. F. Wallace of Chicago, resigned; J. G. Hanrahan was elected general manager; Stuyvesant Fish, president, and J. C. Welling, vice president. The annual meeting will be held in September hereafter.

MANY INJURED.

A Bad Accident Near Fremont, Wis., on the Central.

Waupaca, Wis., Special Telegram, March 15.—A terrible accident occurred on the Wisconsin Central road near Fremont this morning. The rails spread as a passenger train was coming north. The engine and mail car passed safely, but the baggage and smoker and day coach went down an embankment of seventeen feet. The smoker, two Pullman sleepers and an emigrant sleeper were burned.

Brakeman Gilderman was killed. The injured are:

Hans Oleson, Chicago, hurt about head; C. H. Dodd, Oshkosh, injured about head and internally; M. A. Cohen, Milwaukee, foot hurt; R. M. Melcher, Neenah, head injured; A. W. Jones of Dale, F. A. Sminkler of Chicago, Express Messenger J. H. Wilson and Mrs. Delia Fleming of Elkhart, Ind.

The injured were taken to Weyauwega. The track is badly torn up.

UNDER THE WATER.

A New Projectile That Will Strike a Vessel Below the Belt.

New York, March 15.—On some day in the latter part of this week the aerial subaquatic projectile, to the invention of which Ericsson devoted so many years of study, will be tried at Fort Wadsworth under the supervision of the board of ordnance. The projectile may be used either on land or at sea. It does not differ essentially from the ordinary cigar-shaped one. It carries 300 pounds of dynamite or gun-cotton. The projectile strikes the water at an angle. In order that its work may be thoroughly done the aim must be very exact, as the projectile will not explode unless the precussion cap at its end strikes some portion under water of the vessel to be destroyed. When the projectile strikes the water it will still have sufficient velocity to travel 500 feet underneath the water. The depth at which it may travel underneath the water is regulated by an ingenious device. It is also fitted with rudders or fins, which, having been adjusted before the projectile is discharged, steers it in a straight course against the vessel. The projectile will ordinarily travel under the water at a depth of about ten feet below the armor of the vessel it is intended to destroy.

Fire at Shell Lake.

Shell Lake, Wis., Special Telegram, March 15.—Fire broke out to-night in T. H. Wang's store and consumed the building, together with most of the stock. The Masons occupied the upper floor and owned that part of the building. They saved nothing. Mr. Wang's loss on stock and building is $12,500; insurance, $3,000 on stock. The Masonic lodge did not save any records. Its loss will be $1,500; insurance, $800.

Shuts Out Other Roads.

Chicago, March 15.—It was discovered this morning that the Illinois Central during Sunday night had laid a switch track south of the world's fair grounds, which, if it can be maintained, will effectually block the Baltimore & Ohio from reaching its proposed terminal on the grounds and thus shut out all other roads. The work, it is claimed, was done under a permit granted by the village of Hyde Park before it was annexed to the city.

Jack Rabbits Bagged.

Fresno, Cal., March 15.—Five hundred Grand Army men attended the state encampment here, and indulged in a jack rabbit round-up yesterday. When within five miles of the rabbits the two wings formed a circle and closed in on the game. Twenty-five thousand is the number bagged, and of these over three thousand were tramped to death as the final rush was made. The slaughter of the animals was sickening.

Incendiarism Suspected.

Faribault, Special, March 15.—The barn connected with Rodewalds & Devery's meat market caught fire, and the building and nine horses and one heifer were burned. The loss is estimated by Mr. Rodewalds at $1,500. No insurance on the stock, a small amount on the barn. The owners think the building was set on fire.

Indicted a Dead Man.

Fort Dodge, Iowa, Special Telegram, March 15.—It has just leaked out that the Webster county grand jury recently indicted a dead man. The indictment was brought against Mike Hanrahan for selling liquor contrary to law. When the sheriff came to arrest his man he found that Hanrahan had been dead eight years.

A Receiver Demanded.

Milwaukee, March 15.—George Hiles, the millionaire capitalist, has instituted proceedings to have a receiver appointed for the Milwaukee Power and Lighting company, alleging that the company is insolvent. Mr. Hiles is the principal creditor, and his claim of $27,500 is secured by mortgages.

Was Owned by Jesse James.

Lake City, Minn., Special, March 15.—Charles Moth, the noted wrestler, now a resident of this city, has purchased and just received from a stock dealer in Lexington, Ky., a high-blooded saddle horse which, it is claimed, is the last steed owned and ridden by Jesse James.

A Fatal Blast Explosion.

Rapid City, S. D., Special Telegram, March 15.—Owing to the premature explosion of a blast in the Coates tin mine at Hill City, James Merrin, a miner, was instantly killed and two others were seriously injured.

A Missing Lady Found.

Yankton, S. D., March 15.—Mrs. Amy Gillig, who was reported missing from Yankton, has been found. It appears that she changed her mind about returning to Yankton from New York, and joined her mother at Milton, near Cambridge, Eng.

Annual Call Issued.

Red Wing, Minn., Special, March 11.—The call was issued from here to-day for the forty-seventh annual meeting of the Hauge Norwegian Lutheran synod, to be held at Roland, Iowa, commencing June 9.

Perished in the Storm.

Langdon, N. D., March 15.—O. S. Enger, William Davis, John Groff and a man named Olstad, with his wife and child, perished in the storm of the 9th.

Cowboys Use Their Knives.

Cheyenne, Wyo., March 15.—A four-sided fight occurred among cowboys at Ronzis, at which Buck Taylor, formerly with Buffalo Bill, was fatally injured. Pat Horrigan and Al Dougherty were badly cut with knives during the melee.

Wheat Thieves.

Miller, S. D., Special, March 15.—During the past few days several farmers near here have lost an aggregate of four or five hundred bushels of seed wheat by thieves, one farmer having all he had stolen.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 63 cents.

E. M. Hoff made a business trip to Crookston to-day.

Pete Misgen, of Crookston, is in town to-day on business.

Business here has been light the past week on account of bad roads.

Joe Berthiaume, of Crookston, was in town last Friday on business.

George Fricker made a business trip to Crookston last Monday.

The new council will take their oath of office this evening and hold a business session.

James Meehan, of the Red Lake Falls News, was in town a short time last Saturday.

Conductor Connelly has returned from his trip below and is again at work on his run.

Wheat has struck the lowest price for this crop this week No. 1 hard now being worth only 66 cents here

The roads are in bad condition and wheat receipts have been very light in consequence for the past week.

Miss Katie Ford closed her school north of here to-day and returned to her home near Red Lake Falls.

There seems to have been a very good demand for horses here this spring and a large number have been sold.

The weather has taken a much colder turn since the late blizzard and it looks now as if spring would not come any earlier than usual.

J. W. Finch M. M., of Minto N. D., informs us that he will be here in a few days to look over the situation with a view to locating here.

A. J. McLaughlin is busy these days while the wheat receipts are light trying to perfect a scheme whereby he can dry damp wheat with electricity.

A couple of carload of graders material was shipped from here last week It has been used in the Red Lake Falls extension last fall and this move would lead one to believ that they would not be in much of a hurry to build the branches they have promised this spring

William Johnston who succeeded in making thins lively here for several days last week, has, we understand gone to help boom Thief River Falls. There is a warrant out for his arrest here but he will not be taken unless he returns here.

Last weeks blizzard had a very extensive range and is everywhere reported to have been the worst in years. The velocity of the wind in many places was as high as sixty miles an hour and a great deal of damage was done and several lives lost.

from brief extracts forwarded from Washington Senator Washburn's immigration bill appears to embody several excellent features. Although its provisions are strongly worded, they are no stringent than the acknowledged evils of the existing system demands.

The duties of steamship companies are first clearly specified: the restrictions placed upon the wholesale influx of unfiltered immigration having been endorsed by the treasury department and by the immigration commission, As recommended by Secretary Foster the license paid by the steamship companies upon each passenger landed is raised from fifty cents to one dollar and a consular certificate of fitness must be presented before the immigrant places his feet upon our shore.

These provisions should meet with the favor of American citizens as well as of naturalized citizens of foreign birth. For they exclude no man who is worthy of American citizenship, while they forbid the further influx of irresponsibles who are unfitted to make proper use of the privileges of a democratic government.

The frugal and industrious Scandinavia the law abiding people of the Fatherland, the liberty loving and enlightened citizens of Denmark, Great Britain and the Northern European nations will have little or no difficulty in landing upon our shores under the liberal provisions of such a measure. Neither will the educated people of Austria Russia, Italy and the Sclav principalities be delarred from the privileges of American citizenship. Only the depraved, uneducated, lawless and incompetent will be sifted out.

Public opinion and enlightened common sense demand the passage of some such measure.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Minneapolis Market Record: When it is considered that there is a great deal of wheat in the north of Minnesota and North Dakota to be threshed, its present condition, and the prospect for it finally, is an interesting subject to its owners and to the trade that will handle it. Threshing in a small way proceeded all winter and what was sent here was disposed of to very good advantage ranging along from some 5 percent to 40 percent under No. 1 northern prices. The same class of wheat now has a lower range and the prospect is that the difference between it and dry grain will widen later in the season, for with warm weather it is liable to become burnt and musty. Ten years ago there was a crop with some of the charactristics of this. That is there were stacks standing through the winter. From some of those stacks seed grain was taken when threshed in the spring, which did not grow and the land was reseeded with sound grain. So it would seem that less of it can be used on the farms than many people suppose. The time to thresh is an important matter. Threshing is reported to considerable extent now in order to get that work out of the way of seeding. So far as the arrivals indicate the lots fresh from the stack do no shoflattering prospects. In the last few days cars came here that were wet, not simply damp. There is little doubt that the easiest way to dry it is in the sheaf. Farmers will be so crowded with work they cannot all do it and perhaps few will be able to handle it as it should be handled. There will be drying weather that would, perhaps put most of it in merchantable shape if sufficient attention could be given it. Such attention is yet possible. It would be better, experienced people claim, to let the stacks stand until after seeding than to thresh in the damp weather earlier.

The Tribune has been asked the meaning of the "lake channel" in connection with the agitation for a deep water lake route.

As the Tribune understands the question there are several shoal water points upon the great traffic routes between Duluth and Buffalo. The largest vessels upon the lakes cannot at present traverse the Hay lake channel which gives access to the Sault canal, Neither can they enter Lake Superior, as the existing locks at the Sault do not admit vessels drawing over 16 feet. There are also troublesome shoals in the Detroit and St. Claire rivers and the St. Claire lake. The advocates of the deep water channel want a channel from Duluth to Buffalo everywhere 20 feet in depth, Coexistent with this demand is another proposition that the ship canals about Niagara Falls and the St. Lawrence rapids be enlarged so as to permit ocean steamers to pass into the lakes with unbroken cargoes. The present proposition before the house deals only with the former channel. It is opposed by certain members from Ohio and Michigan who fear that sundry small shipping points may be injured by the deepening of the channel.

The imperative necessity of a deep water channel permitting large boats to ply between Duluth and Buffalo is too manifes to need explanation, For large boats with large cargoes can carry freight much cheaper than small boats with small cargoes. A cheap freight rate is the one necessity of western prosperity and western development.—Minneapolis Tribune.

HUMOR

SHE THOUGHT HE MUST BE LONELY.

He Found New York Different in Many Ways from Home.

A young man fresh from the country came to New York about a month ago to seek his fortune. He had just $100 in cash left when he found a boarding place and had his modest trunk carried up to his hall bedroom. Being frugal he deposited $85 of this in a savings bank down town. This bank does a large business among poor people and its clerks are not any too polite, probably because they are badgered all day long by ignorant depositors who are afraid the cashier is going to run away if they don't come around every day or two to make sure that their money is there yet.

The young man soon discovered that New York is an expensive city to live in. Five dollars would have lasted a long time for ordinary expenses in his native village, but in New York it melted away in his pocket like a snowball. It reminded him of the Scotchman who had visited the capital of England to see the sights, and who on his return, in endeavoring to describe to his friends the great cost of living there, said:

"I had na been in Lunnon five hours when bang went saxpence!"

The young Vermonter not having secured a situation, soon found it necessary to draw from his little fund in the bank. He got into position in the long line of depositors, and when his turn came asked for twelve dollars in small bills. It was handed out to him, and as there were so many people waiting behind him, he did not stop to count the money till he got away from the teller's window. He quickly saw that the man had made a mistake. Going up to the window again, he spoke over the heads of the others and told the clerk he had made an error in counting out the bills.

The teller was angry. Flushing and glaring, he shouted: "Can't you read? See that sign—'Customers must count their money before leaving the window, otherwise mistakes will not be rectified.'"

A little indignant at the teller's manner, the young man began again: "But the mistake"—

"I make no mistakes," blurted out the angry teller, interrupting the other. "Get out of the way; you're delaying business."

"But you gave me one dollar too much!" yelled the Vermonter, now thoroughly angry.

"Oh, ah!" gulped the teller. "In that case, of course—thank you!" and he grabbed the return bill. All eyes were fastened on the young man at once. As he was going out a garrulous old woman said to him:

"Young man, ain't you mighty lonely in New York?"—New York Tribune.

As Described by an Observer.

Attorney (cross-examining witness for the other side)—You say the moon was shining brightly at the time?

Witness—It was.

"You are perfectly familiar with the appearance of the moon, are you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Can tell a moon as far as you can see it, can you?"

"I think I can."

"Ever see the man in the moon?"

"I've seen what they call the man in the moon."

"Often?"

"Many a time."

"What does he look like?"

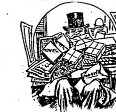
"Well, to tell you the truth, he looks like a little two for a cent, one horse lawyer."—Chicago Tribune.

The St. Louis Mouth.

In the parlor car: She (alluding to a steam shovel)—What is that tremendous thing on that car, dear?

He (of Chicago, and once jilted by a "Future City" belle)—That's an ice cream spoon on its way to a St. Louis girl.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

The Fiendish Train Boy.



Do not spoil your eyes by reading on the railway trains. If the scenery through which you are passing fails to interest you, amuse yourself and your fellow passengers by getting up a pool on the number of articles to be left on your lap by the next train boy that comes through.—Philadelphia Press.

It Was All Right.

Hotel Clerk—Is this thousand dollar bill the smallest thing you have about you?

Departing Guest—I am afraid it is.

Clerk (to bellboy)—Here, take this bill out to one of the waiters and ask him to change it.—Life.

Slightly.

"I never withhold anything from my wife. I tell her every night all that I have done during the day."

"And do you tell her every day what you have done during the night?"

"Well, that's different."—New York Sun.

Partial Approval.

Ethel (showing her engagement ring)—Don't you admire his taste?

Maud—Ye-es, as far as jewelry is concerned.—New York Sun.

BUILT HIS HOUSE AT NIGHT.

Remarkable Energy Displayed by a Laborer Who Was Anxious for a Home.

Edward Pullen is a young engineer and man of family, who for several years has worked in one of the down town factories. He came here from the east several years ago and settled down to work at very moderate wages indeed. For years he paid rent out of his scanty earnings, but nine months ago he determined to try and purchase a home for his little family. It was in carrying out this purpose that he accomplished one of the most amusing and at the same time novel feats probably ever performed in the building line. Mr. Pullen told his story to a reporter who visited him.

He purchased a lot near Newbury, on the Berkeley line, about nine months ago, securing it at a cut price upon the condition that he would build on it a house to cost not less than $1,200. The young engineer paid his first installment of $60 and then looked about for some means of building on his acquisition. His meager salary of $12 a week was scarcely self supporting, but out of it he managed to save $50. He designed roughly the plan of a house to contain a basement, a story of three rooms and a second story of two rooms. A carpenter was hired for $50 to erect a mere skeleton or frame without steps, windows or roof, or in fact anything except the bare walls, and entirely unfloored and unfinished on the inside.

Then commenced Pullen's wonderful exhibition of pluck and patience. He built a temporary kitchen of rough boards close to the frame, put a stove on the bare ground, projected a piece of stovepipe through the roof and set up a habitation there for himself and family.

He works in the city from 6 a. m. to 6 p. m. In the night, after 7 o'clock, by candle light, he labored until morning almost with hammer and saw to make his modest home habitable. Out of his scanty wages he appropriated every possible dollar to the purchase of planks, pipes, nails, windows, doors and other building materials. He laid the floors plank by plank; tacked canvas across the window gaps to keep the chill night winds from his little ones, and took across the bay on his shoulders every picket and plank that now form his home. By degrees the house took form, the windows were placed in position, the glass panes put in, pantries made and pumps erected. The walls and ceilings of the rooms were covered with heavy duck canvas sized with glue and varnished into a resemblance to real plaster. Picket by picket the fences were built, until now young Pullen has nearly completed his heroic task.

All Lorin and Newbury were acquainted with his curious enterprise, and he was often seen on his roof far into the night, hammering away at shingles and erecting chimneys. In the midst of his work the former owner of the property came around and was angry because Pullen had, as he thought, broken his contract as to the erection of a $1,200 house. Pullen paused in driving a picket to calmly answer that he "hadn't got done building yet," and that he thought that by the time the house was finished it would have cost $1,200.

Night after night the young homemaker crossed the ferry with a bundle of pickets or a joint of pipe, and thus, with interludes of a few hours' sleep, nightly he hammers away. Thus far he has expended in all about $250, and he owns by all odds the cheapest house in California.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Some Business Men at Lunch.

There are certain classes of business men who never forget their manners until they put on their hats to go out to lunch. They are the pinks of perfection in their own homes and their politeness to ladies on the way down town is simply excruciating. They never fail to bid their clerks a courteous "good morning," but when they sit down to partake of their midday meal they indulge in practices that would speedily relegate any of their children to the seclusion of their own rooms and a diet of bread and water if they were ever to commit such breaches of etiquette at the home table.

They pour their coffee into their saucers with the air of a street arab, and blow it in order to hurry the cooling process. They plant their elbows on the table, and after a terrible onslaught upon the viands, their knives being prominently brought forward as a means of conveyance, they push back their chair, throw their napkin on the table, secure a toothpick and rush forth to become once again the punctilious and courteous man of business.—Philadelphia Times.

Ready with a Hook.

The following story comes from South Dakota: While a little girl was skating on the Missouri river she fell into an air hole. The swift current swept her quickly under the ice and down the river. One hundred and twelve feet further down she came to an air hole, where a young man who had seen the accident was ready with a grappling hook and fished her out but little the worse for her experience.

The Interviewer at Large.

The ubiquitous interviewer has capped the climax by interviewing the eligible young men of the town as to what they would say and think and feel if some young lady should take advantage of leap year and propose to them. It seems sacrilegious to put such unhallowed thoughts into the innocent minds of young men.—New York Sun.

Dusting Carved Furniture.

A new, soft brush is a good thing to dust carved furniture with, as the bristles will penetrate the deepest crevices.—New York Journal.

Bertha's Wisdom.

Bertha—Grandma, is oor teef good?

Grandma—No, darling; I've got none now unfortunately.

Bertha—Then I'll give oo my nuts to mind till I come back.—Pacific Methodist.

Tantalizing.

She (gazing upward at the old familiar orb)—How provoking it is!

He—Who, what?

"That I can never, never see the other side of that moon."—Boston Herald.

Have you written me yet? If you haven't, wisdom and intelligent ambition suggest write to-day. I promise you my special, personal attention. I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. I charge nothing and receive nothing unless successful, as above. Nothing difficult to learn, or that requires much time. I desire but one person from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number who are making over Three Thousand Dollars a Year, each. All is new, solid, sure. Full particulars free. After you know all, if you conclude to go no further, why, no harm is done. Address, E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.

Telephone Delusions.

Strange as it may seem, says Electricity, there are auditory as well as optical delusions. Every subscriber has two or three girls in his mind whom he considers active and obliging. He has absolutely no means of knowing who they are but he thinks he can tell them by their voices, and gets irritable when they are off duty. As an illustration, not long ago a telephone official had reason to call on a prominent subscriber, who devoted considerable time to dilating on the efficiency of his girl. He lauded her to heights delightful, and had thought of recommending her to a friend for a lucrative position. The case was reported to the manager, who, upon investigation, found that the very knowing but well meaning gentleman was bewitched by the general sweetness of the telephone office voice. The line, being a particularly light one, had no regular operator, and as a general rule no less than ten different girls handled the wire in a day. But he knew "his girl" every time, which speaks well for the vocal system in use for training voices.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured,

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A sense of fullness and other troubles after eating? Then you need a "Pellet." Not one of the ordinary, griping, tearing pills—it's a sickness in itself to take them. But one of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets—the original Liver Pill, the smallest and the easiest to take. The easiest in the way they work, too—they're mild and gentle, but thorough and effective. Every part of the system feels their healthful influence. They cleanse and regulate the liver, stomach and bowels. Regulate, mind you. They prevent disease as well as cure it. They're purely vegetable and perfectly harmless. Sick Headache, Bilious Headache, Constipation, Indigestion, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are promptly relieved and permanently cured.

They're the cheapest pill you can buy, for they're guaranteed to give satisfaction, or your money is returned.

You pay only for the good you get.

This is true only of Dr. Pierce's medicines.

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER I.

We landed at Southampton, September 14, 1885, and a ragged crew we were.

The "Judge," Joe Brace, led the way,—a great gaunt man, with long, long legs, a stoop in his shoulders, and a swaying movement of his body and arms when he walked, as if he had a load on his back and a long way to go; a man with a black fell on the back of his hands, a dark beard growing high upon his cheek bones, and a great bush of iron-gray hair sticking out all round his head, and a forelock sticking down over his eye. One could see nothing of his features but a long red nose and deep-set beady black eyes. His fustian jacket was worn to rags at the elbows,—and so was mine, as for that—split in the seams between the shoulders with the constant strain of the laboring arms. Once upon a time his top-boots had been black, but now they were all the same yellow clay color with the trousers that were tucked into them, and just as badly in need of repair.

I followed with Van Hoeck. He held my arm, not for support, but for guidance, because he was stone blind. He was thirty or thereabouts, I believe; but he looked twenty years older than I, who am now but twenty-six. Though he was Dutch by birth he looked like an Asiatic, being a small, dark Jew, with all the characteristics of his people; while I, with my fair skin, light hair, and large frame, am pretty true in appearance to my Northern race. He was better dressed than any of us, for, though he had accompanied us, and roughed it so far as board and lodging were concerned, he had taken only a financial part in the enterprise, his blindness naturally debarring him from a laborious part. His clothes retained something of their original appearance. Albeit he had worn them day after day for eighteen months at the least; whereas mine, what with exposure to the sun, the sweat of work, rough usage, and the strange devices employed in repairing them, were scarcely recognizable as Christian clothing. His face gave more sign of strain and fatigue than either the Judge's or mine, which might well be, seeing how great a relief to the mind physical labor is. There was a furrow between his brows, deep lines descending from the inner angle of the eyes, a pinched look about the nostrils and fleshless cheeks, that gave a fearful, strenuous eagerness to the weird expression of his face. And that expression was wierd, nay, even repulsive, though his features were not ill-shaped, and it was due chiefly to the peculiarity of his eyes. Most people of dark complexion like his, have a dark iris to the eye; but his of a steely gray, and was the more noticeable because there was the iris and nothing else; there was no pupil,—nothing but that gray patch upon the yellowish ball of the eye. He kept his eyes open when his mind was pre-occupied. Often when he was sitting near me while I worked, I have changed my position that I might not see those ghostly eyes wide open to an African sun, yet unconscious of its glare. There was something terrible in his blindness.

Our rear was brought up by the "Kid." The name by constant use and familiarity had long ceased to be slangy to my ear.

Poor little Lola! she was the raggedest and most disreputable of the lot, though it was not for that reason she walked behind us; indeed, had she suspected that to follow implied inferiority, she would have marched ahead of her own father. That was her character.

The child wore a ragged red flannel petticoat, a camisole that had once been white, and a colored handkerchief tied loosely round her neck. She had a string of colored beads upon her wrist, but neither hat on her head nor shoe on her foot. Her purple black hair grew low down on her temple, and broke into curl over the ears, at the nape of her neck, and wherever it was uncontrolled; it was matted together in a thick, loose plait that fell down to her waist, and tied at the end with a strip of red flannel torn from her petticoat. She had the prettiest little hands and feet, a dark olive skin, a large but beautifully shaped mouth, with the finest teeth I ever seen, and a pair of glorious black eyes, full of audacity, and betraying only too faithfully her wild and ungovernable disposition. Properly dressed (and washed), she might have passed for a Spanish princess; in her present condition there was no mistaking her for anything but the self-willed little savage she was.

The Kid had given us a deal of trouble,—had we foreseen how much, I do not think Van Hoeck or I would have put in that postcript to the agreement which her father, the Judge, induced us to subscribe.

"The Kid has eyes in her head to see with,' the Judge said, in urging her claim upon our future consideration, "end she can use 'em as well as us in lookin' for stones, end likewise, bein' a female, she kin cook our meals for us; she kin wash our shuts, end she kin sew us up, end keep us nice and tidy." Whether she was capable of helping us in these matters, I can not say; all I know is, that she didn't. "What kin you expect?" asked her father in extenuation; "her mother was the darter of a durned greaser, end it ain't the Kid's fault if she's got greaser blood in her."

We came up with the Judge at the dock gates, where he stopped to address a policeman stationed there.

"Kin you tell me, my friend," he said "where the best bank in this town is located?"

I think the policeman's first impression as he regarded us was that we had felonious purpose in asking this question, for he did not reply immediately, and with reluctance directed us to the High Street, and told us to inquire there of some one else.

CHAPTER II.

We marched on to the High Street, our appearance attracting a good deal of attention, and creating some amusement and speculation doubtless. Persons on the opposite side of the road stopped to look across at us, others regarded us askant in passing, and turned around to watch our progress, a few children followed us, thinking maybe that we were about to give some kind of street entertainment.

We found a bank, and streamed in, a small crowd collecting round the door, as it swung to behind the Kid. The clerks suspended their operations, and looked at us in open-mouthed astonishment as we ranged ourselves along the counter.

"Is the manager of this concern in?" asked the Judge. "Hands off," he added, in a roar, as the Kid, slipping her lithe hand under the brasswork protecting the counter, began to finger the scales.

The Kid, unmoved, satisfied her curiosity, then, withdrawing her hand, rested her elbow on the counter, and, dropping her chin in the palm, gazed at the clerks with stolid indifference.

"The manager is in; what do you want?" asked the clerk.

"Let up, Israel," said the Judge, falling back a step, and waving his hand significantly toward Van Hoeck.

"We wish to negotiate a loan on the security of a large diamond that we have brought home from the cape," said Van Hoeck.

"Eight hundred and twenty carats, fust water," added the Judge; the grandest stone in this almighty universe!"

There was a whispered consultation amongst the clerks, and one went into a private room at the back of the bank, from which he presently returned with the manager.

"I am the manager; what do you want?"

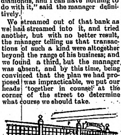
Van Hoeck repeated his statement.

"And what security can you give me that the diamond is genuine," asked the manager with a pleasant smile, "or that it is legitimately yours to dispose of?"

"You will allow, sir, if any one hed lost a stone of this kind he would have made it on safe for us to walk about with it in daylight," replied the Judge, "and as for its bein' genuine, you kin hev the security of your own eyesight."

"I do not profess to be a judge of diamonds, and I can have nothing to do with it," said the manager definitively.

We streamed out of that bank as we had streamed into it, and tried another, but with no better result, the manager telling us that transactions of such a kind were altogether beyond the range of his business; and we found a third, but the manager was absent, and by this time, being convinced that the plan we had proposed was impracticable, we put our heads together in counsel at the corner of the street to determine what course we should take.



"IS THE MANAGER IN"

We were disgusted with Southampton, and, had we possessed the means we should have gone on at once to London, where we might have found some former acquaintance to help us out of our present difficulty. But we had nothing in the world but the things we stood upright in, and the great diamond. For our smaller finds and our implements we had sold at Natal to make up enough to pay our steerage home, and our spare clothes, our knives, every available thing, we had bartered away in our passage for food to supplement the miserably insufficient steerage fare.

"We kin not pawn the Kid," said the Judge, "end that's about the only perkisit as we could well do without."

It was now near upon three o'clock, and we felt the need of food, having eaten nothing since six, when our last rations were served out to us on the Southern Cross. Our position was a desperate one. With millions in our possession, we might starve in the street, or have to take refuge in the workhouse. It was odd, indeed, and very unpleasant also. At length, being unable to see any way out of our difficulty, we made our way to a police station, and laid our case before the inspector.

"Well, my good fellows," said he, having heard us out, "I don't see how I'm to help you. The Mayor is the proper person to go to, but he's away vaciting. The only party I can think of," he added, after a moment's reflection, "who might serve you, is Sir Edmund Lascelles. He's got a kind of museum and buys up curiosities, I know; and a kind old gentleman he is, too. Now, if he's at home—"

We asked him hurriedly where Sir Edmund lived, and he replied that it was out Lymington way—Monken Abbey—eight or nine miles, and any one could tell us the way.

Well, there was nothing better to be done; so we got the director to give us a more definite direction, and then started off in search of the Abbey. The Judge swinging along ahead at a good four miles an hour, the Kid had to trot to keep up with us; but I gave her my hand, and she did not complain,—it was not in her nature to show suffering in the ordinary way.

It must have been about six o'clock when we found the park entrance to Monken Abbey, and there we were stopped by the lodge-keer, who refused to let us pass without permission from Sir Edmund; but when he heard that we had been sent by the inspector of police at Southampton, he sent his wife up to the house to know if the Baronet would see us.

We sat on a bank near the lodge gate for close upon an hour before we learned our fate; for Sir Edmund was at dinner when the message reached the house, and the servants did not choose to deliver it until he had dined. A servant led us through the park to the Abbey, and took us into a beautiful hall, wainscoted with dark oak, and hung with antlers, old armor and other suitable decorations; and here we waited until Sir Edmund Lascelles came to us. Our spirits rose at the first glimpse of the handsome, portly old gentleman. There was benevolence in the little curls of his soft white hair, and the promise of kind treatment in the genial smile with which he greeted us.

"Well," said he cheerfully, "you have something to sell me, have you?"

"Yes," I replied, "if you can buy it; it is a diamond."

"A diamond! Ah, that's a costly kind of curiosity; but I like them, for all that. Have you got it with you?"

"Yes," said I, and turning over my hand, I opened it, showing the leather case strapped to my wrist, which contained the Great Hesper, as we called our diamond. The Baronet was thunder-struck by the prodigious size of the stone, for he could see that the leather fitted it closely.

"You tell me that this is a diamond?" he exclaimed, lifting the case as it lay on my hand.

"We had it tested at Natal," said Van Hoeck; "it is a white diamond, and, if not the first water is certainly of the second; it weighs 820 carats."

"Is it possible? Come with me. Eight hundred and twenty carats?" said Sir Edmund, in great excitement. "Bring a light into the library at once," he called to one of the servants.

We went into the library, where I cut the stitches of the case, took out the Great Hesper, and put it into Sir Edmund's hand, by which time a reading-lamp had been brought in.

"It is true! "It is true!" said he, examining it under the powerful light. "A wonderful stone,—a perfect form,—a prodigy! Come here, Edith; look at this!"

A young lady who had entered the room drew near. It was only by looking at the facet we had cut and polished that she could distinguish that this was a diamond, for it was dull and gray, and looked like a lump of glass that had passed through the fire.

"It is an extraordinary size, is it not, papa?" she asked.

"Extraordinary, indeed! The Koh-i-noor is not a fourth of the size! See what the book says about that; get down Haydn, my dear."

Miss Lascelles fetched the book, while her father still examined the stone, as an artist might a masterpiece, and presently read aloud:

"Its original weight was nearly 800 carats, but it was reduced by the unskillfullness of the artist—Borghese, a Venetian—to 279 carats; its shape and size resembled the pointed half-rose cut of a small hen's egg; the value is scarcely computable, though two millions sterling have been mentioned as a justifiable price, if calculated by the scale employed by the trade. This diamond was re-cut in 1852, and now weighs 102 1-2 carats.

"Good, good!" cried the Baronet. "With skillful cutting, a diamond of such a form as this need not loose 100 carats. Heavens! he exclaimed, turning to us, "you have the greatest treasure in the world."

"Give me your hand, Thorne; hold me," said Van Hoeck in a low voice, and speaking thickly.

I turned quickly, and caught him as he reeled forward; for he had fainted, either from the want of food, from intense excitement, or both.

AN INDIAN JAILOR.

The Faithfulness of His Reports to His Superiors.

Surrounding the jail, writes a traveler on India, was a large guard consisting of a native jailer, a number of deputies and a few paid wardens, all armed with muskets and amply provided with ammunition, most of it was so old and damp that it could not be utilized in case of an emergency. The posse was commanded and drilled by a handsome old pensioned subahdar (native officer). This old gentleman wore a collar of large gold beads round his neck, and over his dress of spotless white an embroidered sword belt supported a native sword in a green and gold scabbard. He was a very striking looking old man, and had strict notions of discipline and duty. His father had been at Plassy with Clive.

It was part of this officer's duty to make his morning report at the magistrate's house if the magistrate had not time to go to the jail on his morning round. His usual report was brief and emphatic.

"My lord, the jail is all well."

One morning he continued it thus:

"Be it known to our lordship that the jail cat has had five kittens. Will your lordship order that the cat have an extra ration of milk?"

This he said in the gravest voice, with his hand still at his forehead in military salute. When the order was given for the cat's extra ration he marched off without the shadow of a smile on his face, while the magistrate remained almost convulsed with suppressed laughter.

The Rainy Weather Dress'

The rainy weather gown has materialized, and stands justly among the great inventions of the age. In the intellectual air of erudite Boston the germinal idea was evolved from the nebula of the indefinite, and above the classic mud of Boston's tortuous streets its wearer proudly propelled it through one of last week's heavy rains, mudless and unspotted to the end of the trip. It is made of green and tan repellant cloth, with a kilted skirt fastened to a short waisted bodice, and is worn over trousers of green cloth, gathered about the knee on an elastic band.

Leggings of the same material as the dress are buttoned over the boots and meet the trousers at the knee. The hat is made of two shades of repellent cloth, and trimmed with dark-green feathers and tan-colored gimp.

Mrs. Ingersoll, the wearer of the gown, reported that the abbreviated skirts attracted less attention than she expected, and said that the women seemed more curious than the men, and turned to take a second look, saying, "Why that isn't so very bad," with a very strong accent on the "that."—N. PECULIAR EYES.

Curious Affliction of an English Gentleman Described by Himself.

I labor under the peculiar inconvenience of having a right eye of normal power and a short-sighted left eye, says James Shaw in Nature. The numerals on the face of a clock five-eighths of an inch high are visible to the right eye at twelve feet distant, but in order to discern them as clearly with my left eye, I require to bring that organ of vision as near to the figures as eight inches. On looking at my gold chain hanging on my breast in daylight, with both eyes, the chain, colored yellow and toward the left, is perceived by the right eye, while a steely-blue chain, another yet the same, is perceived about an inch to the right and a little higher up. By artificial light the same phenomenon presents itself, but the difference in color is not so apparent; the yellow to the right is only dimmer. Again, when a page of Nature is being read with the short sighted eye there appears, about an inch to the left, part of the same column small, and the black under artificial light, like weak purple. The right-hand side of this ghost-like column is lost to the right eye, being commingled with the larger, dark letters seen by the short-sighted left, which cover it like the more recent writing on a palimpsest. Middle life was reached before the discovery was made. These experiences must be gone through with intent, for objects generally being perceived altogether with the right eye, all that the left seems good for is to supply a little more light. The perception of the difference of color is as good with the one eye as with the other, and the short-sighted eyes can read smaller type.

As the inferior animals so far as I know, have no habit of peeping or looking with one eye shut and the other opened, it occurred to me that this ability might be a limited one. I tried the experiment with school children and to my surprise found that a few were quite unable to keep one eye shut and the other open at the same time and a few did it with an effort, making in all about one-fourth of the number. Adults were likewise under similar limits but to a less extent. This may be the reason why the discovery of inequality of vision, as Sir John Herschel remarks, is often made late in life. Indeed, he mentions an elderly person who made the unpleasant discovery that he was altogether blind of an eye.

RULES FOR DRINKING HEALTH.

Picture of Dutch Life Two Centuries and a Half Ago.

We give the rules about drinking healths as it is among the Burgers so that no mistakes may be made:

"1. Offer your friends before going to table a glass of red wine, as that is good for the digestion and is a pleasant way of welcoming them.

"2. With the first glass the host must wish his guests an appetizing meal. His friends must answer with a glass and wish the same to each other also.

"3. If the company consists of only ten or twelve people one can drink their health in turn, but it is useless to do it all at once, as all may not have such thirst at the same time. When you wish to drink, ask for a glass of wine of the man or maid who is serving.

"4. If the company is large and there are perhaps thirty at the table, it would be useless to drink everyone's health separately, as one would then take more wine than one cares to drink. If you please, you may include two, four or six in one salutation of your glass, beginning with those farthest off and then continuing, first on the right hand and then on the left.

"5. The dispute still exists as to the propriety of kissing the lady who sits next you as you drink her health, or thanking her with a kiss when she drinks yours. Still more unmannerly is it to leave your chair to kiss the young ladies who sit at a distance from you. It is not proper to kiss a lady without washing your lips, and besides it creates confusion at the table.

"6. It is not well to insist upon anyone's finishing his glass each time, as that would do away with the freedom of your guests, but it is quite proper to ask the lady next you if you may fill her glass from time to time."

GAMBLING RULES.

In New Orleans Even the Children Play Five Cent Policy.

The extent to which the Louisiana lottery has fostered the gambling spirit in that and other States is well illustrated by a statement which appears in the New Delta. Twenty-five cent policy shops, where the "heads of families can squander their earnings and servants can invest the money filched from the market baskets of their employers," have long existed in New Orleans, and have proved enormously vicious in their results. It is now stated by the New Delta that five-cent gambling shops have been established, which are absorbing the pennies of children and inculcating the gambling spirit generally among the youth of the city.

A reporter who visited one of these shops found children of from 10 to 15 years of age thronging about the counters and buying tickets. The New Delta vigorously rebukes the prevalence of these shops, which it characterizes as hell-holes into which babies are inveigled for the purposes of robbery. Of course this evil is directly the consequence of the State lottery and its dishonest practices, and no cure can be expected until this organized evil is extirpated.—Frank Leslie's Weekly.

Miss Letty Huntley

Is the sister of Mr. W. S. Huntley of Cortland, N. Y., a well known carpenter and builder. Her frank statement below gives only the absolute truth concerning her illness and marvelous recovery by the aid of Hood's Sarsaparilla. She says:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"Dear Sir: Twelve years ago I began to have hemorrhages and four years ago became so low that the physicians told me

There Was No Hope

and I should soon die. I could not be moved from my bed. Under my face were napkins continually reddened with blood from my mouth. I could eat nothing and had no action of the bowels for a week. The doctors said the cause was ulcers in the stomach. At this time my mother said she wanted to make one more trial, and asked if I would take Hood's Sarsaparilla. I told her it would be

but finding it would comfort her, I began taking it. In a few days the bloating began to subside. I seemed to feel a little stronger, but thought it only fancy. I was so weak I could only take ten drops of Sarsaparilla at first. In two weeks I was able to sit up a few minutes every day. In a month I could walk across the room. One day I asked what they were to have for dinner, and said I wanted something hearty. My mother was so happy she cried. It was the

First Time I Had Felt Hungry for Two Years

I kept on with Hood's Sarsaparilla and in six months was as well as ever in my life. It is now four years since I recovered, and I have not had a day's sickness since, nor any hemorrhage. If ever a human being thanked the good Lord on bended knees it was I. I know that Hood's Sarsaparilla, and that alone, unquestionably Saved my Life."

AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

THE postoffice building bill passes the senate.

THE river and harbor bill will probably appropriate $500,000 for a deep water channel between the great lakes.

A RUMOR comes from Valaparaiso that Mr. Egan will resign, but this is denied in Washington.

THE house committee on territories has finished the consideration of the Arizona statehood bill and has decided to report it favorably to the house in amended form.

THE revenue cutters Corwin, Bear, Rush and Albatross, now at San Faancisco, have been ordered to police Behring sea during the coming season in conjunction with United States men-of-war.

SECRETARY ELKINS has issued a general order for the establishment at Ft. Riley, Kan., of a school of instruction for drill and practice for cavalry and light artillery.

IT is said at the state department that the Franco-American treaty, signed at Paris by President Carnot is for a limited commercial reciprocity, the details of which are as yet unknown at the department, it having been almost solely negotiated by United States Minister Reid.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Mrs. Nevins-Blaine decides not to publish her ex-husbands love letters.

Prof. Steenberg, the eminent specialist in mental diseases, died in Copenhagen recently.

MAX STRAKOSCH, the famous musical composer, died in New York recently of paralysis.

IN the cathedral at Agram, Austria, Bishop Gasparitzch was stricken with paralysis during the services. There is no hope of his recovery.

MRS. MARGARET E. DAYTON, widow of the late William E. Dayton, who was on the Republican presidential ticket of Fremont and Dayton, died at Trenton, N. Y. at the age of eighty-one years.

Nicholas Crouch, the author of "Kathleen Mavourneen" and other popular and famous songs, is dying at his home in Baltimore. He is eighty-four years of age. His mind occasionally wanders and he hums the old songs.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Many buildings were burned at Danbury, Conn. The loss is about $100,000.

The mills and elevators of the Sergeant Milling company at Joplin, Mo., have been burned. Loss, $150,000; insurance, $25,000.

The damage caused by floods in the South is more extensive than was at first supposed. On almost every railway traffic is interrupted, many towns being isolated.

In St. Louis, Henry Keiser, Frank Conn and Hugh Duffy were instantly killed in Rohan Bros.' boiler shop by being caught under an elevator. Two boys were dangerously hurt.

The Spanish steamer Navarro, from Boston, Feb. 17, for London, had on board fourteen cattlemen who one night went to bed in the forecastle after having lighted a fire in the stove. The next morning seven were discovered to have been suffocated.

SINS AND SINNERS.

A FIFTEEN-YEAR-OLD colored girl is lynched in Louisiana for poisoning nine persons.

A MEXICAN mine manager is robbed of $10,000 by bandits, who kill one of the guards and wound another.

J. MESSIGLIA and his ten-year-old son were murdered by unknown parties in their store at Yazoo, Miss.

JAMES TAYLOR, a ranchman from Taylorville, Cal., was arrested in New York charged with robbing his bride of $800 and deserting her at Niagara Falls.

BURNETT LEWIS, a Boston bookseller, has been arrested on the charge of selling obscene literature. Boccacio's "Decameron" is the book he sold.

DR. JAMES A. DURHAM, a Baptist missionary, has been found guilty of heresy by a council of ministers at Benton, Ill., because he is a convert to the doctrine of sanctification, or "sinless perfection."

EDWARD MCKEOWN, dry goods merchant of Toronto, who recently made an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, has been arrested on a charge of embezzlement, preferred by Montreal creditors, and taken to that city.

AN Italian fisherman, S. Camilla, had a quarrel with a fellow fisherman named Ciccrillo, who belonged to the Mafia. Camilla shot Ciccrillo, at their place on Roe island, in Sacramento river, and then coolly towed the body down to the coroner of Benicia, who paid him $5 for the body and took his deposition in regard to finding it.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

A REVOLT in the province of Catamarca, Argentine Republic is reported.

A RECEIVER is appointed for Murietta & Co., the London bankers.

POPE LEO writes a letter approving the world's fair project.

MARQUIS DE MORES, the ex-rancher of Dakota, fights a duel in France, injuring his adversary.

A NEW cabinet has been formed in Chile, with Juan Castellon as minister of foreign affairs.

IN the parliamentary election in the Kirkaldy district, Englandi, Daizell, the Gladstonian candidate, won.

THE death rate at Rio Janeiro is over thirty a day. The stories about hospital treatment in Santos are terrible.

GREAT distress prevails among the working classes in Lisbon, and the situation grows worse daily.

THE legislature of New South Wales has approved a bill of settlement of labor disputes by courts of arbitration.

COAL shipments from the Tyne are at a stand-still in consequence of the miners' holiday. Forty coal steamers are lying at the docks there unable to get cargoes.

The turbulent condition of political affairs at Quito, the capital of Ecuador, has culminated in a riotous demonstration in which the German charge d'affaires, A. Hermann, was set upon by a mob and seriously injured.

THE Portuguese government has authorized the Bank of Portugal to increase its note circulation to $60,000,000, more than four times the amount of the bank's capital. The present note circulation amounts to $41,700,000.

PATRICK O'BRIEN, Parnellite member for North Monaghan, introduced a bill in parliament to amend the Catholic relief act in order to remove the disabilities of Catholics in England and Ireland imposed by the act.

IN the French chamber of deputies, M. Picard, minister of justice and public worship, introduced a bill introducing a clause in the penal code making the wilful destruction of property by means of explosives punishable with death.

The Rio News says: According to private accounts from Santos the situation in that city has become indescriable. The authorities are clearly incompetent to grapple with the epidemic there, and the assistance from private sources is totally inadequate.

The Pacific steamer Colina, which left San Francisco February 18, went ashore in a fog near La Union, San Salvador, on the west coast of the Gulf of Fonesca. She is a screw steamer of 2,144 tons, and is commanded by Capt. Austin. No loss of life has been reported.

A band of twenty armed men made an attempt to raid Almogro, a city of New Castile. The gendarmes were on the alert, however, and in a short time they hurried to the scene of the trouble and attacked the raiders. The latter fled, and, so far as known, have not been captured, but the gendarmes are in hot pursuit.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

THE Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company gets control of the Richmond Terminal property.

THE Iowa senate has passed a bill compelling all railway companies to use union depots in cities where two or more railroads enter.

The governor of New York has nominated Alfred C. Chapin, ex-mayor of Brooklyn and now a member of congress, as railroad commissioner in place of Isaac Baker. The latter is a Republican. The nomination was confirmed by the senate.

INFORMATION has been received at Kansas City to the effect that the Burlington has determined to complete its line from Bogan to a point on the Hannibal & St. Joe north of Liberty, a distance of sixty miles, at once. This will give the Burlington fifty miles the shortest line to Chicago.

LABOR CIRCLE.

A LARGE portion of the striking English miners decide to resume work.

THE conductors and trainmen on the Western division of the Canadian Pacific begin their strike.

THE prospect is fairly good for a general strike among the wage earners of Chicago this spring. Meetings are being held nightly. A big demonstration has already been planned for May 1. And each day sees arrive from the East a number of agitators, each with a plan for the uplifting of the down-trodden working man. The men are much better organized than at the time of the strikers of last year.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

The New York's uniform will be of Yale gray, with black stockings, caps, belts and trimmings.

President Byrne says Tom Daly got $5,000 a year for two years, was disabled all last season, and ought now to be satisfied with a reasonable salary.

LOUIS ROGERS BROWNING is going to Hot Springs. The gladiator still declares that he wants $3,000 in good coin. He will get it when Apollinaris is made the national drink in Kentucky.

CUB STRICKER will be in demand before the season is far advanced. As an infielder and a base runner he has no superior in the position and a more earnest player for the side does not exist.

SOME of the players now relegated to the rear will be in demand in the big league before June, because the season will bring with it the inevitable crop of failures, accidents and breakdowns. So even players without engagements would do well to keep themselves in condition all the time to accept immediately a call.

ANSON is the only player who has been a member of a National League club through each of its 16 years of existence. In this time he played in 1,582 games, went 6,941 times to bat, made 2,252 base hits, besides some more which the scorers robbed him of, and secured a general batting average of 344 per cent.

D. M. Kelleher, one of the oldest citizens of Jamestown died of pneumonia. He kept the first hotel at Jamestown and was widely known in the Northwest. He was for many years a leading Democratic politician in the territory.

Mrs. Lokken and Torgen Thompson, a boy, who lives twenty miles east of Willow City, lost their way during the storm Thursday and wandered about until they became exhausted and lay down. The woman died. The boy woke after the storm and made his way to the nearest house, but he was so badly frozen that he will die.

A telegram from Hillsboro says 16,934 acres of school lands have been sold for $345,707, being average an of $1.42 per acre. The bidding was very spirited, most of the purchasers being adjoining farmers. A telegram from Wahpetod says the average price there was $18.78, the highest price paid being $38 per acre.

Attorney Taylor Crum, of Fargo, applied to Judge McConnell to grant a new trial in the case of A. C. Cantleny, recently convicted of illegally selling liquors. He claimed that the jurymen made statements before the trial showing that they were prejudiced and believed the defendant guilty. There are now 8 or 10 awaiting sentences on liquor cases, and the sentences will probably be passed this week.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Surveyor General Sullivan is charged with selling contracts.

T. O'Brien, general merchant of Montrose, has failed. His stock will probably invoice $2,500; liabilities considerably larger.

He arrested a negro named Jack Powell at that place, on the charge of ravishing and murdering a white woman in Georgia, and having jailed his prisoner has disappeared. The negro protests his innocence and says he will sue the corporation for false imprisonment.

DEATH IN FLAMES

Five Children Perish in a Dwelling House Fire Near Springfield, Minn.

The Father Escapes, but Is Seriously Burned, and His Recovery Is Doubtful.

SPRINGFIELD, Minn., Special, March 22.—A sad casualty occurred last night seven miles south of this village. The house of John Tahey took fire when the family were sleeping and was consumed, and this morning five corpses lay among the ruins. These were the children of Mr. Tahey, one boy and four girls, two of whom were nearly grown to maturity. Mr. Lahey is badly burned and his recovery is doubtful.

The cause of the fire is a mystery, as the members of the family who escaped say there was no fire in the house when the family went to bed.

THE SILVER VOTE.

The Majority for the Bland Bill Estimated From 17 to 40.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, March, 22.—Ike Hill, the Democratic whip of the house, says that free silver will pass the house by a majority of 17, but he has evidently given the silver men the lowest possible estimate because other men who are looking into the situation believe the majority will be 40. There will be about a dozen Republican votes for the bill. It is expected that the anti-silver Democrats will to-morrow begin a series of filibustering motions, and if possible will defeat the consideration of the bill at this time, but as they were powerless in the grasp of the speaker before it is more than probable that they will be unable to accomplish anything, and that the bill will go through without very much trouble.

The Democratic party is placed where it has to squirm, and it is now wriggling to get out of the position which will certainly carry it to defeat at the election this fall. The Republicans in the present house will not all vote against the free coinage bill when it comes up for consideration. A very few of them will vote with the free silverites, some of them from the silver states and some from the states where the Farmers' Alliance has such a hold as to scare them into voting for cheap money, but the large majority of the Republicans and the party as a whole will be against the free coinage bill. In fact enough Republicans will be against it to determine the policy of the party on that question as it determined it in the last congress.

PROSPECTS IN THE SENATE.

The senate will pass the free coinage bill. There will not be as many Democrats in favor of free coinage as there was in the last congress, but there will certainly be enough to pass the bill. Among the Republicans there may be counted two from Montana, one and perhaps two from Washington, one from Oregon, two from Idaho, two from California, two from Colorado, two from Nevada, one from Kansas, one Farmers' Alliance from Kansas and one Farmers' Alliance from South Dakota, the latter two succeeding Republicans in the last senate, one of whom was in favor and the other against free coinage. There is also reason to believe that Nebraska will cast two votes for free coinage; she did in the last congress. Some of these men may change their minds and deem it expedient at the present time to oppose the free coinage bill. They may hold that the present silver law goes far enough toward free coinage and gives the people all the money they want without going to the extremity of driving gold out of the country.

There may be a half-dozen or even a dozen Democrats who will vote against free coinage, but it is hard to find out who they are. Vilas of Wisconsin, Palmer of Illinois, Carlisle of Kentucky, Gray of Delaware, McPherson and Blodgett of New Jersey will in all probability vote against the free coinage measure. Nobody knows what Hill and Gorman will do. Republicans believe that President Harrison will write a message vetoing the bill which will make him a sure winner in the next election. Some Republicans and many Democrats intimate that the president will hesitate in this matter and will be in doubt as to what he should do with such a bill as that which Bland and his fellow inflationists propose to send to him. Those who know the president best have no hesitancy in saying that he will make a firm stand for honest money and will quickly decide to send back a ringing message vetoing the bill.

HARRIES' QUANDARY.

Representative Harries, of the First Minnesota district, is in considerable of a quandary over the free coinage matter. He was asked to-day what he intended to do regarding the instructions of the First district Minnesota Democratic convention, which told him to oppose free coinage. He said he was going to wait until he received these instructions, but he even then indicated that he would still vote for the free coinage bill when it comes up. It seems when Mr. Harries was nominated and the Democrats of the First district were endeavoring to secure the support of the Farmer's Alliance party, the managers of that party in the district, including all factions, were willing to make any kind of promise to secure the Alliance support, and that promises were made to the Alliance convention and managers that Capt. Harries would support free coinage. In one of the first speeches the captain made at Preston he took a stand in favor of free coinage, and now he feels it will be impossible for him to go back on the position he took then, as the conditions have not materially changed. He said very emphatically he would either stand by the promises made or go home and quit congress. He did not care enough about remaining in congress to go back on any promises he made the people during the campaign. Doran and Kelly may decide to defeat him on this question, but they will not be able to bulldoze him into supporting the Cleveland programme in the present house.

Both Castle and Hall will air their views on the question of free coinage, and endeavor to convince the Democracy of the United States that Minnesota is not tinged with the cheap money craze.

ONE MINISTER OUT.

Emperor William Accepts the Resignation of Count Von Zedlitz.

BERLIN, March 22.—The emperor has accepted the resignation of Count von Zedlitz, minister of education and religion. The Kreuz Zeitung says that Chancellor Von Caprivi's prolonged retention in office is impossible. Once the crisis is over he must resign, as he has lost the confidence of parliament. Chancellor von Caprivi, who was yesterday summoned by Emperor William to a conference at Rubertustock, returned to Berlin last night. The chancellor waited upon Dr. Von Boetticher, vice president of the Prussian council of ministers, and conferred with him on the ministerial crisis. The date of the emperor's return is uncertain. It is reported that the condition of his health necessitates on his part a complete abstention from public business. A report was started to-day that Chancellor Von Caprivi had resigned the presidency of the Prussian council of ministers, but that he would retain the chancellorship. It can be said, with no fear of a denial from any quarter, that the originators of this report knew nothing of the facts of the case, and that their statements are based purely on conjecture.

NO LONGER A TRUST.

Standard Oil People Vote to Dissolve the Combine.

NEW YORK, March 22.—At a meeting held by holders of Standard Oil Trust certificates to-day, a resolution to terminate the agreement forming the trust was voted upon and adopted by a large majority, over two-thirds of the certificates being voted in favor of the dissolution. Over 200 holders of certificates were present. John D. Rockefeller was chosen chairman of the meeting, and D. Archbold secretary. The following resolutions were adopted:

That the agreement dated Jan. 2, A. D. 1882, commonly known as "the Standard Oil trust agreement and the supplement thereto, dated Jan. 14, 1882, are hereby terminated this 12th day of March, 1892, and, further, that the affairs of the trust be wound up by John D. Rockefeller, Henry M. Flagler, William Rockefeller, John D. Archbold, Benjamin Brewster, Henry H. Rogers, Wesley H. Tilford and O. B. Jennings and the survivor or survivors of them in the following manner:

All property held by said trust, except stocks of corporations, shall be sold by said trustees at private sale, and the prices thereof, together with any money belonging to the trust, shall be distributed to the owners of trust certificates according to their respective interest, it being the intent and meaning of this resolution that the equitable interests in said stocks represented by trust certificates may thus in demand be converted into legal interests represented by assignments and transfers of said stocks by said trustees to the parties entitled thereto, which transfers and assignments may be entered on the books of the several corporations upon the demand of the holders of such assignments, thereby merging or converting equitable ownership into legal ownership in said stocks.

TSUI, ETC., OBJECTS.

The Chinese Minister Not Pleased With Our Treatment of His Countrymen.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—Tsui Kwo Gin, the Chinese minister, has prepared a letter to the secretary of state urging an early response to the various communications that the Chinese government has sent to this government with reference to the restriction of Chinese immigration. A reply will be made in a few days. The minister says in an interview:

Ever since I have been in this country I have been endeavoring to secure better treatment for my people at the hands of the United States. To this end I have forwarded a number of letters to the state department stating our position in the matter, but as yet I have received no satisfactory answer. For the United States to agree to a treaty providing for the admission of Chinese and then to override it by an act of congress is hardly acting in good faith. One side has all to say and the other side is not considered at all. Your treatment of the Chinese is inconsistent with the constitution and the principles laid down by George Washington.

Being asked if China would exclude Americans if the United States further restricts Chinese immigration, the minister replied: "It seems to me that Americans should consider the situation and withdraw from China of their own free will."

"Lucky" Baldwin's Daughter Elopes.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 22.—The announcement was made to-day that Anita Baldwin, the only daughter of "Lucky" Baldwin, the well known California millionaire, had eloped with her cousin, George Baldwin. The latter came here five years ago from Crawfordsville, Ind., and since than has been employed at the Baldwin hotel in this city. He is twenty-five years of age, while the young woman is but eighteen. It transpires they were married Jan. 5 secretly, and that having failed subsequently to obtain the millionaire's consent to a proposed prospective union, they took advantage of his absence, he being now at his Santa Anita ranch in the southern part of the state, to start forward on a bridal trip.

Judges Will Go to Jail.

KANSAS CITY, March 22.—Many years ago the counties of St. Clair and Casse, Mo., voted $1,750,000 bonds for the Tebo & Nosho railroad. The road was never built but the bonds got into the hands of innocent parties. The counties have been ordered to levy a tax for the payment of the bonds, but as the sentiment is overwhelmingly against it various county court judges have refused to sign the tax order and have been sent to jail for contempt. Two more judges are now in contempt and will be sentenced next Monday.

Laid Over for a Year.

OTTAWA, March 22.—A lively debate rose in the house to-day on W. George Taylor's act to prohibit the importation and migration of foreigners and aliens under contract or agreement to perform labor in Canada. The United States, Mr. Taylor said, were enforcing their bill and Canada must do the same. It was finally agreed that debate should be adjourned, which practically shelves the measure for another year.

Caught in South Dakota.

WOONSOCKET, S. D., Special Telegram, March 22.—Warren and Ed Major, who robbed the McGrew, Pa, postoffice and attempted to kill the postmaster Feb. 3, were caught here near their rendezvous with a relative by Sheriff Payne yesterday. Two deputy sheriffs are on the way from Pennsylvania, and will start back to-morrow.

Passed Away.

OSSEO, Wis., Special Telegram, March 22.—John D. Pace, a well-to-do resident of Mondovi, died to-day of heart failure. He received a pension of $2,000 the Saturday before he died.

Eaten by Ants.

TOMBSTONE, Ariz., March 22.—Recently a band of Mexican horse thieves captured Henry Withers, who shot three of their party. Death was his sentence; but shooting was too easy a death. First he was taken to the hot sand beds and left naked for six hours. Then he was carried to a cactus bush and was laid on the sharp points for a few hours. Finally he was securely bound and taken to a large ant hill, and left to his fate. The insects swarmed over Withers' body, and within two hours he was dead from their bites.

HER HEALTH GONE.

Countess Zborowski Forced to Take to Her Bed in Chicago.

CHICAGO, March 22.—The divorced wife of Baron de Steur, minister to France from the Netherlands, arrived to-day with her husband, Count Zborowski. So completely is she broken down in health as a result of the suspense in which the trial has held her that it was with difficulty that she reached her room from the carriage which brought her from the station. Her departure from Sioux Falls was intended to take place the day following the announcement of Judge Aiken's decision in the famous case given two weeks ago, but she was too ill to undertake the trip. She was at once placed in bed at the Palmer and a physician hastily summoned. It is not thought that her illness is serious, but it will at least be many days before she can leave Chicago. The count was so alarmed at his wife's illness that he would not leave her bedside even in answer to inquiries regarding the baron's alleged intentions to have the decree set aside and the statements that the decree is not worth, in Europe, the paper on which it is written, because upon her first marriage she became a Dutch citizen, and the Dutch courts alone could dissolve the bond.

CUTTING RATES.

East-Bound Freight Tariffs Being Shaded by Some Lines.

CHICAGO, March 22.—Rumors of cut rates on east-bound freight were flying thick to-day. This was especially the case after the statement of east-bound shipments for last week was given out, showing that some of the strong lines fell behind their weaker competitors in the amount of business handled. The Wabash, for example, carried nearly 4,000 tons more freight than the Lake Shore, while the Chicago & Erie did not fall 1,000 tons behind the Wabash. There are a number of railroad officials who do not hesitate to pronounce this almost conclusive evidence that rates are being cut, and lines that are supposed to be especially guilty in this respect are the Wabash, the Nickel Plate, the Hoosac Tunnel route and the Lehigh Valley. One shipper made the statement to-day that there is a cut of not less than 12 cents per 100 pounds on grain from the Mississippi river to the Atlantic seaboard, but railway men generally think this must be an exaggeration. It is said that the flour rate is also being shaded.

THEY WERE INSANE.

So the Defendants in the Siebolt Lynching Case Are Declared.

DARLINGTON, Wis., March 22.—The jury in the Siebolt lynching case returned a verdict to-night, finding at the time of the lynching all of the defendants were insane and therefore not guilty as charged, and that Alonzo Taylor, John E. Meighan and Hezekiah Andrews have not recovered. They will probably be sent to the Mendota hospital to-morrow. The others were discharged.

He Hid His Face.

MANKATO, Minn., Special Telegram, March 22.—Examination in the killing of Chris Thorstad at Butternut Valley began here to-day before Judge Porter and hundreds of people. Until Thomas Rowland took the stand the evidence was the same as in Anderson's examination several weeks ago. Rowland created a sensation by stating that on the night of Thorstad's death the witness saw Wilson make a movement with his foot toward Thorstad and that Wilson's foot touched Thorstad. It was a strong, quick movement. Thorstad immediately fell to the floor and never spoke again. When this evidence was given Wilson hung his head and covered his face with his hands. The examination was continued until to-morrow.

After the Saloons.

MUSCATINE, Iowa, March 22.—John Mahan, editor of the Muscatine Journal, associated with six other citizens, begun suits by injunction to-day against twenty saloons in this city. It is supposed this method has been taken to have its effect upon the Gatch bill, which comes up in the house to-morrow. The saloons here have been paying a $300 tax and closing at 11 p. m. and on Sundays. License men say that the only result of the suits will be to deprive the city of $12,000 revenue and inaugurate the reign of free whisky.

Telegraph Company Beaten.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Special Telegram, March 22.—A suit which may have far-reaching results in this section was decided to-day by Judge Parliamen, of the county court. Attorney Joe Kirby sued the Western Union Telegraph company for $50 damages for refusal to send a message written upon common paper and left for transmission at Egan, S. D. There were three counts. On each $50 was allowed.

Troublesome Indians Held.

CHICAGO, March 22.—Short Bull, Kicking Bear and the rest of the Indians who have been to Europe with Buffalo Bill, reached here yesterday in charge of a squad of United States soldiers. They were taken at once to Fort Sheridan, where the two named will be kept for some time, as it is feared they would again start the ghost dances were they allowed to return to their reservations.

Indian Agency Frauds.

CHAMBERLAIN, S. D., Special Telegram, March 22.—For the past two weeks Indian Inspector Cissney has been investigating charges of irregularities and fraud against the Indian agent at Crow Creek agency and his son, who is issue clerk. The charges are important and if substantiated will certainly result in several vacancies at least.

Clothiers Assign.

BRAINERD, Minn., Special Telegram, March 22.—George N. Day, a leading clothing dealer, made an assignment to-day for the benefit of his creditors to H. J. Spencer, cashier of the First National bank. The heaviest creditor is Whitten, Burdette & Young, Boston. The liabilities have not yet been made public.

Died of Drinking in Maine.

BANGOR, Me., March 22.—G. E. Norton, aged about forty-five, in the real estate and banking business at Salem, S. D., died suddenly to-day at the Windsor hotel from excessive drinking.

A Catholic Church Destroyed.

GLENCOE, Minn., Special Telegram, March 22.—The St. George Catholic church burned this evening. Loss, $20,000; insurance, $10,000.

An Unlucky Number.

HELENA, Mont., Special Telegram, March 22.—The Great Falls & Canada is the defendant in thirteen suits brought in the United States court here to-day. The company is charged with importing thirteen laborers under contract from Lethbridge, Can., to work on the line of the road. Judgment against the company of $1,000 on each suit is asked.

By an explosion in the Laclede fire brick works in St. Louis yesterday, Joseph Beckley, John Dubuchy, Reinold Deidecke and Larry Hussy were killed. Frank Secer and George Inman fatally injured and two others badly hurt.

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 64 cents.

John Alderman, of Crookston, was in town to-day on business.

A crew of railroad carpenters are here this week fixing the turntable.

Business has been light the past week owing to the poor roads,

If you want to insure your buildings against fire, call at this office.

John Rime, of Otter Tail county, is here this week and is figuring on starting a butcher shop here.

Miss Nellie McAvoy went down to Crookston last Monday to spend several days with friends.

School will close for the spring vacation next Friday, It will not re-convene until May.

A couple of parties were in town last week looking over the town with a view to starting a Jewelry store,

The roads are getting in bad shape but will be worse as soon as the frost goes out of the ground.

Holmes, Bros. are the agents for the celebrated Moline Organ, Call at their store and look over the sample.

The weather has been considerable milder this week and it looks now as if we might have spring in a short time.

C. E. Lewis, representing Powers Dry Goods Co. of St, Paul, was in town a couple of days this week selling dry goods.

Emil Holmes is improving rapidly and expects to be able to return home in a couple of weeks, He has had a hard siege,

Farm machinery seems to sell well this spring and a large number of drills and seeders are being sold by our machine firms.

Edward Russell, of Stephen, agent for the New York Life Insurance Company, is in town this week in the interest of that company.

Miss May Morgan has finished her term of school east of here and left last Monday for Crookston, She has engaged to teach a school near there the coming summer.

One of our prominent Irishmen "who was born in Sweden" made quite a mistake last week when he celebrated in honor of "St. Jacob's Day." For further particulars call on C. A. Brink.

Wheat has been steadily declining in price the past week and is now several cents lower than at any other time on this crop, It is now worth 64 cents for No 1 hard here.

It will take at least two weeks of the best kind of weather before farmers can commence their spring work, and it may be considerable longer. On the whole we may safely say that we will not have an early spring.

Fred Eickhoff, since he has gone out of the carpenter business, is having considerable trouble taking care of his tools Some turn up in mysterious places while others fail to turn up at all. Better get some one to look after them for you, Fred.

The school entertainment next Friday evening promises to be an enjoyable affair. The children have been working hard to make it asuccess, and they should have the support of all. The proceeds go to start a school library which is badly needed. Let every one turn out and make the entertainment a success.

Mike Jeffers has secured his pension and this week was in receipt of $190, The next payment will be $35, after which he will receive a permanent pension of $12, monthly. This is considerable help for Mike and we would not care if he got twice as much. The pension was delayed but we hope he will live long to enjoy the donation from Uncle Sam.—Red Lake Falls News.

Hicks, the St. Louis weather prophet foretold a month in advance that the great blizzard of last week would materalize the day it swept over the country. He now boldly asserts that those persons who rely on cistern water for culinary and ablution purposes, will do well to garner up every drop of rain water that falls during the present and following month. His prediction is that the coming summer will be very dry one, and that crops and cattle will suffer and many localities will be sadly inconvenienced by drought.—Ex.

Every day's session of Congress costs the country about $8,000 in salaries and expenses. Two-thirds of one day's session was recently spent in cutting down West Point appropriations $1,200. Nearly one-third of another day's session effected a reduction of $800 in District of Columbia expenses. Spending $1,000 to save $200. These great economies come high, to be sure, but we have to have them.—St. Paul News.

VETERINARY SURGEON.

O. J. Rudh, Veterinary Surgeon and Dentist, will be here March 28th to remain one week, Parties who desire any work in that line will do well to see Mr, Rudh as he is an experianced man and has a complete set of the latest improved instruments.

Conductor Connelly had the misfortune last Friday to have his right hand badly mashed while coupling cars in the Crookston yard. He has a painful wound which will lay him up for several weeks. On Monday Brakeman Ross of the same crew, while setting a brake slipped and fell off the car sustaining a severe injury to the spine. The St. Hilaire crew seems to be in hard luck lately.

All of the above will be sold cheap and on reasonable time. Also 100 bushels seed flax; 100 bushels seed barley and an unlimited amount of ground feed.

S. M. Dainard.

Things are beginning to look very rocky in the field of international comity. Here we have a boy of fifteen writing to the London Times that the United States can and will eliminate Great Britain from the map of the world and the Times roasting the young man in a column of sturdy guff: and right on the heels of this comes a threat from Sir Charles Tupper of Canada to strike the United States a "vital blow." Let us steer young Mr. Scotte of Pennsylvania against old Mr. Tupper and let the Times referee the "scrap."

After all the stormy petrels of British and American politics have exhausted themselves in behalf of strife, the patient good sense of civilized men and women will certainly find expression in the completion of the movement which is in existance to secure an arbitration of the Behring sea matter. It is an unfortunate circumstance that each nation is on the eve of a great popular election but that is a circumstance which has its advantages as well as its disadvantages Each side will calculate closely the political cost of trying to bring about a war, The British cousin in his supreme consciousness that it is only in America that jingoism prevails is making a sorry spectacle of himself—that is the British tory-unionist cousin. But let him once put in practical operation his silly hate for everything American, and the speed with which he will pose his head will fairly take his breath away.—St, Paul Dispatch.

Arnie Higdem, of Polk county, has received a patent through Thos. S. Hopkins, Washington, D. C. No. 470,-370 for a seeder which promises to revolutionize the construction of seeders for the Northwest. Judging from the special points of this machine and its adaptation to this locality, if the invention had been patented sooner, there would have been a mint of money in it this year, for the farmers. The chief points of the invention are due to the shares and cutting knives, and the peculiar construction of the rollers owing to which it seeds equally well on stubble or plowed ground, cutting all the weeds scattering the seed broadcast under the shares on level ground, keeping the moisture for the seed, covering all at a uniform depth, according to the set from one to four inches, and dragging and rolling the whole at once. Seven shares and two horses will seed 225 acres plowed or stubble in fourteen days, The trial machine on Higdem's farm a mile and a half north of the city, fully demonstrated its capacity to do just what is claimed for it. The inventor is already flooded with applications about this invention,—East Grand Forks New.

J. B. Merril, of Fisher, was in the city yesterdaw on his way home from a trip to Fertile and tells a rather fishy story about the doings of the late blizzard. He states that a farmer at Fertile had forty head of cattle out in the storm and Thursday he went out to find them In his search he discovered six head that had taken refuge near a straw pile. They had run their heads into the straw and were standing upright. He tried to move them, but found them almost stiff and their heads were covered with an icy coating so that he could not see their eyes or nostrils. He broke the coating away and the cattle were able to breath the free air once more. The balance of the stock were dead.—Crookston Times.

Minneapolis Tribune. For over a year, the Democratic party, in common with the nations of Europe, has raised a general uproar at the Republican measure, reciprocity. It was "unconstitutional," it was a "fraud," it would benefit no one, and so forth,

On Tuesday March 14th, the government closed its reciprocity negotiations. What now? Democracy is satisfied, the public may conclude, Not a bit of it; the uproar is louder than ever. The country will be "deprived of the blessings of reciprocity with Venezuela, Columbia, Honduras and Hayti!"

This is a fine example of Democratic consistency. Free sugar, molasses and coffee from Brazil, Cuba, the British West Indies, Central America, Mexico, Germany, France, from nearly all Spanish America, is a "fraud and humbug." But the failure to negotiate reciprocity with an insignificant remnant comprising four states will "endanger the countries interests."

In one year of reciprocity, American exports of agricultural and manufactured products increased in the various reciprocity states from 10 to 100 per cent and the people of the United States were saved over $50,000,000 in the item of sugar alone. These advantages secured with 43,000.0.0 of the Latin-American population and with the 47,-000,000 of Germany, are, in the Democratic eye, of no value. But because reciprocity is not secured also with the 7,000,000 people of Venezuela, Colombia Honduras and Hayti, the country will go to the dogs.

The nations with which we have secured reciprocity relations furnish 87 per cent of our sugar and 85 per cent of our coffee. Reciprocity with these nations, says the Democratic press, is a "fraud and a humbug." But the great desideratum—the boon that will give us cheap sugar and coffee, and allay the "tariff taxes"—is reciprocity with the four insignificent states which produce so small a per cent of the world's sugar and coffee and offer a market for so few of our products that only a Democratic press can discover that said states cut any figure in our commercial existance,

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Kristoffer K. Sandmoen, and Carrie Sandmoen his wife, mortgagors, to Albert O. Runice, mortgagee, dated the first day of March 1890, and recorder as a mortgage in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk in the state of Minnesota, on the 13th day of March 1890 at 4:30 o'clock p. m. in book 48 of mortgages on pages 418 to 421 inclusive on which there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the amount of seven hundred and fifty-eight dollars and sixty cents ($758.60) and no action has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said Mortgage and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, which sale will be made at the front door of the court house at the city of Crookston, in the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, at public auction by the sheriff of said county, or by his duly authotized deputy, on Saturday the fourteenth day of May 1892 at 2 o'clock, in the afternoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage with the interest thereon and costs and expenses of sale, and statutory attorney fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold are the lot piece or parcel of land, situated in the county of Polk in the state of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:—Lot number six (6) of Section seven (7), and the east one-half of the northwest quarter (E. ½, N. W. ¼), and lot number one (1) of section [8] all in township one hundred and fifty-two [152], north, of range forty-three [43] west of the fifth principal meridian.

BEHIND THE SCENES.

Mr. Gilmore gave over 500 concerts in 1891.

Manager Jacob Litt has, it is said, expended $15,000 in the production of "The Ensign," to be given in Washington Feb. 1.

There is an actress in Italy, a young woman, said to possess remarkable talent, who is creating a sensation wherever she appears. Her name is Eleonora Duse.

Patti says sleep is the best tonic for a prima donna's voice. Marie Rose says a well regulated diet and the avoidance of pastry, pickles and wine will preserve the voice.

Richard Mansfield has eight plays in his repertoire and he is rehearsing three more. During the six years that he has been before the public as a "star" Mansfield has taken only six months' vacation.

The largest collection of fans in the world is said to be owned by Mrs. Langtry. The Lily has a fanroom, designed for her by Oscar Wilde, and in this room she places all the fans which are given to her, and many others besides which she buys.

Dion Boucicault stated shortly before his death that he had sometimes made as much as £40,000 a year by his pen. A recent Drury Lane success realized in author's fees alone £100 a week, which Mr. Pettitt and Sir Augustus Harris divided between them.

There is a new wind instrument, the "pedal clarionet." It is an octave below the bass clarionet, and produces the lowest note obtained by any instrument except the organ. With a range of three octaves it has a much pleasanter tone than the double bassoon.

Charles White died in Boston the other day. He began life as a dancing master and he ended it worth $2,000,000. He was a professional song writer. It is needless to say that he was his own publisher. He wrote 1,600 songs, chief of which is "Marguerite."

FASHION'S DECREES.

The prettiest fan to carry with a flower trimmed dress consists of a bunch of roses and poppies with silk petals that open and close with the fan.

A new stuff for petticoats is soft like lambs' wool, and is made in pure white, light pink and light blue, and sometimes striped. Others of the more expensive flannel petticoats are worked nearly all over in an open guipure pattern in silk.

The new dress skirts, which are lined with light silk or fine cambric, and made without a foundation skirt, severely plain, falling in straight, classic folds to the feet, and even for street wear, depend for grace more than is desirable upon their trained back breadths.

The new fans, like the new dress trimmings, are spangled. A pretty example in black gauze, mounted on carved ebony, is thickly strewn with silver disks and stars. Ostrich feather fans are now made in three or more different colors to harmonize with the new shot silks and gauzes.

In silks there is a new material from Paris called "L'Eblouissante," because of its brilliantly luminous surface. It is a kind of corded satin, rich and thick, yet as soft as surah. The shades are dead turquoise, serpent and metallic greens, russet browns and the new orchid, which looks like white, shot with pinky mauve.—New York Press.

TURF TOPICS.

The new clubhouse and grand stand now being erected at Saratoga will cost $75,000.

Few horses are naturally balky. They acquire the habit through the fault of those handling them, says The Horseman.

J. H. Oglebay, of Kansas City, owner of McDoel, 2:15¼, has purchased a promising bay gelding by Strathlan, dam Ida Clayton, by Mambrino Patchen.

Victor von Bismarck's Kentucky progeny amounts to about ninety altogether, and they are from 1 to 8 years old, of which twenty-three are in the 2:30 list.

Marvin says Sunol could have done her great 2:08¼ mile as rapidly over a circular track as over the Stockton kite-shaped course, if the circular course was made of fresh, springy soil.

Charles Fleischmann, of Cincinnati, the new millionaire turfman, has purchased for $8,000 the 3-year-old chestnut colt Ronald, by imported Rossington, out of Secret, by Longfellow.

W. C. Jones, proprietor of the lightning fast track at Columbia, Tenn., has offered $10,000 for a race between Sunol and Nancy Hanks, but as Mr. Bonner never races his horses the prospects for a race are not flattering.

WORDS NOT TO USE.

Not as good as, for not so good as.

Some ten days, for about ten days.

Not as I know, for not that I know.

Somebody else's, for somebody's else.

Kind of, to indicate a moderate degree.

Storms, for it rains or snows moderately.

Above, for foregoing, more than or beyond.

Try an experiment, for make an experiment.

More than you think for, for more than you think.

Nice, indiscriminately. Real nice may be doubly faulty.

Real, as an adverb, in expressions, real good, for really or very good.

Singular subject with contracted plural verb; for instance, "She don't skate well."

His Social Equipment.

"The prairies of the west are great places for wind," the other day remarked Charley Searles, of the Northern Pacific. "I used to have a station out in Nebraska, right out in the open prairie, and the way the wind blew was a caution. But it was a lucky wind for me. At a station about thirteen miles west my girl lived, and as I had no Sunday trains or business of any kind, I would go up there and stay over Sunday. But a livery horse from Saturday night to Monday morning cost me too much money, so I rigged up a sail on an old tie car. All I had to do on Saturday night was to hoist my sail, push the tie car on the main track, and in less than an hour I was at my journey's end. For more than a year I went to see my girl every Saturday night my means of that sail car. Pretty sleek, wasn't it?"

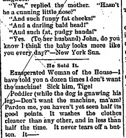
"Yes, pretty sleek. But do you mean to say that the wind blew in the same direction every Saturday night during all that time?"

"Of course I don't!"

"Well, how did you manage on those nights when it blew in the other direction?"

"Easy enough. I had another girl at a station fifteen miles east."—Missourian.

Well Meant, But—



"What a sweet child!" exclaimed the neighbor.

"Yes," replied the mother. "Hasn't he a cunning little nose?"

"And such funny fat cheeks!"

"And a darling bald head!"

"And such fat, pudgy hands!"

"Yes. (To her husband) John, do you know I think the baby looks more like you every day?"—New York Sun.

"Good heavens! Don't you see what the dog is doing?"

"Yes. Quite a playful animal. This machine, ma'am, uses less soap, takes up less room"——

"He'll tear you to pieces if you don't go! Run, for mercy's sake! He's tasted blood, and I'm afraid I can't make him stop now!"

"I have to put up with such things, madam, and it's in a good cause. This machine is the best one that ever was invented. If I can succeed in introducing one into a family I always feel that I have done a benevolent act. You can use any kind of water, hard or soft, hot or"——

"Oh, Oh, Oh! He'll kill you! What is the machine worth?"

"It's worth a million dollars in any family, but I'm selling it for only five dollars, and"——

"Here's your money. I'll take it. Tige! Tige! Let go!"

"Let him chew, ma'am—let him chew. It's a wooden leg. I've got another one at home all ready for use when this one is worn out. Looks as if we were going to have rain. Remember, you can use any kind of water, and if your soap is all right you can—there! He's got tired of it. Good dog, Tige—good dog! Well, I must be going. Afternoon, ma'am."—Chicago Tribune.

A Tale of Toe.

A little corn on a maiden grew,
Listen to my wail of toe,
Caused by the pinch of a too tight shoe,
Instead of a three a number two.
It grew! It grew!
Listen to my wail of toe.

As time went on (as time will do),
Listen to my wail of toe,
The corn waxed red—the maiden blue,
'Twas ten times worse than the grip (ker-chew!)
Too true! Too true!
Listen to my wail of toe!

She had a seat in the end of a pew
Listen to my wail of toe,
And a man with another seat in view
Put his cowhide boot on her kangaroo.
Oh, whew! Oh, whew!
Listen to my wail of toe.

Nothing Like System.

A celebrated German physician was once called upon to treat an aristocratic lady, the sole cause of whose complaint was high living and lack of exercise. But it would never do to tell her so, so his medical advice ran thus: "Arise at 5 o'clock, take a walk in the park for one hour, then drink a cup of tea, then walk another hour and take a cup of chocolate. Take breakfast at 8."

Her condition improved visibly, until one fine morning the carriage of the baroness was seen to approach the physician's residence at lightning speed. The patient dashed up to the doctor's office, and on his appearing on the scene she gasped out, "Oh, doctor, I took the chocolate first." "Then drive home as fast as you can," ejaculated the astute disciple of Esculap, rapidly writing a prescription, "and take this emetic. The tea must be underneath." The grateful patient complied. She is still improving.—Argonaut.

The Mining Industries.

The mineral industry of the United States grows apace. In 1890 the value of its chief items at the place of production exceeded $650,000,000, and though the cash value of these products in 1891 was probably less than in 1890, owing to the lower market prices of most of them, yet the quantities produced were, with very few exceptions, much greater than in any previous year.

The output of gold is increasing, but in the absence of full returns we place it in 1891 at approximately 1,620,000 ounces, or $33,250,000, an increase of 312,000 ounces.

The output of silver has increased much more rapidly, and we estimate, in the absence of full returns, that it amounted in 1891 to 58,000,000 ounces, the coining value of which would be $74,820,000.—Engineering and Mining Journal.

I TEACH $3000 A YEAR
YOU LEARN
Have you written me yet? If you haven't, wisdom and intelligent ambition suggest write to-day. I promise you my special, personal attention. I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. I charge nothing and receive nothing unless successful, as above. Nothing difficult to learn, or that requires much time. I desire but one person from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number who are making over Three Thousand Dollars a Year, each. All is new, solid, sure. Full particulars free. After you know all, if you conclude to go no further, why, no harm is done. Address,

AN EXPENSIVE ANIMAL.

Difficulties in Capturing Alive a Genuine Man-eating Gorilla.

But by far the most expensive and rarest animal in the world is the great African Gorilla. As the Rocky Mountain goat is the rarest in the American trade, so, too, the gorilla is the costliest and rarest in the trade of the globe. As far as I know, there never was a specimen of the genuine man-eating gorilla brought to the United States. Nor will there ever be one. You see in the first place, this animal inhabits the wildest and most inaccessible parts of the African interior, and furthermore, is the wildest and most blood-thirsty beast in the world.

Hence, in my judgment, it will be years before one is displayed in this country. To meet a gorilla means death, every time. A gorilla can fight and kill an elephant, if need be. Of what avail is a bullet or a snare? The animal will twist a gun barrel like so much straw. A man has no more chance before one of these beasts than a mouse has before a bulldog. As far as I know, only one gorilla was ever brought to Europe and that one died soon after its arrival. It seems the beast pines away in captivity.

With a specimen of the genuine man-eating gorilla a person could easily make a fortune in a year. People would eagerly pay a large price to see the beast. In a year you could clear thousands of dollars. So, if you ever run across a genuine specimen, remember what I am telling you to day, and don't sell out too soon or at a loss.—New York Recorder.

England's Money Guarded.

The Bank of England's doors are now so finely balanced that the clerk, by pressing a knob under his desk, can close the outer doors instantly, and they can not be opened again except by special process. This is done to prevent the daring and ingenious unemployed of the great metropolis from robbing the famous institution. The bullion department of this and other great English banking establishments are nightly submerged in several feet of water by the action of the machinery. In some of the London banks the bullion departments are connected with the manager's sleeping-rooms, and an entrance can not be affected without setting off an alarm near the persons head. If a dishonest official, during day or night, should take even as much as one from a pile of one thousand sovereigns the whole pile would instantly sink and a pool of water take its place, besides letting every person in the establishment know of the theft.

The Cunning of Gulls.

An example of the cunning of gulls was observed at Tacoma when several alighted on a bunch of logs that had been in the water for a long time, with the submerged sides thick with barnacles. One was a big gray fellow, who seemed to be the captain. He walked to a particular log, stood on one side of it close to the water, and then uttered peculiar cries. The other gulls came and perched on the same side of the log, which under their combined weight rolled over several inches. The gulls, step by step kept the log rolling until the barnacles showed above the water. The birds picked eagerly at this food, and the log was not abandoned until every barnacle had been picked.

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER III.

When Van Hoeck recovered, and the baronet heard of our long fast, he took us at once into the dining-room, and had us served with the best he could give. It was a repast to recompense us for our long privations, and for a time we famished wretches forgot our treasure in the keen animal pleasure of satisfying the craving of hunger. Sir Edmund sat at the table with us, directing the servants, who surely had never before waited upon such strange company. One could see that it was a real delight to this large-hearted man to see us eat and drink. Miss Lascelles herself waited upon Van Hoeck, attending to his wants with feminine delicacy, his affliction appealed to her woman's sympathy.

She was a tall and graceful girl, with her father's fair, complexion, bright, mirthful eyes, that added to the happy expression of her face, and beautiful soft brown hair that took golden lights and chesnut shadows in its undulation. She looked you in the face with a fearlessness only possible to those who are perfectly healthy and perfectly honest. To the charm of physical beauty was added a faultless manner,—the complete self-command and unfailing grace inseparable from a lady of birth and education. She was as courteous to us, who must have seemed the veriest outcasts of society, as though we were her equal. A true lady can never be ungracious.

Her presence had an indescribable effect upon my senses,—the effect of fine music after discord. I was conscious of a return from savagery to civilization. But it was not until my gross appetite was satisfied that I became susceptible to this new delight.

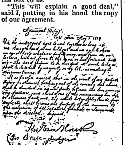
The Baronet spoke not one word about the diamond during dinner, but when it was all over he said:

Well, now, we will go back to the library; and you shall come with us, Edith, if our cigars will not be disagreeable to you, for we have a marvelous matter to talk about."

In the library Miss Lascellas seated herself beside her father, while we three men sat facing them on the other side of a small round table, on which I placed the diamond. At a little distance from there was a lion skin on the floor, and on this the Kid threw herself; as she lay there looking toward us; with her chin resting in the palms of her hands and her elbows planted in the fur, we saw scarcely anything of her but her great lustrous eyes, because of the shadow thrown by the lamp shade.

"Now, let us understand the position of things to begin with," said Sir Edmund, taking a cigar, after handing the box to us.

"This will explain a good deal," said I, putting in his hand the copy of our agreement.



He held it that his daughter might read it with him, and, having come to the end, said,—

"May I ask which is the Judge?"

"That's me," said Brace, with some pride; "appinted by the Long Pike Vigilance Committee in '56."

"You are an American?"

"Located as such for twenty years; born in Cornwall."

"And Jan Van Hoeck?"

"That's Israel," responded the Judge, indicating Van Hoeck; "and darkness fell upon 'em," he added explanatively.

During a short space of his eventful career Brace had earned a precarious existence as a traveling preacher.

"Then you are Bernard Thorne," the Baronet said to me, "and Lola is—"

"The Kid," said Brace; "her mother was a greaser,—a Mexican," he explained to Miss Lascelles. The dinner had warmed his spirits and loosened his tongue, and he continued, "We were drawed together at Cape Town by an advertisement in the paper. Our afflicted brother wanted to stake his little pile upon a mining venture. He hed studied the thing scientific'lly; he had laid out a kinder chart in his head, pricked down where the great finds hed been made, sorter reasoned out the cause thereof, end sot his mind firm as a big find was to be made in a certain spot known only unto himself. We conversed, and he perceived without much difficulty as he hed found the right sorter partner in me, end he kinder left it with me to find a third party to jine in the venture. I spotted out Gentleman Thorne here among a dozen. I liked the shape of his chest and shoulders; I liked the look of his face: I see that though he was outer luck, he was a gentleman every inch of him; and I tell you, miss," he said, addressing Miss Lascelles, "that though I ain't no gentleman myself, I back blood and breedin' agin' all creation. A man like Gentleman Thorne, who has been kep' clean in his infancy, fed wholesome, trained up in a public school, and been learnt to respect hisself and God Almighty, has better temper, more endurance, more pluck and fightin' power to overcome and win, than a dozen of the muckers that bounce about bein' workin' men. He paused a moment to let his words make due impression, and then continued, "Gentleman Thorne had no experience, but he had a hundred pound to put into the concern, and that fetched Israel jest as much as his looks fetched me. Israel had three hundred. I hed nothing in the shape of dollars, but I threw in the Kid, which, being a female, was calc'lated to be useful unter us in the nat'ral order of things. What we hed we lumpt in, and by written agreement drawed up mutual, we undertook to play it out to the bottom dollar and the pint of starvation. We worked, sir, through thick and thin, through the measliest streak of luck mortal man ever struck.

"Israel was the first to funk it. 'My calc'lations are wrong; it's a hopeless venture, let us chuck it,'" he says; to which Gentleman Thorne replies,—'No,' he says, 'we'll stick to our colors and fight it out,' says he; end he did his level best to cheer us on. You should have heered him there a-whistlin' like a black-bud, singin' songs, drawin' us out of ourselves, and makin' a pleasant joke out of our bad luck. Ast the Kid down there who was her best friend in that trouble. She'll tell you it was Gentleman Thorne, not her father. She had a bit of a fever,—it was him made up a bed for her, built a screen to keep the sun off, walked fifteen mile in the night to get things from the store, set up night after night to give her water, end used for to sing out about the sleepin' beauty and Cineralla, while he was peggin away at the durned stones. I will allow, miss, I were ashamed to let him see I was loosin' heart; and, when I felt like blasphemin' at things in gen'al, I used to take a short walk and let off all my swearin' where he couldn't hear me; well, it did look as if we had hooked onto the everlastin' fishkittle. Then Israel funked it a second time. 'We hev still a few pounds left,' he says to Gentleman Thorne, 'let's throw up the cards,' which they might hev done without going from our written word, they two formin' a majority. But Gentleman Thorne wouldn't agree to it. It wouldn't be fair to the Judge, he said, and then he promised that if we failed in the end he'd stick by Israel, and keep him like his own flesh and blood until he found the means of keeping hisself, which was more than I'd hev promised him, I will allow. Well, we played on till the last cent was spent in stores, and the stores had got down to a half a tin of beef and a screw of shag, and then I lighted on a two-carat stone. The very next day Gentleman Thorne found the Great Hesper. We couldn't allow it was real, yet we sorter thought it was. Anyhow, we didn't sleep till we got to Natal and had it tested. We sold the littler stone, and scraped enough together to pay our passage to Southhampton by the next boat. In committee we agreed to go to a bank and raise money on the diamond as soon's we landed; but no one wouldn't take us on, end, if the police hadn't put us on this track, I'm durned if I know what partic'lar 'ole we should hev been stickin' in at the present moment."

During this recital, which I have abbreviated considerably, Van Hoeck, who despised the Judge, and abominated all he said, sat with his eyes closely shut his nostrils pinched, and his black brows creased together so that they almost met. Miss Lascelles listened with intense interest, her pretty lips just parted, and I thought she looked more kindly upon me for the glowing eulogium—of which I have omitted a great part—paid to me by Brace.

The Kid changed her position, seeming to catch some of her father's enthusiasm, and; sitting upon her heels with her hands clasped before her, turned her flashing eyes sometimes upon me, but more often upon Miss Lascelles, as if to catch the effect of this narrative.

"One thing is obvious," said Sir Edmund, cheerfully; "you won't want to leave me to-night."

"Neery one on us, sir, you bet" replied the Judge, while Van Hoeck and I expressed the same sentiment in other words.

The baronet spoke in a low tone to his daughter, who rose and left the room.

"The next thing to consider is," he then said, "how can I be of service to you in this affair. To purchase your treasure is of course altogether out of the question. But I should like to buy a small—a very, very small—share in it, paying down a certain sum for your present convenience, and taking it back when the diamond is ultimately disposed of, with a reasonable percentage upon the outlay. I make this suggestion as a matter of business, that you may feel yourselves free from any restraint in accepting my offer."

It took us, but a few moments to agree to this proposal.

"In that case," he proceeded; "I should wish to have a voice in the management of this business; and the first suggestion I should make is, that the finest artist in work of this kind be engaged to cut the diamond under this roof, and that during the operation you should take up your residence here. This precaution is necessary for the safe keeping of the treasure, and for our own common security."

This arrangement was too obviously advantageous to us to require argument; we consulted together, and quickly agreed to accept the condition.

Sir Edmund read the agreement through again, and then said:

"We must consult a lawyer with regard to a legal form of agreement. Here there is a kind of tontine arrangement by which one would receive an enormous advantage by the death of his partners. It is an uncomfortable clause, and I do not see the necessity of existence, now that the circumstances which called for its being made are changed. A lawyer may provide for our security without exposing us to ugly possibilities. That, however can all be settled later on. There is no hurry. It will be time enough to make the legal arrangement when we have ascertained the value of the property to be arranged, and that we can not know before the stone is cut. We will question the best firms in London with regard to a lapidary, and take our time. Meanwhile, I will supply you with what money you want upon your I. O. U., and the diamond shall remain in your keeping. Talk it over amongst yourselves at your leisure, and any modification you may think advisable, I have no doubt I shall be able to accept."

Miss Lascelles returned to the room, and she spoke to her father. Then she went to Lola, who had curled herself up on the skin, and knelt down beside her. The girl was not asleep; she started up into a sitting attitude as Miss Lascelles approached, and flung off the hand that was laid tenderly on her arm.

"You don't dislike me, Lola?" the young lady asked, smiling.

"Yes, I do," the girl replied savagely.

"But I want to be your friend."

"We shan't never be friends."

I lost Miss Lascelles' response, for a servant entered the room, and Sir Edmund addressed us.

"Your rooms are ready," he said; "Johnson will show you to them if you feel you would like to turn in."

The prospect of sleeping once more in a good bed brought us to our feet at once.

Miss Lascelles, undaunted by the first rebuff, had got Lola's hand in hers, and was talking in a low, endearing tone to her. The Kid snatched her hand away, started to her feet, and came to my side, seeing we were about to go.

"A little cuss," said the Judge; you must excuse her, miss. Her mother was a greaser, and she's never had any kindness shown her, except by Gentleman Thorne. A lick with the strap is what she understands best. No, miss," he added, when Miss Lascelles offered to take Lola to her room; "leave her to me. There ain't nothing but disappintment and vexation of spirit to be got outer the ongrateful varmint."

The room given to the Kid was the prettiest imaginable, with hangings of white lace over blue silk, and everywhere the eye was pleased with some pretty evidence of care and taste. The bed was suggestive of coziness and fresh virgin purity at the same time. I might have taxed my ingenuity in vain to have told Lola. We left the Kid there, leaning against the wall, her unfathomable eyes looking around her in sullen curiosity.

In the morning the room was found empty, the bed untouched, the floor covered with shreds of the clothing Miss Lascelles had laid out for Lola's use, and which, undoubtedly, the little savage had torn up.

Poor little Lola! She and I had always been the best of friends, except when a question of cooking or washing occurred to trouble us. She would yield to my persuasion when nothing else would bend her stubborn spirit. She feared my silent reproach more than the scathing sarcasm Van Hoeck treated her with, or the heavy hand of her father. She respected no one but me, probably because I alone respected her feelings.

Had I foreseen that night the course she was about to take, I might, with a little patient persuasion, have brought her to reason. My spirit is weighed down with regret when I think how perhaps a dozen words from me at that time would have turned aside the fearful consequence of that act, an act so slight, yet followed by terror upon terror, by crime upon crime. TO BE CONTINUED.

A Fancy-Work Partnership.

Since fancy work has become "decoration," and the dealer possesses a knowledge far beyond that of assorting German worsteds, the interiors of our houses no longer resemble bazaars of canvas-worked articles. Young women who aim to supply fancy work for dainty fingers now study designing at the Museum of Fine Arts or the Lowell Institute of Design. They understand historic periods of decoration, adapting attractive features of the past to the needs of the present; they study the peculiarities of ornament of various nations, and use all suggestions in an artistic manner. Two young women who formed a partnership have been most successful in showing how the business of producing dainty fancy work may be carried on. In a large, light room divided by a screen into a large reception room and a small work room, they receive orders, make designs, and in dull seasons take up needles and silks for embroidery. To the question whether it is not difficult to keep up with the fashion of decoration, which changes almost as often as that of dress, one of the partners said, with a smile, "Oh, we try to be ahead of the fashions." This ability to be in advance is, in reality, the faculty of originating designs.

The charming manner in which the two young partners work together is an encouraging indication of woman's tact in business relations. One who particularly enjoys finances attends to the bookkeeping; the other receives most of the orders, and both design patterns. "It is very amusing," one said, "to see how difficult to understand the idea of our partnership seems to be. Some people cannot realize that our interests are identical, and believe that each is conducting an independent business." The partners, in two years' business relations, have become so united in method that each takes up her duties without hesitation, and the result is both harmony in partnership and beauty of designs.

Should Women Smoke.

The Hospital has got into trouble for advising women whose nerves cannot bear the strain of small worries to try smoking if their doctors recommend it. But, says Mr. James Payn pertinently, why the general public should be more shocked at a lady being recommended to smoke tobacco than stramonium one is at a loss to conjecture. It will not be denied by anyone short of a lunatic that a pipe allays the troubles of a man, and why shouldn't a few whiffs of a cigarette allay the worries of a woman? At present its mitigations among the fair sex are confined chiefly to the fast and loose, but there is no more reason why it should be so than that the devil, as John Wesley observed, should have all the best tunes.—Hospital.

The Sportsman and the Wolves.

With reference to the exceptionally cold weather a company of sportsmen were discussing the chances of meeting a famished wolf in the woods near Rome. Said one of the sportsmen:—

"Quite recently I found myself without arms, and with the snow lying three feet deep on the ground face to face with three wolves."

"Well, what then?"

"Then I stared intently at them for the space of ten minutes, after which I walked away with my hands in my pockets and whistling a tune."

The friends who had been listening to him then cried in chorus: "And didn't they eat you up?"

"No they couldn't; they were in a cage."—Il Motto per Ridere.

THE REPUBLIC IS A SUCCESS.

There Have Been Troubles, but the President Finds Us United.

The enthusiasm with which the anniversary of the Declaration of Independence is celebrated in no wise diminishes as the event commemorated recedes more and more into the past. The methods of manifesting patriotic spirit have changed in some respects. The spread eagle oratory of former days has gone out of vogue; but the exhibition of devotion to the republic and its institutions, and of a strong and individual American sentiment grows more rather than less pronounced and emphatic.

It may be truly said that to-day the people of this country are united as never before. The Union rests more firmly on its constitunal foundations than ever before. There is a more distinct national character. The people cling more lovingly and more tenaciously to the principles of democracy, and representative government is administered with greater purity, honesty and efficiency.

In the earlier days of the establishment of the republic there was a large part of the people that looked doubtfully and pessimistically on the experiment of setting up a government from which were excluded all the forms and insignia and classifications of monarchy; and among the number were many of the more educated and refined. They feared that law and authority would not be properly reverenced without the aid of the ancient superstitions as to thrones and crowns and the imposing force of all the symbols and badges of sovereign power.

"It seems to me," wrote in December, 1788, Gerard de Rayneval, the French minister to this country, "that the Americans were not ripe, if I may use this expression, for popular government. They were too much accustomed to the distinctions of authority, rank, honors, birth and of wealth for the class of citizens who enjoyed these advantages to willingy confound themselves with the masses. The people of Massachusetts, among others already fear that they have instructed their governments with too much power. However this may be, it appears still very doubtful whether popular principles will prevail and purge the constitutions of this tinge of aristocracy."

This work of purgation has been difficult and of a long duration. The distrust of the people manifested itself in opposition to every step in advance toward real popular government. There remained many of the people who feared and detested universal suffrage, and they would not only limit the franchise, but they would also restrict within narrow bounds the number of public servants to be voted for by those who had the privilege of voting. Then in more recent years came up the short lived struggle to keep out foreign settlers, from any share in the government. They are alien to the American sentiment, it was argued, and they will pervert our institutions. Then came the cry that popular suffrage might have done well enough for a compact and homogeneous population, but that it was a dangerous power in the hands of a vast aggregation of people rapidly brought together by immigration and not yet assimilated.

But to-day finds the republic more united, more harmonious, better governed, and with a more distinct and common national sentiment than before these many millions of foreigners were admitted to citizenship. The more the people have been trusted, the more they have taken their government into their own hands, the more powerful has become the republic, and the more completely have been shattered the theories of the wailing political pessimists.

But there still remains much to do. These critics of popular government and skeptics as to the ability of the people to exercise sovereign power are not yet vanquished at all points. The work of purgation is not yet completed.—New York Sun.

The "Old Dominion."

Ever since you can remember you have heard the state of Virginia called the "Old Dominion;" do you know why it is so called? During the protectorate of Cromwell the colony of Virginia refused to acknowledge his authority and declared itself independent. Shortly after, when Cromwell threatened to send a fleet and army to reduce them to subjection, the Virginians sent a messenger to Charles II., who was then an exile in Flanders, inviting him to return in the ship with the messenger and be king of Virginia. Charles accepted the invitation and was on the eve of embarking for the new world when he was called to the throne of England. As soon as he was safely seated on the throne, out of gratitude for the royalty of Virginia he caused her coat-of-arms to be quartered with those of England, Ireland and Scotland, as an independent member of the empire—a distinct portion of the "Old Dominion." Coins of Virginia were issued as late as the reign of George III. which bore on one side the coat-of-arms of England, Ireland, Scotland, and Virginia.—St. Louis Republic.

Just the Man for the Job.

A Massachusetts avenue lady wanted a coachman, and one was recommended whom she interviewed.

"I want a very safe and careful driver," she said.

"That's me, mum," responded the applicant, confidently.

"I'm nervous about horses and I don't want to drive fast, and I don't want to go 'round the corners with a whirl."

"I know, mum, just what you wants. Them was my orders before, mum."

"Where were you engaged last?"

"Drivin' a hearse, mum."

He got the place, and he is giving excellent satisfaction.—Washington Star.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Now is the time to treat Catarrh of long standing. Ely's Cream Balm reaches old and obstinate cases, where all other remedies fail. Do not neglect procuring a bottle, as in it lies the relief you seek.

Rev. H. H. Fairall, D. D., editor of the Iowa Methodist, says editorally, "We have tested the merits of Ely's Cream Balm, and believe that, by a thorough course of treatment it will cure almost every case of catarrh. Ministers as a class are afflicted with head and throat troubles, and catarrh seems more prevalent than ever. We cannot recommend Ely's Cream Balm too highly."

Apply Balm into each nostril. It is Quickly Absorbed. Gives Relief at once. Price 50 cents at Druggists or by mail.

Scrofula Humor

Lost 40 Pounds in a Year

Blood Thoroughly Purified and Perfect Health Restored by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I certify that I was sick for 4 years with an affliction my physicians called scrofula.

Blotches Came Out

all over my body, and swelling on the right side of the neck, and in less than a year I had lost 40 pounds in flesh. I was induced by H. L. Tubbs, our druggist, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I used two bottles without realizing any more benefit than I had with other preparations of Sarsaparilla. But Mr. Tubbs still insisted on my giving it a fair trial, by using six bottles, which he sold me for $5. I continued to take this medicine, and after taking the second bottle of this lot the blotches began to disappear, as did also the lump in my neck, and I soon began to

Gain in Flesh

I still continued to take the medicine for four months, and at the end of that time there was none of the disease left in my system, and I was as

A LARGE meteor fell in the Choctaw Nation a few days ago. It was imbedded at least twenty feet in the earth, and protrudes twelve feet in the air.

Representatives of all the leading marine insurance interests on the great lakes met in Detroit. The revision left the schedule of rates practically the same as last year.

KING TENBRINO, of Butaritari, who arrived in San Francisco on the bark Towara last week, announces that his mission to this country is to secure the protection of the United States for the Gilbert Islands.

THE Lindell Hotel, of St. Louis, which cost when it was built 14 years ago $1,300,000, was sold by the Marmaduke estate to the present lessees, Messrs. Howe and Chassaing, for $875,000.

A PROJECT is on foot to establish a trans-Atlantic line of steamers between Philadelphia port and Breenjown, a harbor in Bristol channel, passengers to be transported thence by a short railroad route to London.

A PRELIMINARY statement shows that in 1890 there was a production of copper equal to 250,008,002 lbs and in 1891, 284,119,764. Reports of stocks of copper from the producers and the majority of smelters, with the exception of the Calumet & Hecla and Quincy Mining companies, show a decline of 60,840,670 pounds on the first of January, 1891, to 54,888,536 pounds on Jan. 1, 1892. All the lake companies with the exception of the two named report 10,161,528 pounds on the former and 16,151,170 pounds on the latter date, while the Montana producers reduced their stock from 33,015,987 pounds to 17,827,866 pounds.

A DIVORCE suit, apparently promising sensational developments, was begun at Chicago by Ella Burlingham, wife of the Oak street druggist, whose departure for Europe during the Cronin excitement caused much comment. The couple came to Chicago in 1874 with only $500, and now Burlingham is worth $75,000, which Mrs. Burlingham sets forth she helped to earn. The defendant's refusal to purchase a home, notwithstanding his ample means, and a belief that he is about to start for Europe with another woman, are the grounds advanced in the wife's bill for divorce. It is understood that Le Caron, who gave such sensational testimony before the Parnell commission in London, was a partner in the drug business here with Burlingham.

The body of Robert E. Hogg was found underneath the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern bridge across Mill creek at Clinton. It was frozen in the ice. It is supposed Hogg started to walk to Comanche, five miles distant where his wife was visiting and in some way fell through the bridge, unless he was foully dealt with, as is suspected by some.

At Radcliffe, while returning home at night, Thomas Hollis, a wealthy banker, was assaulted on the street by robbers and shot. Mr. Hollis had on a heavy cap which deadened the effect of the assassin's bullet, otherwise he would have been instantly killed. No clue as yet of the robbers. Mr. Hollis is one of the wealthiest men in Northern Iowa. He will recover.

The state board of health has received notification from New York that thirty passengers on the steamer Gellert, on which were a number of people sick with fever, and some suspected of having typhus, had come to various parts of the state. Word has been sent to the local boards of health in the places where the immigrants went, and they will be closely watched.

WHY HE SURRENDERED.

Farragut Tells the Story of Valparaiso's Fight.

Admiral Farragut went to sea when only 7 years old and became a midshipman at 7. His first battle was in the harbor of Valparaiso, where his commander, Porter, was defeated by the British.

"As I was standing beside a battery," he said before his death, when talking to a Pittsburgh Dispatch writer, "a round shot came through the side of the ship, striking a gunner full in the breast and hurling his mangled body half way across the deck. The sight made me sick for a moment and I grew dizzy and staggered back, but the feeling lasted only an instant, for the shot came so thick and fast that the deck was strewn with dead and wounded. Fifteen men were killed at a single battery. As the men and officers were struck down, one after another, I was compelled to act as quartermaster, captain's aide and powder boy by turns, but as the slaughter increased chiefly as powder boy."

"Porter never meant to surrender. When his last hope was gone he saw that his wrecked vessel had drifted within less than a mile from shore, called all hands on deck, and, amid the crashing shots that were making kindling wood of the vessel, told them that all who wished to do so might jump overboard and swim ashore.

"It was plain to me that he had resolved to go down with his flag flying and take me down with him. But as he looked on the crowd of wounded men covering the deck, he evidently felt it would be cruel to let them go helplessly to the bottom. So he struck his colors."

A STUDENT'S TORMENT.

What "Neophytes" Must Undergo Before Admission to a Society.

From the time the Harvard student begins "running" to the time he receives final initiation into his college society he is not supposed to wash, shave, or comb his hair; says an exchange. He wears the oldest flannel shirt he owns, no necktie, and has his trousers turned up at the bottom. He is obliged to do whatever he is ordered by any member of the society, each "neophoyte" being the special slave of two other members. The regulation requirements, in addition to the more absurd ones, are to wake the members at some unearthly hour of the morning, and to sell newspapers and black shoes on the street. The candidate is required to ride a child's velocipede decked out with feather plumes and a many-colored coat; to chase horse cars, and then placing his foot on the step simply tie his shoestring to the disgust of the conductor and the occupants of the car; to take his bed apart every night, carry it out into the yard, and then put it up again; to go into the stores and violently berate storekeepers; to rise during a play at the theater and object to the acting, only to be forcibly ejected from the house; to write ridiculous things about himself and send them to the papers for publication; to kiss every baby you meet; to raise his hat and smile at every one he passes; to act as valet, coachman, or footman to his tormentors."

MADE HER SON A THIEF.

An Extraordinary Case of Hereditary Criminality.

Pat McAndrews had an honest father and an honest mother, but he was a thief from babyhood. His mother did her best to reform him, but it proved impossible. He is in jail now charged with burglary, says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and this is how the heart-broken mother accounts for his wickedness:

"Just before Pat was born his father was drinking more than was good for him," she said, "and would spend all his money in drink if he had sufficient opportunity. I found it very hard to get any money from him to pay for our bread and meat. At last it got so that the only way I could get his money was by waiting until he got asleep at night and then picking his pockets. Many and many a night I have got up when my husband was asleep in the bed by my side, tiptoed over to where his clothes lay, gone through his pockets and took what money I found there. He was at that time drinking so hard that every night almost he would go to bed drunk, and the next morning he could not remember whether or not he had any money when he came home. But he had a hot temper, and I was always afraid when I would be picking his pockets that he might wake and find me doing it. Pat was born shortly after that, and I believe he was born a thief, just owing to that habit of mine."

MANY MURDERED.

Two Brothers in Russia Charged With Killing Numerous Emigrants.

A Least Forty Persons Thought to Have Been Killed and Robbed by Them.

WARSAW, March 29.—Police inquiries into the case of two brothers named Koulikvosky, who are imprisoned here on the charge of murdering and robbing a peasant near Bielostock, has revealed the practice of the wholesale murder of emigrants on the frontier.

Already the naked bodies of five victims have been discovered in the snow in the woods adjacent to the house occupied by the brothers, who lived in the village of Monki. The search for bodies is proceeding. There have been many disappearances of late in the neighborhood of the Koulikvosky residence, and the police estimate that the two brothers have murdered at least forty persons. The residents of Monki have been greatly startled by the revelations concerning the brothers, and there is much excitement throughout the whole district. The elder brother, who was a peasant farmer, has a young wife, who, it is charged, took advantage of her sex to abet her husband in his crimes, receiving her share of the spoils secured from the unfortunate victims. The younger brother had been a soldier in the Russian army, but his time had expired. He took to smuggling across the frontier as a means of livelihood, and naturally became thoroughly acquainted with all the various paths that led into Prussian territory away from

THE WATCHFUL FRONTIER GUARDS.

Many of the persons desirous of leaving Russia, particularly emigrants, were not supplied with the passports required by the government before Russians are allowed to leave the country, and in these persons the Koulikvouskys found their victims. These persons would approach the Koulikvouskys and bargain for a safe conduct beyond Russian soil, and with his knowledge of the frontier it was a comparatively easy undertaking for the younger brother to get them safe away from Russian territory. Fugitives from justice also availed themselves of Koulikvousky's knowledge to escape from the officers of the law.

The method followed by the brothers in the cases of persons desiring to cross the frontier was as follow: They would select as their victims only those who had good outfits and money. The others would be taken across the frontier in safety. The victims would be taken in charge by the younger brother, and singly they would be conducted along a narrow path through a dense forest. In the meantime the elder brother would hurry by a short route to a spot previously agreed upon, and when the victim approached he would be attacked by his guide and the man who hid in ambush. The unfortunate man and then, to make their work sure, the brothers would beat his skull with clubs. He would then be robbed of everything in his possession. At the outset the brothers carefully buried the bodies; but as time went by they became careless and shoved the bodies under the brushwood, after stripping them. But this was not the only way they had of securing victims. The wife of the elder brother would indulge in flirtations with strangers who came to Monki, and would make engagements for them to visit her at her home. She is a comely, buxom woman, and admirers would hasten at night to her house, only to meet death at the hands of the husband and his brother, who awaited their coming.

Among the last victims of the brothers was a peasant who had sought shelter from inclement weather in their house. He fell asleep and the brothers attempted to strangle him. He awoke and made a most desperate struggle for his life, as his body showed. While he was held so he could not escape boiling water was poured over his head and face, and the murderers then succeeded in strangling him. The body was hidden beneath some straw in a stable, where it was accidentally discovered before the brothers had time to carry it to the forest. The finding of this body led to the discovery of the five other bodies in the woods.

Will Assist the Prosecution.

CHICAGO, March 29.—W. C. Williams, a criminal lawyer of Milwaukee, was in the city yesterday en route to Waupaca, where he has been retained by the prosecution in the celebrated Mead murder case. Mr. Williams says the prosecution has come into possession of new evidence which is now being brought out before a special grand jury. This evidence, he says, will result in prominent men of Waupaca being indicted.

A Serious Shooting Affair.

ALBERT LEA, Minn., Special Telegram, March 29.—News has just arrived here of a shooting in the town of Freeman, the result being that a young man named Lien received a severe wound in the head, tearing an ugly gash in the scalp that may cause death. A man named Ironson did the shooting, and a warrant is issued for his arrest.

Bank Burglars at Work.

BELLE PLAINE, Minn., Special, March 29.—Some time between Saturday night and Monday morning an attempt was made to burglarize the bank of this place. Entrance was gained by the use of a key as all doors and windows were securely fastened. The doors to the vault and safe are badly demoralized and the safe cannot be opened, but it is thought they did not obtain any money.

Too Much Whisky.

O'BRIEN, Wash., March 29.—Mike Crowley, a bartender, shot and killed Richard Harn, a wealthy rancher, during a saloon quarrel last night. Crowley then killed himself. There was no enmity between the men, and the tragedy was simply the result of an overindulgence in drinks.

Liberal Contributions.

HURON, S. D., Special Telegram, March 29.—At a meeting of citizens Saturday evening a committee was appointed to canvass the city for contributions to the state Russian relief fund. So far the committee has met with much success. Several thousand pounds of flour and considerable cash has been secured to-day. A canvass of the county will also be made at once. Contributions are very liberal, and in the aggregate will amount to a large sum. The state commission hope to send an average of one car load of provision from every county in the state, making a total of fifty-two car loads.

INTENSE SUFFERING.

Peculiar Death of a Milwaukee Capitalist in Utah.

SALT LAKE CITY, March 29.—August A. Bintelman, a prominent Milwaukee capitalist, died at St. Mary's hospital to-day under peculiar circumstances. In company with a party of well known Milwaukeeans he had been on a visit to California, and while in San Francisco had taken a Turkish bath. While the attendant was rubbing him his hand slipped and he hit Mr. Bintelman a violent blow in the side. It was a little painful at the time, but he thought little of it until he arrived here, when the spot began to swell and blood poisoning set in. Physicians performed an operation, but it did not improve the patient's condition, and he died in intense pain.

WILLFUL MURDER.

A Liverpool Jury Returns Such a Verdict Against Deeming.

LIVERPOOL, March 29.—The coroner's jury investigating into the deaths of the woman and four children whose bodies were found buried under the floor of Dinham villa at Rainhill, a suburb of Liverpool, concluded its investigation to-day and returned a verdict of willful murder against Deeming. The story of Deeming's crimes has become so complicated through his adoption of aliases that it will make matters clearer to give in chronological order the events in the career of this remarkable criminal under his different assumed names. It is as follows: Under the name of Deming, which is his right name, he married Miss Marie James in 1881, and left the same year for Cape Town; joined by his wife in Sydney, 1882; received six weeks' imprisonment for theft, 1882; absconded from Sydney on charge of fraudulent insolvency in 1888; returns to England on Aug. 11, and to Birkenhead, leaving that place and his wife after the birth of his fourth child, about four months afterward, 1889. Under the name of Lawson, he arrived at Hull and obtained jewelry on false pretenses March 15, 1890; married Miss Matheson at Beverly, Yorkshire, and deserted her a fortnight afterward, 1890; arrested at Montevideo, 1890; tried at the Hull assizes on a prosecution of the jewelers and sentenced to nine months' imprisonment, October, 1890. Under the name of Williams he arrived at Rainhill in July, 1891, visited Birkenhead, taking Mrs. Deeming and the children with him to Rainhill; supposed murder, August, 1891; married Miss Mather at Rainhill, September, 1891; arrived with his wife in Australia, 1891; murdered Mrs. Williams Dec. 24 (supposed), 1891. Under the name of Swanston he was arrested when on the eve of a fourth marriage, March, 1892.

KEEPING OFF "SOONERS."

Troops Wanted and Newspaper Men Not Wanted.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, March 29.—Information has been received in Washington that there is danger on the Sisseton reservation. The agent in charge has notified the Indian office that he wants four troops of cavalry to come there to prevent intending settlers from crowding on the reservation, and also to drive away those men who have already gone on the reservation looking for lands. Secretary Noble informed the correspondent of the PIONEER PRESS to-day that he had made provision for troops to go to the reservation and to prevent anybody going upon the land, and that all people who were there or tried to make trouble would be taken care of by the military.

The secretary was asked to grant permission to newspaper men to go upon the reservation to report the proceedings and what might take place, but he refused, although Commissioner Morgan had granted the permission and made it subject to the approval of the secretary. The secretary said the only result of giving the newspapers this privilege would be that one or two of them would secure claims on the reservation. He was informed that this was not the object or intention, but he stated that the result of granting permission upon lands to be opened by the secretary resulted in many difficulties in Oklahoma; that many United States officers [illegible] the intent of the agreement, and nearly all the contests arising from Oklahoma arose from these officers of the government undertaking to gain possession of valuable lands. It was suggested to the secretary that newspaper men could be trusted even though United States officers could not, but he emphatically held out, saying there would be no permits from the interior department to go upon the Sisseton reservation; that he had provided for troops to go there to preserve order and keep off all "sooners" who may assume to take claims or locate upon the land in advance, and push upon the lands before the proclamation is issued.

TARIFF AND ADJOURNMENT.

The Retail Bills and Early Adjournment Prospects.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The Springer free wool bill will probably be brought to a vote on April 22 or 23. Chairman Springer expects to close the debate in an hour's speech. The binding twine and cotton bagging bills will then be pushed to a vote as soon as possible, to be followed, perhaps, by other specific bills attacking separate items of the McKinley law. With these measures disposed of in the house and the appropriation bills in expeditious shape, the Democratic majority of the ways and means committee believe that an early adjournment of congress is possible and discussed the adjournment question to-day. The sentiment was favorable to June 1 as the date.

A Crank Captured.

NEW YORK, March 29.—John J. Lingeman, the crank who Dec. 27 last demanded the brains of Cornelius Vanderbilt, and who was committed for examination as to his sanity, is again in trouble. For the past week he has been annoying the family of Jay Gould by ringing the bell and demanding to see Helen, the eldest daughter of the financier, whose lover he declared himself to be. To-day he was arrested and committed. In court he was very violent and was bound in a straight jacket before he could be removed.

The Pensioners.

WASHINGTON, Special Telegram, March 29.—Pensions granted to-day:

Minnesota—Original: James W. McCoon, Keenaaz F. Price, Daniel Z. Hellman, Joseph H. Baldwin. Additional: Simon A. Farmington, George W. Freer, David E. Latchford, John D. Smith. Increase: George W. Houston. Reissue: Robert Swenson. Original widow: Cynthia S. Bohls.

Wisconsin Alliance Convention.

EAU CLAIRE, Wis., Special Telegram, March 29.—Delegates are arriving for the annual state convention of the Farmers' Alliance, which opens to-morrow. State Treasurer W. F. Donahue of Star Prairie, who is among to-night's arrivals, says that thirty or forty counties will be represented, and probably there will be about a hundred delegates present. State Agent E. F. Newell, of New Richmond, who is here, will exploit a plan for starting an Alliance store in every county in the state, for which farm implements, barbed wire and general supplies will be bought in car load lots and sold for cash at bed-rock figures.

How good and pleasant and natural it is to pick up a Maine paper after a generation of prohibitory legislation and hear the doughty champions slugging the authorities for not enforcing the law, Neal Dow is now eighty-six years old and the fanatical war he fought in during his prime is still raging about his long and venerable ears, no nearer satisfactory settlement than when it first began,—Pioneer Press.

Official notice was received by W. W. Fegan this morning that on April 1st. U. H. Jenks, of the Dakota division of the Great Northern road would be transferred to the Northern division, and that E. J. Evans, would on that date assume duties as superintendent of the Dakota division. Mr. James, the outgoing superintendent of this division does not know just what he will do in the future, He has been in charge here for the past three years.—Crookston Times,

Washington, D. C. March 25th. It is stated on what is supposed to be authority that Russia has given Harrison secret assurance that Russia will assist in protecting the lives of tender seals in Behring sea, It is said that Russia will send four war ships to strengthen her fleet of iron-clads at Vladivostock. The officials here concede that our relations with Great Britain are strained, as the latter has ordered several powerful men of war to protect the Canadian seal catchers in the open sea.

A saw has been made for Carnegie Phipps & Co. for cutting armor plates for the new government ships. The saw weighs 110 tons and will cut a nickel steel armor plate as an ordinary saw does a plank. The armor plates range in weight from eight to 30 tons, and are sometimes 20 feet long and 20 inches thick. The saw has a blade 7½ feet in diameter, geared above and revolving horizontally. With it an angular slab of cold nickle steel weighing perhaps a dozen tons is taken off like the slab off a pine log. The saw is the first of its kind used in this country and cost about $35,000.—Lumberman.

Republicans should stand firm for an honest dollar—worth 100 cents. We do not believe in giving bonanza mine owners a bonus of 30 cents on a dollar for their product. If a bonus is to be given to anyone we believe in giving it to the farmers, not to the mine owners. The mine owners have not only got their grip upon the Democratic party, but also upon the so-called Peoples party and unless the people stand firm against these millionaires the 70 cent dollar will be forced upon us under the cloak of "reform." It is the producers and laborers who need protection not the mine owners, still most of the leaders in the Democratic and Peoples parties are engaged in the work of selling out their constituents in behalf of the millionaires.—Ada Index.

The adoption of an almost universal policy of gerrymander is solid proof of the conscienceless condition of our political parties. It is an unscrupulous weapon but one of the most effective and is to-day wielded by both parties The idea was promulgated by and derives its name from Elbridge Gerry a disciple of Jeffersonian simplicity eighty years ago. Several states are now being sliced up in such voting districts as will perpetuate the power of the ruling party Michigan has added to the ordinary gerrymander a law by which presidential electors are elected in congressional districts. This will result, in a division of the electoral vote of the state and complicates considerably the problem of figuring out the presidential situation. The modern gerrymander is an application of the unscrupulous commercial trust system to politics and is dangerous. —Marshall County Leader.

From the papers of all the western states it appears that there is greater interest being taken in the making of new and improvement of old roads than there ever has been before. This is a matter that interests the people in this valley as much as anywhere on the continent, and it would be wise for all to study the question and benefit by every suggestion that is made which could be improved upon here, As this valley has never had but little aid from the state internal improvement fund, there should be an united effort made at the next session of the legislature to secure large appropriations for each of the counties, not only for building bridges but also for grading roads and making main ditches or drains where they are most needed. The towns have done much in this direction and no doubt will continue to do even still more but we need state aid in many places where the cost of making these improvements would be too heavy for the town to bear —Crookston Times,

The following has been submitted for publication in this department: A chambermaid is said to have put twelve commercial travelers into eleven bed rooms, and yet to have given each man a separate apartment,

"Now" she said, "if you two gentlemen will go into bedroom No. 1 and wait a few minutes I'll find a spare room for one of you as soon as I have shown the others their rooms. Having thus stowed the first two in No. 1 she put the third in No. 2, the fourth in No. 3, the fifth in No. 4, the sixth in No, 5, the seventh in No. 6, the eighth in No. 7, the ninth in No, 8 the tenth in No. 9 the eleventh in No. 10, Having completed the task she went back to room No. 1 where you will remember she had left the twelfth gentleman alone with the first, and said: 'I now have furnished each of the others with a room and have a room to spare, if you please step into room No. 11 and you will find it empty." How was it done? —St. Louis Republican.

Mr. Cleveland writes to General Bragg that his "conception of the nature of the presidential office" precludes the possibility of his "lending and pushing a self seeking canvass for the presidential nomination." This phrase is, of course, a contemptuous allusion to his rival Hill's pushing, self seeking ways. Mr. Cleveland is not as agile nor as energetic, nor as frank a candidate as Hill this year, but his surrender to Tammany last fall forever removed him from the pedestal of patriotic statesmanship on which his adorers once imagined he stood. Four months ago he hoped to have Tammany on his side, but having failed he is still waiting for the "thoughtful and patriotic" democrats to "consecrate" him to another campaign for the presidency. As for Senator Hill, his interesting starring tour through the south in the pursuit of delegates began this week. What Mr. Hill does is now much more important than what Mr. Cleveland says. But Senator Hill will probably find by that experiance which has shadowed the lives of so many greater American politicians and states men, that the presidency always eludes those who pursue it most diligently.—Grand Forks Herald,

The Grievance of the Living Skeleton and How It Was Received.

"It's no use," said the living skeleton, "I have tried my best to adapt myself to the exigencies of life in this establishment, but I can't do it. No one in my position could do it. I have worn myself to skin and bone in countless efforts to make things pleasant for my companions. I have trained down seven ounces avoirdupois per week to please the management, and I have worn black tights, which are very unbecoming to my form, because the tattooed lady wanted a neutral background for her complexion. And what has been my reward? Harsh words and cutting remarks and unfeeling allusions to Antinous and the Apollo Belvidere. It's too much!" And the unhappy freak buried his face in his hands and retired behind his walking stick.

"That's what's the matter," said the manager with marked sarcasm. "You're too much. You weigh nearly a pound more than the skeleton dude at Smithers' with all his jew'lry thrown in. You're queerin the show."

"What!", cried the living skeleton from behind his stick. "You dare to reproach me with my weight when you know that it is due to your meanness, your parsimony, your vulgar, grasping nature! When three months ago I wanted to get my hair cut didn't you order me not to do so because you wanted me to play understudy to the Circassian beauty during the dull season? And didn't you make me let my nails grow so I could do the Wild Man of Borneo's turn when he had a night off? Didn't you"——

"Cheese it!" said the tattooed lady. "You're making the fat woman shake half the flesh offer 'er."

"Didn't I tell you?" cried the manager, shaking his fist excitedly at the walking stick, from behind which came sounds of sobbing, "that duck's a hoodoo? He's queered the show ever since he come, an he'll keep on queerin it as long as he stays. Oh, if there was only more like him! No, not more like him, but more of his kind. I'd rather have the fakinest skeleton in the business than him. He'll bankrupt the management. He's worse'n the tortoise boy!"

"Ingrate!" retorted the living skeleton: "serpent; reptile; Iscariot!"

"Close yer jaw or yer'll swallow yerself," said the wild man, as he brushed his hair before the necromancer's mirror.

"Be silent, you link!" retorted the living skeleton. "If Darwin were only here!"

"What's the matter with the living skeleton?" asked the modern Samson kindly, as he carefully pasted together the torn edges of a 1,000 pound weight.

"Nothing," answered the tattooed lady; "he's outer sight."

"Cruel! Heartless!" came from behind the walking stick.

"Where are you?" called the modern Samson. "Come out and show yourself. Don't be afraid. I won't let 'em crowd you."

"I wouldn't mind it so much," said the living skeleton as he appeared from his place of hiding, "if they'd give a fellow a shadow of a show."

"But you ain't got no shadow," said the tattooed lady tauntingly, "and we're the show."

"He's not in it," interposed the wild man.

"I'm just as much a part of the show as any of you," said the living skeleton. "I'm a good deal more of it than some of you. In fact I may say that I am the framework of the establishment." And he drew himself up proudly.

"I 'clar t' goodness, Brudder Bones, yo' meks me laugh!" said the wild man, who had once been very successful in the burnt cork branch of his profession—was in fact a regular burnt corker.

"Don't use the vernacular, Whiskers," said the modern Samson cuttingly; "It's bad form."

"So's yer friend," retorted the wild man.

"He's not a fake anyhow," said the modern Samson.

"Well, you are," replied the wild man with an oriental sneer. "And what's more, you're a"——

It is hard to say what would have followed had not the fat woman, who had hitherto listened silently, said:

"Gentlemen!"

The word restored the excited freaks to a sense of their social standing, and they at once retired to their respective platforms after each had bowed profoundly to the fat woman.

Then the audience came in from the stage performance and the freaks took their positions for the lecture.—New York Evening Sun.

How Fast Will Trotters Go?

At present a lively interest is being taken in the discussion of the fastest possible trotters, scientists, horsemen and others venturing all sorts of wild opinions on the subject. This reminds me that the same subject was up during the summer of 1883, when many of the leading mathematicians of the country plotted "curves" and advanced theories in a vain effort to determine how fast horses will ultimately trot, and when this maximum will be reached. One of the most learned of these articles was by Professor F. E. Nipher, of this state which appeared in the July, 1883, number of The American Journal of Science.

According to Professor Nipher's conclusions, the speed to which the American trotter will constantly approximate but never reach, is one mile in ninety two seconds, or 1:32. He also concludes that the time of the trotting horse will be reduced to within one second of this figure in 360 years after the year 1860, that is to say in the year of our Lord 2220. But it must be remembered that our great Missouri scientist was too astute to claim absolute certainty for his figures. He even admits that the maximum speed may possibly be as great as 100 seconds. In the course of ten years, or in 1893, he says in his article, the limit can be definitely fixed. He also remarked that he was quite sure that eventually the maximum speed of trotting and of running horses will differ only by a few seconds.

In an article following the one quoted from above, Mr. Nipher stated that he had made a new calculation based on mathematical rather than on graphical methods. The maximum time thus obtained was eighty-one instead of ninety three seconds. The probable error of this deduction, according to the professor's opinion, is not over four seconds. From the results thus obtained it is not likely that the running horse will be able to surpass the trotter at the end of the year 2200. It is a curious speculation, to say the least, to even guess that by an artificial gait the trotting horse will finally be able to make better time than one of his species who travels as nature intended he should.—St. Louis Republic.

A Lawyer's Advice to Young Lawyers.

The closest application to the study of the law applicable to any case in hand and careful thought of what the law ought to be as applied to the case, and then the most careful study of the books to see how it has been applied in like instances.

I thought out my cases and thought out the law as applied to them and then verified or corrected my thought by the opinions of the courts. The highest legal authority has declared the common law to be the perfection of common sense, so that any man who thoughtfully applies his common sense ought to know what the common law is. The only need he has of the cases in the books is not so much to guide himself as to use them to direct the minds of the judges to adopt his common sense as the law of the case resulting from precedents.

Therefore I want to repeat, find out the law of the case yourself first, and then by comparison of the cases pertaining to it decide it: perfect your sense as to what the law is.

I by no means advise a young man to make himself simply what is known as a "case lawyer," because lawyers of that class endeavor to remember and find a case like their own which has been decided, and they rest therein their minds without other diligence or study to see how far that decision sustained the case.—Memoirs of General B. F. Butler.

A Female Undertaker.

Buffalo is blessed with a "lady undertaker," who takes charge of every detail of a funeral, embalming the body, draping the funeral apartments, furnishing the shroud and casket, chairs and carriages, arranging the flowers and purchasing the mourning outfit for the entire family. In the latter capacity she has great advantage over the man undertaker, who has vague and unsatisfactory ideas on ruching and borders doesn't know the fine distinctions in mourning etiquette between the suitable garb for maids and matrons, and is no use whatever in deciding which style in mourning bonnets is most becoming.

Many people prefer to have this little woman attend women and children especially, and she is doing a thriving business, which she intends to supplement in the spring by a mourning millinery establishment, from which to supply promptly the requisite costume at short notice. St. Paul has a woman engaged successfully in this solemn business. Chicago has also one who has retired very wealthy, and Rochester boasts a woman who acts as assistant undertaker.—New York Sun.

Have you written me yet? If you haven't, wisdom and intelligent ambition suggest write to-day. I promise you my special, personal attention. I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. I charge nothing and receive nothing unless successful, as above. Nothing difficult to learn, or that requires much time. I desire but one person from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number who are making over Three Thousand Dollars a Year, each. All is new, solid, sure. Full particulars free. After you know all, if you conclude to go no further, why, no harm is done. Address,

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER IV.

I must summarize as briefly as possible the events that took place the week following Lola's flight, not because I find them lacking in interest,—for indeed these were the happiest days I had ever spent—but because the lengthy description would unduly retard the progress of the history I have set myself to narrate.

On the morning of the 15th, search was made for Lola. She was not in the house. A little after mid-day, one of the keepers sent out to explore the Abbey woods and park, reported that he had seen the fugitive in the fir plantation, about a mile from the Abbey. At sight of him she had "scuttled" away like a young deer, but he, obedient to orders had not pursued her.

"It's the smell of the pines as drawed her there," said the Judge; "she was born amongst 'em, end she loves 'em more than laces and satins and picters, and sich like; and it's more nat'ral for the little cuss to sleep on the brown needles than in feathers. Ther's no tamin' her. It's instinc', end like foul weeds in a fair pasture, durn her, there's no gettin' it out of her. Leave her alone, sir and she'll come in when she's hungry, and then I will larn her the inquity of ongratitude!"

In the afternoon we went in a brake to Southampton, driving slowly through the woods, with the possibility of being seen by Lola, who would certainly then have followed us; but we saw nothing of her. At Southampton we bought decent clothes, and spent some time in the hairdresser's. I had my beard shaved off; and we returned to the Abbey, very much altered for the better in appearance.

Miss Lascelles was much distressed about Lola, who was still absent. Brace's explanation of her leaving the Abbey seemed a reasonable one; but her antipathy to Miss Lascelles, which led her to destroy the things she had given her, was to me a mystery,—to Miss Lascelles also, I believe, and a very painful one. She seemed to feel herself in some inscrutable way responsible for the girl's action.

Sir Edmund returned in the evening from London.

"Now, indeed; you look yourself,—a gentleman," he said, shaking my hand cordially. He had made inquiries respecting a lapidary, and learned that the most expert known to the trade, was a man named Carvalho, then occupied at Madrid. With our sanction he wrote at once offering this man his own terms to come to the Abbey and cut the Great Hesper.

At night, the door by which Lola was supposed to have escaped from the Abbey was left open, and a night light was placed in her bedroom.

The next morning the dairymaid said that some one had been at her milk pans in the night; there was no other evidence of Lola having entered the house. After breakfast, I determined to go through the woods myself in search of her. Miss Lascelles wished to accompany me. I ought to have pointed out to her that her company lessened the chances of Lola suffering me to approach her, but I could not deprive myself the pleasure of having such a sweet companion. We saw Lola at the edge of a clearing on the hillside. She watched us as we drew near. I called to her; but she shook her head, and, turning her back upon us, quickly disappeared amongst the pines. The forlorn condition of the girl; her gesture, which seemed full of sadness; the silent fall of leaves; the tristness of the autumn woods,—overcame Miss Lascelles; and, as she walked silently beside me, with her head bent, I saw that she was crying. This episode made a deep impression upon me; yet while my heart ached with sympathy for the poor little savage wandering alone in those silent, still woods, an indescribable happiness stole over my senses. It was the awakening of love.

Sir Edmund had a basket of food placed in the dairy, and the doors again left open.

On the 17th we learned that some bread and fruit had been taken from the dairy in the night. Sir Edmund and I walked through the woods: we saw nothing of Lola. Our conversation turned upon his daughter, and he told me how she had consoled him for the loss of his wife. He spoke with natural pride of her sweet and loyal disposition. Later on, falling upon the subject of the great diamond, he asked how I came to be a miner. I told him of my loss by the failure of the Imperial, of the impossibility of my getting my living as a clerk, etc. Incidentally I referred to my mother's family, and, the name leading him to make further inquiries, he discovered the curious fact that my mother must have been his wife's cousin. How often do we find wide circles of friends linked together in this way! I thought that Miss Lascelles was greatly pleased with the discovery of the distant relationship existing between us; we seemed less remote from each other.

During our absence Miss Lascelles had devoted herself entirely to Van Hoeck; her sympathy had a remarkable effect upon this strange man. When I took him up to his room to dress for dinner, he asked me to open the windows, and place him where he might feel the air. He sat before the open window; the setting sun was reflected upon his sightless eyes. I believe he became unconscious of my presence, and I stood there watching the play of his features. His nostrils dilated, his brows creased together, his lips parted, showing his teeth closely set, the whole expression of the face indicating extreme dread; then the muscles relaxed, for a moment his cadaverous cheeks were tinged with color, the eyes closed, and the lips trembled as if in ecstasy. Again his lids rose, and the look of dread returned to his face. He shrank back in his chair, and blinked his eyes as though to give them light; then suddenly he flung out his arms wildly, and, with a smothered cry of impotent rage, buried his face in his hands, his long, thin fingers pressing the throbbing veins which stood out knotted and hard upon his temples.

"What is the matter, old man?" I asked, putting my hand on his shoulder.

He started, and answered impatiently:

"Nothing, nothing,—a dream!" And then he asked savagely, "Who watches you in the night?"

"This is not the night," I replied, fancying he was yet but half awake.

"Isn't it?" he asked, turning his eyes from one side to the other; then stretching out his hands, as if to Heaven, he cried, "Then what is night?"

Poor wretch, all was indeed night to him. I tried to engage him in conversation, but he waved his hand impatiently, and, getting up, felt his way to the washstand.

"Go down," he said; "Miss Lascelles is more pleasing to the eye than I am; she must be beautiful, for her voice is music, her touch is like the petal of a rose. Where do you keep the diamond? Is it safe?"

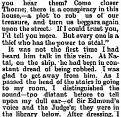
I told him that I now kept it in a belt buckled to my waist.

"Strap it to your wrist again; it is safer," he said; and then, bending his head aside, he listened attentively for a moment, and continued in a lower voice, "They are talking together down there. Creep down and listen. I tell you we are not safe here,—I see that through my blindness. I have faculties in place of that I have lost. Do you hear them? Come closer Thorne; there is a conspiracy in this house,—a plot to rob us of our treasure, and turn us beggars again upon the street. If I could trust you, I'd tell you more. But every one is a thief who has the power to steal."

It was not the first time I had heard him talk in this vein. At Natal, on the ship, he had been in constant dread of being robbed. I was glad to get away from him. As I passed the head of the stairs in going to my room, I distinguished the sound—too distant before to tell upon my dull ear—of Sir Edmund's voice and the Judge's; they were in the library below. After dressing, I joined them, and found Sir Edmund greatly interested in Brace's description of gold mining in California,—a subject upon which he could be eloquent by the hour together.

On the 18th Sir Edmund, Miss Lascelles, and I rode over to Southampton. Miss Lascelles was in her gayest, happiest mood, and in her riding-habit looked more charming than ever.

In returning, we met a friend of Sir Edmund's; he accepted the invitation to take lunch at the Abbey, and rode beside the baronet, ahead of us. We two took the hill so slowly that, coming to the cross-roads, we could not see Sir Edmund and his friend. There were two ways to the Abbey. After a little deliberation, Miss Lascelles laughingly consented to take the longer one.



I FORCED HER HAND TO MY LIPS.

The morning was superb; the woods were glorious. The rich, warm tints of the reddening foliage were reflected on my beautiful companion's cheek; her eyes seemed to catch the glitter of the dew that still hung on the gossamers. I forget what we talked about; but she was full of mirth, and now and then the still woods rang with the musical cadence of her laugh. But suddenly the smile died from her face, and she said,—

"We forget poor little Lola."

And then, as if the words had conjured up her presence, the girl appeared, swiftly speeding between the red boles of the fir trees. We stopped, and I called,—

"Lola, dear, come and speak to me."

She stood still, and looked as if irresolute whether or not to respond to my appeal.

"I will stay here. Go to her," said Miss Lascelles softly.

But, as if she had divined my intention, Lola shook her head mournfully as she had done before, and, going her way, was presently hid by the tall brake. As we crossed the opening where we had previously seen her, I looked back, and perceived her standing in the same place, gazing after us. It was easy to conceive her misery, and the bitter feelings of her heart. She was unaltered, but I was no longer the rough toiler, grateful for a tin of water fetched from the stream. All that was past. I was no longer her companion. I should never, never more, share her hard fate, and look to her to lessen the hardships of existence.

On the 19th we went again into the woods, but on foot, Miss Lascelles and I, straying thither without purpose from the garden where we met. We came to a stream bridged by a single plank supported in the middle. There had been a hand-rail, but it had fallen away in decay. I gave her my hand; the fear of falling made her clasp my fingers tightly. She seemed to enjoy the little danger; it animated her face and eyes with the prettiest, most bewitching expression imaginable. Her hand seemed to communicate the quickened pulsation of her heart. But it was not fear,—it was intoxication, that agitated me; and when she put her foot in safety on the bank, and looked up into my face with bright laughter, I kept her hand in mine, and, when she tried to withdraw it, I forced it to my lips, and pressed a kiss upon it. The color left her cheek, and in a tone of reproach she exclaimed,—"Oh, Mr. Thorne!" and I was ashamed. We walked home, and were very silent on the way. I sought Sir Edmund at once, and, finding him alone, told him that I wished to make his daughter my wife. He was thunderstruck by this sudden and unexpected announcement.

"I love your daughter," I said, "and I can not stay in this house keeping my passion a secret."

"Well," said he, with rather rueful pleasantry, "you have lost no time, Mr. Thorne; but it would have been a poor compliment to my daughter had you failed to percieve her charms."

"I should be dull indeed had they failed to impress me," I replied.

We talked for some time, and finally he said, with emotion:

"I must give up my dear child, sooner or later. Her happiness is dearer to me than anything; and I can wish her no greater blessing than to find a good and worthy husband."

At that moment Edith opened the door, but, seeing us, she stopped in the entrance.

"Come here, Edith," said Sir Edmund; and, taking her hand, he continued, "Mr. Thorne wishes you to be his wife: is that your wish also?"

She buried her burning face in her father's shoulder; she could neither say yes or no.

"It is a question that should not be decided hastily," the Baronet continued; "take time, my dear. Meanwhile, I see no reason for your leaving the house," he added, addressing me.

"Unless—" I faltered.

"Unless Edith wishes it," the Baronet said, helping me out. "True. Shall you feel more at ease, dear, if Mr. Thorne goes away—for a certain time, say? Shall he go?"

Still screening her face Edith shook her head, and then I knew that I had won a treasure greater than the Hesper diamond.

In the afternoon of the 20th Sir Edmund said:

"I have been looking at your engagement, Bernard, from a practical point of view, and a fact occurs to me that, at such a time as this, would probably escape you. That agreement of yours must be altered. You will see that, for Edith's sake, what I call the tontine clause, a clause conferring upon the survivor a deceased partner's share in the Great Hesper should be abrogated. It entails a risk which she must not be exposed to; you understand me?"

I understood what he said perfectly, and agreed with him that the clause must be altered.

"Consult with your partners," he said, "as to what change is advisable. I expect my lawyer here on the 24th, and he can then draw up a legal agreement in accordance with our general wish."

I took the Judge into Van Hoeck's room that night, and there told him of my engagement to Miss Lascelles. Van Hoeck was visibly alarmed when he heard this; and when I went on to say that Sir Edmund wished the clause altered by his lawyer on the 24th, he said quickly, in a low voice,

"The crafty old fox! What does he mean by that?"

"His meaning is obvious enough," I replied; "if I marry Miss Lascelles, and die, she will be dispossessed of my share in the diamond. I can leave her only a legacy of debt."

"Yes, end thet ain't all on it," said the Judge, drawing his wiry chin-tuft through his hand and bending his brow. "Thet ain't all by a lump. We're playing with a marked card in the pack,—a card as might tempt e'er a one on us to foul play."

"What on earth do you mean? Speak plainly if you can," said Van Hoeck, in angry impatience.

"Well, I mean this 'ere," answered the Judge, with slow impressiveness, "thet, if one of my pardners wasn't a gentleman, and t'other wasn't helpless blind, I'm durned if I'd go to bed without a six-shooter under my piller, and my finger on the trigger. I don't allude to one any more'n another; but we'll just take Israel's word for gospel, that every one is a thief if you give him a chance of thievin'; end, at that rate, I'm just as likely as not to murder my two pardners, end git the whole of thet diamond to myself. Consequently, you will allow thet the Squire has a double reason fur wantin' thet agreement altered; fur it aint only the money he's got to secure on to his daughter, but her husbin's life likewise. Time enough for the young lady to be a widder in the nat'ral order of things in gen'al."

TO BE CONTINUED.

He Had Been There Before.

The snow lay soft and noiseless over the housetops and on the trees, while the streets were as smooth and white as a lady's hand. The air was sharp and clear, and the jingle of the sleigh bells made merry music everywhere. Mr. Plaquemine of Louisiana was calling on a pretty Woodward avenue girl.

"I presume, Mr. Plaquemine," she said to him, daintily, as the Southerner looked out upon the winter scene, "that you hardly know in Louisiana what sleighing means."

"Um-er-ah-yes," he hesitated, "it means $10 an hour in Louisiana, but I presume it means considerably less up here."

And the merry sleigh bells on the street all jingled out of tune.—Detroit Free Press.

Tired Woman (in a railway car)—"Please, sir, will you please hold my baby a while? He's crying so I can do nothing with him."

Male Passenger—"Um—what is he crying for?"

"Nothing at all, sir."

"Well—er—what good will it do for me to take him?"

"Then he will have something to cry about."

"Oh, he will?"

"Yes, sir. He'll be crying for me then, and the longer you hold him the louder he'll yell."

"I presume so."

"Yes, sir. Then, when he is real sure it is only me he is crying for, I'll take him and he'll stop."—Street & Smith's Good News.

Aunty—"What became of that kitten you had when I was here before?"

Little Niece (in surprise)—"Why, don't you know?"

"I haven't heard a word. Was she poisoned?"

"No'm."

"Drowned?"

"Oh, no."

"Stolen?"

"No, indeed."

"Hurt in any way?"

"No'm."

A SARATOGA CO. MIRACLE.

HELPLESS FOR YEARS AND EXCLUDED FROM HOSPITALS AS INCURABLE.

The Remarkable Experience of Chas. Quant as Investigated by an Albany, N. Y., Journal Reporter—A Story of Surpassing Interest.

Albany, N. Y. Journal, March 4th.

SARATOGA, March 4th.—For some time past there have been reports here and elsewhere in Saratoga county of a most remarkable—indeed, so remarkable as to be miraculous—cure of a most severe case of locomotor ataxia, or creeping paralysis, simply by the use of a popular remedy known as "Pink Pills for Pale People," prepared and put up by the Dr. Williams Medicine Company, Morristown, N. Y., and Brockville, Ont. The story was to the effect that Mr. Chas. A. Quant, of Galway, who for the last six or eight years has been a great sufferer from creeping paralysis and its attendant ills, and who had become utterly powerless of all self-help, had, by the use of a few boxes of the Pink Pills for Pale People, been so fully restored to health as to be able to walk about the street without the aid of crutches. The fame of this wonderful, miraculous cure was so great that the Evening Journal reporter thought it worth his while to go to Galway to call on Mr. Quant, to learn from his lips, and from the observation and testimony of his neighbors, if his alleged cure was a fact or only an unfounded rumor. And so, he drove to Galway and spent a day and a night there in visiting Mr. Quant, getting his story and interviewing his neighbors and fellow-townsmen. It may be proper to say that Galway is a pretty little village of about 400 people, delightfully located near the centre of the town of Galway, in Saratoga county and about 17 miles from Saratoga Springs. Upon inquiry, the residence of Mr. Charles A. Quant was easily found, for everybody seemed to know him, speak well of him and to be overflowing with surprise and satisfaction at his wonderful cure and restoration to the activities of enterprising citizenship, for Mr. Quant was born in Galway and had spent most of his life there. Mr. Quant was found at his pretty home, on a pleasant street nearly opposite the academy. In response to a knock at the door it was opened by a man who, in reply to an inquiry if Mr. Quant lived there and was at home, said: "I am Mr. Quant. Will you come in?" After a little general and preliminary conversation, and after he had been apprised of the object for which the Journal reporter had called upon him, he, at request, told the story of himself and of his sickness and terrible sufferings, and of the ineffectual treatment he had had, and of his final cure by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, and cheerfully gave assent to its use for publication. He said: "My name is Charles A. Quant. I am 37 years old. I was born in the village of Galway, and, excepting while traveling on business and a little while in Amsterdam, have spent my whole life here. My wife is a native of Ontario. Up to about eight years ago I had never been sick and was then in perfect health. I was fully six feet tall, weighed 180 pounds and was very strong. For 12 years I was a traveling salesman for a piano and organ company and had to do, or at least did do, a great deal of heavy lifting, got my meals very irregularly and slept in enough 'spare beds' in country houses to freeze any ordinary man to death, or at least give him the rheumatism. About eight years ago I began to feel distress in my stomach and consulted several doctors about it. They all said it was dyspepsia, and for dyspepsia I was treated by various doctors in different places, and took all the patent medicines I could hear of that claimed to be a cure for dyspepsia. But I continued to grow gradually worse for four years. Then I began to have pain in my back and legs and became conscious that my legs were getting weak and my step unsteady, and then I staggered when I walked. Having received no benefit from the use of patent medicines, and feeling that I was constantly growing worse, I then, upon advice, began the use of electric belts, pads and all the many different kinds of electric appliances I could hear of, and spent hundreds of dollars for them, but they did me no good. (Here Mr. Quant showed the Journal reporter an electric suit of underwear for which he paid $124). In the fall of 1888 the doctors advised a change of climate, so I went to Atlanta, Ga., and acted as agent for the Estey Organ Company. While there I took a thorough electric treatment, but it only seemed to aggravate my disease, and the only relief I could get from the sharp and distressing pains was to take morphine. The pain was so intense at times that it seemed as though I could not stand it, and I almost longed for death as the only certain relief. In September of 1888 my legs gave out entirely and my left eye was drawn to one side, so that I had double sight and was dizzy. My trouble so effected my whole nervous system that I had to give up business. Then I returned to New York and went to the Roosevelt hospital, where for four months I was treated by specialists and they pronounced my case locomotor ataxia and incurable. After I had been under treatment by Prof. Starr and Dr. Ware for four months, they told me they had done all they could for me. Then I went to the New York hospital on Fifteenth street, where, upon examination, they said I was incurable and would not take me in. At the Presbyterian hospital they examined me and told me the same thing. In March, 1890, I was taken to St. Peter's hospital in Albany, where Prof. H. H. Hun frankly told my wife my case was hopeless; that he could do nothing for me and that she had better take me back home and save my money. But I wanted to make a trial of Prof. Hun's famous skill and I remained under his treatment for nine weeks, but secured no benefit. All this time I had been growing worse. I had become entirely paralyzed from my waist down and had partly lost control of my hands. The pain was terrible, my legs felt as though they were freezing and my stomach would not retain food, and I fell away to 120 pounds. In the Albany hospital they put 17 big burns on my back one day with red hot irons and after a few days they put 14 more burns on and treated me with electricity, but I got worse rather than better; lost control of my bowels and water, and upon advice of the doctor, who said there was no hope for me, I was brought home, where it was thought that death would soon come to relieve me of my sufferings. Last September, while in this helpless and suffering condition, a friend of mine in Hamilton, Ont., called my attention to the statement of one John Marshall, whose case had been similiar to my own, and who had been cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

In this case Mr. Marshall, who is a prominent member of the Royal Templars of Temperance, had after four years of constant treatment by the most eminent Canadian physicians been pronounced incurable, and was paid the $1000 total dissability claim allowed by the order in such cases. Some months after Mr. Marshall began a course of treatment with Dr. William's Pink Pills; and after taking some 15 boxes was fully restored to health.

I thought I would try them and my wife sent for two boxes of the pills and I took them according to the directions given on the wrapper on each box. For the first few days the cold baths were pretty severe, as I was so very weak, but I continued to follow instructions as to taking the pills and treatment, and even before I had used up the two boxes of pills I began to feel beneficial effects from them. My pains were not so bad; I felt warmer; my head felt better; my food began to relish and agree with me; I could straighten up; the feeling began to come back into my limbs; I began to be able to get about on crutches; my eye came back again as good as ever, and now, after the use of eight boxes of the pills—at a cost of only $4,00—see—I can with the help of a cane only, walk all about the house and yard, can saw wood, and on pleasant days I walk down town. My stomach trouble is gone; I have gained 10 pounds; I feel like a new man, and when the spring opens I expect to be able to renew my organ and piano agency. I cannot speak in too high terms of Dr Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, as I know they saved my life after all the doctors had given me up as incurable."

Other citizens of Galway, seeing the wonderful cure of Mr. Quant by the Pink Pills for Pale People, are using them. Frederick Sexton, a sufferer from rheumatism, said he was finding great benefit from their use, and Mr. Schultz, who had suffered from chronic dysentery for years, said he had taken two boxes of the pills and was already cured.

Mr. Quant had also tried Faith cure, with experts of that treatment in Albany and Greenville, S. C., but with no beneficial results.

A number of the more prominent citizens of Galway, as Rev. C. E. Herbert, of the Presbyterian church; Prof. James E. Kelly, principal of the academy; John P. and Harvey Crouch, and Frank and Edward Willard, merchants, and many others to whom Mr. Quant and his so miraculous cure by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, are well known, were pleased to have the opportunity of bearing testimony to the high character of Mr. Quant, and of verifying the story of his recovery from the terrible affliction from which he had for so long a time been a sufferer.

Truly, the duty of the physician is not to save life, but to heal disease.

The remarkable result from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in the case of Mr. Quant, induced the reporter to make further enquiries concerning them, and he ascertained that they are not a patent medicine in the sense in which that term is generally used, but a highly scientific preparation, the result of years of study and careful experiment. They have no rival as a blood builder and nerve restorer and have met with unparalleled success in the treatment of such diseases as paralysis, rheumatism, sciatica, St. Vitus' dance, palpitation of the heart, that tired feeling which affects so many, and all diseases depending upon a watery condition of the blood or shattered nerves.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities, and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood and restore the glow of health to pale or sallow cheeks. In the case of men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork, or excesses of whatever nature.

On further inquiry the writer found that these pills are manufactured by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont., and Morristown, N. Y., and are sold in boxes, (never in bulk by the hundred) at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., from either addresses. The price at which these pills are sold makes a course of treatment comparatively inexpensive as compared with other remedies, or medical treatment.

A HUMAN FERRET.

He Is an Expressman by Day and Ratcatcher by Night.

"There lives a man in our town" who is responsible for the death of many rats, says the Kansas City Times. By day he follows his humble calling as an expressman, and does not give evidence in actions or appearance of his sanguinary disposition. With the approach of night he becomes a different man. While by day he is Dr. Jekyll to the innumerable colonies of rats, at night he is to them a Mr. Hyde.

Night after night, regardless of the weather, he saunters forth with four assistant terriers, each of whom is a battle-scarred midnight hero of back alleys. From 8 o'clock until after 12 he walks up and down the alleys in the business section of the city and gives up his being to the joyful contemplation of his rat-killers at work.

When he sees four black shadows cut swiftly through the darkness and hears the dying squeak he knows that his self-imposed mission has been forwarded somewhat to success. Inasmuch as he has been killing rats in this fashion for several years, it may readily be seen that his record is up in the thousands. He is a tall, powerfully built man of middle age, and habitually wears a faded black cap, the visor of which he pulls down quite over his blue eyes.

He takes as much pride and enjoyment in his work as his four assistants do in the aggregate, and vows that he will keep it up until he has killed 100,000 of the rodents.

Fire! Fire! That Dreadful Cry

Is fraught with import doubly dire to the unhappy man who beholds his dwelling or his warehouse feeding the devouring elements uninsured. Happily most people who can, insure—everything but health. Nine-tenths of us neglect the preservation of this when it is in palpable jeopardy. Incipient indigestion, liver complaint, la grippe, inaction of the kidneys and bladder and malaria are all counteracted by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

Silence is golden. The gas-meter never says a word.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

"German Syrup"

William McKeekan, Druggist at Bloomingdale, Mich. "I have had the Asthma badly ever since I came out of the army and though I have been in the drug business for fifteen years, and have tried nearly everything on the market, nothing has given me the slightest relief until a few months ago, when I used Boschee's German Syrup. I am now glad to acknowledge the great good it has done me. I am greatly relieved during the day and at night go to sleep without the least trouble." ⓞ

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Mrs. Robert F. Tisson, wife of a New York broker and a society leader, was granted a decree of divorce at Yankton.

The story published in Chicago that the appeal in the De Sieurs case at Sioux Falls has been abandoned is a fake. The appeal has been perfected and the case will go up.

At a special meeting of the Moorhead council the resignation of Dr. John Kurtz as health officer of this city was accepted and Dr. D. C. Darrow was appointed in his stead.

Judge John W. Nolin died at Rapid City of consumption. He was widely known in Dakota, Nebraska and Iowa as an able jurist, and prominent leader in the Democratic party.

Col. Charles F. Thompson, one of the wealthiest mine and cattle owners in the Black Hills, and prominent as a leader of the Democracy in the state, died suddenly, aged sixty-three years.

Robbers attempted to enter the Madison State Bank the other morning by removing the rear door. They were discovered by a marshal and several shots exchanged. The men escaped.

Hon. C. G. Williams, register of the land office was stricken with paralysis at Watertown for the third time. His death is momentarily expected. Mr. Williams was for several terms a representative in congress from the Janesville, Wis., district.

Stockmen west of the Missouri river are making active preparations for the spring round-up. All report stock in fine condition and the losses through the winter so small as not to be worth mentioning. It is believed shipments this season will be the heaviest ever made from the stock ranches of Western South Dakota.

Albert Whipple, a squaw man who killed an Indian, Lays-On-His-Mother-In-Law, by kicking and beating him to death, was discharged at Deadwood, as it was clearly shown the crime was not committed on the reservation and therefore the United States has no jurisdiction.

The divorce case of Alice Beverly Crane vs. Walter Crane, instituted at Miller some time ago, has been dismissed by the plaintiff. This promised to be one of the most sensational trials of its kind in the state, on account of the connection of the parties at interest. The reason for the discontinuance is said to be fear of a vigorous defense.

Mrs. Ayres wife of George V. Ayres, past grand master of Masons in Dakota Territory and State of South Dakota, died at Rapid City. Her maiden name was Kate Towle. She was born in Nebraska in 1850 and was prominently connected in that and other states. She leaves a husband and a son six years old.

Several prairie fires were noticed in different directions from Kimball, during the recent high wind. No serious damage has so far been heard of. One fire came very near to the village of Pukawana, west of here, and every body was out fighting the flames. A rain next morning put all the fires out.

WISCONSIN.

The 7-year-old son of William Richel was killed at Oskosh by being run over by a wagon.

Knapp, Stout & Co.'s two planing mills and lumber yards at Cedar Falls burned. The loss is $75,000.

The stock of Jeweler Julius Kahn of Milwaukee, was seized by the sheriff on six attachments, aggregating $10,830.16. Mr. Kahn's assets are said to be about $35,000.

M. C. Richard's harness shop at Washburn was closed by Deputy Sheriff Luffin on a chattel mortgage of $300 held by Mrs. S. Jenkins, of Milwaukee.

Mrs. Geo. L. Richards was arrested at Delavan on the charge of sending obscene letters through the mail. She is the wife of Dr. Richards.

Mrs. Lovelamasker, superintendent of schools for St. Croix county is holding her spring examinations at Hudson. About thirty preachers are present.

Mathew Cleary, an old settler of De Pere, was found dead in his bed at his home in Hollandtown. Asthma was the cause of his sudden death.

During school hours at Eau Claire, George Eklund, twelve years old, took a revolver from his pocket in the Lincoln school, West side, and commenced to fool with it. It went off and sent a 22-caliber bullet into his thigh, making a serious wound.

Thomas Hoag, while felling timber on his homestead near Washburn, was struck by a falling tree and received injuries from which he will probably die. Several ribs were broken and the spine severly injured. He has a wife but no children.

The City bank at Elroy was blown open by burglars and about $3,500 secured. The robbers have escaped. It is supposed they left on the south-bound train, going either to Chicago or Milwaukee. Detectives are on the watch for them.

The Jackson County Milling company sold their steam flouring mill at Black River Falls, to Martin Martins of Iowa. The mill was built a few years ago but has not been run on a paying basis. The consideration is about 25 per cent of the original cost, $25,000. This is the best mill in this part of the state.

C. J. Bell, chairman of the county board, brings suit against the Ashland News for libel for $10,000. The article was published as a special from Bayfield, March 22, alleging conspiracy between Bell, Drummond and Dahlby, two other members, to keep A. M. Warden from assuming the office of treasurer. Drummond and Dahlby will begin suit also.

Albert Vanslyke, arrested at Center Junction by Deputy Marshall Francis, pleaded guilty to stealing a mail pouch and was bound over to the next term of the district court.

Some little school boys playing in the rear of the Logan school yard at Fairfield found the dead body of an infant in a brush heap. Marks on its person plainly show that it was murdered. The author of the crime is as yet unkrown.

Fire in the Drake University Building, at Fifth and Mulberry streets, Des Moines, also occupied by the Journal Printing Company, damaged the building and contents about $8,000; insurance for two-thirds. The origin of the fire is a mystery.

The Red Cross Committee at Dubuque which has been engaged in raising funds for Russian relief, report $1,125 secured. A check for the amount was sent to the chairman at Des Moines. Other contributions will follow. This is the city's contribution, the county has been heard from.

An earnest effort was made to drum up a delegation of Burlington Republicans to go to Des Moines and help urge the legislature for the relief of prohibition but none could be found who would place themselves on record. Burlington will not be represented as a consequence.

The application for a receiver for the Dubuque Electric Railway Light and Power company has been withdrawn. Dr. Allen, who arrived from Davenport to resist the application, denies that $95,000 of the company's funds or any other sum was misappropriated during his presidency.

Mayor Fawcett of Burlington has issued orders that all gamblers and other persons without visible means of support shall leave the city at once and that saloons shall close at midnight and all day Sunday. The police are in sympathy with the mayor and will see that his orders are carried out.

FAVORS A CANAL.

To Connect the Great Lakes with St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn. Special, Telegram. —At the chamber of commerce meeting yesterday morning a report was received from the committee on Mississippi river relative to the proposed canal between Lake Superior and the Mississippi at the Twin Cities. The committee consists of C. C. Andrews, H. S. Fairchild, W. A. Somers, David Day and E. J. Hodgson. The report read as follows:

On the 2d day of December last this chamber adopted resolutions requesting the Minnesota senators and our representative in congress to use their efforts for an appropriation for a thorough survey to determine what, if any, practicable line for a canal, with capacity for barges and vessels that could navigate the lakes, exists to unite Lake Superior with the Mississippi river at the Twin Cities. As reasons for such a survey the following facts may be stated:

In 1875 the legislature of Minnesota appropriated $3,000 for a survey for a canal to connect Lake Superior with the St. Croix river, and Messrs. L. K. Stannard of Taylor's Falls and R. R. Davis of Stillwater, as commissioners, the same year, with their assistants, made a partial survey of several routes. Their report was transmitted to the legislature by Gov. C. K. Davis and was printed. Their report did not determine which route was the most practicable, but gives the impression that several routes are practicable. If a canal between Lake Superior and the St. Croix should prove practicable it is supposed that the latter river to its mouth and the Mississippi thence to the Twin Cities would be improved to the same capacity as the canal. A canal thus uniting our greatest lake system with our greatest river system would be emphatically a national improvement, and ought to be undertaken by congress rather than by any separate state.

During the season of 1891 the rate of transportation of hard coal by railroad from Buffalo to Chicago was $1.78 per ton, and from Chicago to St. Paul and Minneapolis, $2.50 per ton; total, $4.28. By water the rate from Buffalo to Duluth was 40 cents per ton; dockage at Duluth, 50 cents per ton, and from Duluth to St. Paul and Minneapolis, by railway (159 miles), $1.50; total, $2.40. Were there to the two cities mentioned, they would save a million dollars a year in freight charges on the single item of coal.

The Miami canal from Toledo to Cincinnati is, with its feeders, 282 miles long, and, like many other canals in our country, has proved of immense benefit in regulating and cheapening transportation. One of its incidental benefits is that the water power furnished by its locks has developed manufacturing industry in employing a capital of over $10,000,000. Ohio has eighty-eight counties, yet the twenty-seven counties crossed by the canal comprise more than half the wealth of the state. It is sometimes suggested that railroad companies would be likely to oppose this canal protect, but such a view is very short-sighted, because the increased manufacturing and industrial development which the canal would produce would vastly increase railroad earnings. So, also, it is sometimes said that the lake cities, Duluth and Superior, would be jealous of such a canal. That also is absurd. The great city of Liverpool does not object to the canals which extend from her harbor to the interior cities. On the contrary these canals have greatly increased her trade and wealth. Witness, for example, the celebrated Liverpool and Leeds canal which has made the latter interior city a phenomenon of manufactures, and which, by the way, has an elevation above the harbor of Liverpool of 413 feet or about as much as can be expected on the canal proposed. These and many other facts and reasons justify this community in demanding the above mentioned survey; and it is desirable that our senators and representatives in congress be impressed with the deep interest felt here in the subject.

Resolved, That the president communicate a copy of the foregoing to Senators Davis and Washburn and Representative Castle as expressive of the views of this chamber.

The report was adopted with the request from the chamber that the newspapers publish it in full.

Sang Himself Into the Peerage.

The death of Lady Castlemaine recalls to mind the circumstances under which the Irish peerage of Castlemaine was bestowed on William Handcock, founder of the family, for Union services, which fully bear out Mr. Lecky's charge that the peerage of Ireland is associated with memories not of honor but of shame.

The story is thus tersely told in the Black List of the supporters of the Union in the Irish House of Commons, preserved in Sir Jonah Barrington's "Rise and Fall of the Irish Nation." This is the extract:

"William Handcock, Athlone. An extraordinary instance. He made and sang songs against the Union in 1799 at a public dinner of the Opposition, and made and sang songs for the Union in 1800. He got a peerage."

A Burglar's Invention.

The key-chain worn by many gentlemen is the invention of a noted burglar who spent many years of his life in a dungeon cell for plying his vocation in the hotels of this city. While at work one stormy night trying to turn the lock of a Walnut street door the false key dropped in the snow, and while searching for it a watchman came along and locked the burglar up and had him sent to Moyamensing. Having some ingenuity, he thought of having keys fastened to a chain so that when a limb of the law appeared he could fly without a thought about the keys, and found it worked like a charm. He has now seen the error of his ways, and lives comfortably on a royalty from the manufacturers.—Philadelphia Record.

A Princess' Choice.

A sister of the late king of Spain consented to mingle her proud Castilian blood with that of the people by marrying a doctor of medicine who had not a solitary handle to his name. When the courtiers heard of the infanta's choice they turned up the whites of their eyes to the sky like ducks in a thunder-storm at the bare notion of this superb patrician lily giving herself to a husband belonging to the professional classes. The doctor in question is well provided for mentally and physically and his spouse is evidently proud of him, for when she was twitted with marrying an untitled individual she said: "I preferred a man without a title to a title without a man."

The committee on permanent organization was "out" but a short time, and on returning Mort Wilkinson reported that the committee was in favor of making the temporary organization permanent

FOR CLEVELAND.

Ex-Senator Mort S. Wilkinson came forward and presented the following resolutions of instruction to the delegation to the national convention, which were adopted:

Resolved, First—That we present the name of Grover Cleveland for the presidency, and we expect our delegates in the national convention to be hereafter presented, to use every honorable means by their united voices and votes, to assist in his nomination.

Second—That in their votes in said convention the delegation shall vote as a unit, the majority of the delegation determining what the vote of the entire delegation shall be.

Third—That the delegation shall continue to vote and work for Grover Cleveland as long as there is reasonable hope of his nomination.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

The report of the committee on resolutions was read by P. J. Smalley, chairman of the committee. It was adopted with a rush and without a protest, after which the convention adjourned. The resolutions were as follows:

That the Democratic party of Minnesota once more dedicates its first and best energies to the accomplishment of a single end—the complete, but the intelligent and gradual reform of a system of tariff duties which is both corrupting and unjust. We are opposed to the theory of protection, as a manifestation of the principle of paternalism in politics with which our party is traditionally at war. That system creates burdens which affect different classes and sections of our country disproportionately and inequitably. It stimulates and maintains monopolies among us. It saps the strength of our industrial energies. It pollutes the springs of political action.

We aim to secure laws by which the revenues of the nation shall be accommodated to the needs of a government, economically administered within its legitimate sphere, which shall make commerce and industry free and shall guard their freedom when attained, which shall make no man poor that another may be rich; which shall deliver legislators from the corrupting influence of a system of the most subtle and resistless bribery.

We hold, in accordance with the traditional policy of our party, to the use of both gold and silver and that the sole coinage function of the government is to examine the relative values of the metals of coinage as established by the commercial world, and if there has been a sufficient fluctuation in the value of either to make the existing ratios unequal, then to readjust the ratios so that the number of grains of either metal in the unit of coinage, the dollar, shall be equivalent in value, and then to permit the free unrestricted coinage of both metals.

We join the Democracy of New York in demanding the repeal of the Sherman silver coinage act. We condemn that act as an attempt to distract the friends of honest bi-metalism, and denounce it as calculated to debase our currency, contract the circulating medium and wreck the confidence and safety of the business world.

The Democrats of Minnesota delight to renew the pledge of their devotion to an unrivaled leader who embodies the purest principles of the American Democracy. We recognize in ex-President Cleveland that rare combination—a loyal and able party chief, an honest and straightforward administrator of public affairs, a far-seeing statesman, and an unselfish man. We need in this Northwest his name to aid the Democracy of the nation in driving from the United States senate the Republican majority behind which protection is securely entrenched. The gains which will give this must come from the Northwest. The South has given us all she can. Republican gerrymander deprives New England of power to help. Under the impetus given our cause by Grover Cleveland the Northwest has given three senators already. With him as our candidate we guarantee another from Minnesota.

A Joke on Her Majesty.

Few people are perhaps aware how thoroughly the queen enjoys a joke. A gentleman-in-waiting, whom let us call Mr. A——, distinguished for his imitative powers and dramatic talent, is not infrequently called upon to trip the light fantastic toe, figuratively speaking when in attendance at Windsor and Balmoral.

One day the great lady, looking with a certain austerity straight into the face of Mr. A——, demanded:

"Now, Mr. A——, I am perfectly well aware that when my back is turned you imitate me. I wish to see you do it now, this minute!"

Poor Mr. A—— fell straightway into the royal trap, crimsoned, faltered, utterly lost his countenance.

"Ah!" exclaimed the queen, "I see I was right! You ought to be ashamed of yourself," and then added, laughing as heartily as any school girl, "but don't do it again."

C. G. Rapp received a large consignment of new dry goods last week,

We learn that Wm. Eickhoff has sold his house across the river to Andrew Ness,

A. J. McLaughlin went down to Ada to-day to spend a few days with his brother,

Fred Bakke came down from Thief River Falls to-day and took the train for Stephen.

Yesterday's mail failed to arrive from Crookston yesterday, owing to the bad condition of the roads.

Miss Esther Holmes came up with her brother last Friday and will stay until Emil has fully recovered.

Mike Fricker came over from Fisher to-day to spend a few days with his brother. He has a position in the flour mill there.

Wiley Tindolph, of Minneapolis, one of the proprietors of Red Lake Rapids, an addition to Thief River Falls, was in town last Monday.

Mr, Pratt, of Minneapolis, was in town the first of the week on his way to Thief River Falls where he will engage in the hotel business.

One of the worst blizzards of the season raged last Monday. Considerable snow fell and sleighs have again taken the place of wagons.

The late blizzard has considerably delayed seeding and it will be several weeks before the farmers can get started with their Spring work.

Emil Holmes returned from Crookston last Monday having about recovered from his attack of typhoid fever. He has had a hard siege of it but is now improving slowly.

W. B, Fuller, has closed his term of school in dist. 166 and is now in town enjoying a short vacation, He expects to commence teaching again on the 18th of this month in Dist. 73.

Agent Brady, of Angus, will arrive next Friday and take charge of the station here. Miss Nellie McAvoy who has been in the office here for the past month will take the Angus station,

A number of the friends of Miss Josie Harris treated her to a pleasant surprise last Saturday evening. The evening was spent in dancing and other amusements and all present report having had an enjoyable time.

We are indebted to Mr. H. L. Greenlee, of Crookston, for assistance in sticking type for this issue, Mr. Greenlee has been spending the winter on the reservation on the survey and is now on his way to his home at Crookston.

We are informed that Elmer Stranahan will sell old overshoes during his spare time for the next few weeks while business is dull. He presents a very dashing appearance with his new sample case and has great success with the ladies even if he don't sell a shoe.

Agent C. McKallor expects to leave for West Superior next Monday. He has secured a good position in the N, P. freight office there, Mr. McKallor is a first-class railroad man and will undoubtedly fill his new position with credit, His many friends here wish him good luck in his new venture.

Such expressions as "Merriam-Nelson," "Washburne-Lind," and "Davis-McGill," in our so-called Republican organs, betrays the truth. The truth is that our would-be party leaders are not seeking to serve the people but secretly combining to fool the people into serving them. Some people had rather be served by a democrat than themselves be servants to a self-styled Republicans, There may be enough of such people in Minnesota to make "Merriam-Nelson," "Washburn-Lind" and "Davis-McGill" feel pretty sick.—Midway News.

Seed Oats For Sale.

I have 400 bushels of White Russian side oats perfectly clean which I will sell for seed at 85 cents per bushel.

O. A. Wiste.

We are informed that one of St. Hilaire's fair young ladies is devoting considerable of her spare time lately practicing with a revolver, with a view of exercising her leap-year prerogative and asking her devoted swain to declare his intentions. It is rumored that the young man like "Davy Crocket's coon" will cry "Don't shoot; I am yours," and there is small probabilities of blood being shed.

If the education of the Indians is at all keeping pace with the increasing appropriations made for the purpose of their enlightenment they will all be qualified for position as college professors, for these appropriations have increased from $20,000 in 1879 to $2,500,000 for the present year. This would indicate that, at the present time, there must be about a dozen teachers to each individual Indian student.

At the last meeting of the board of world's fair managers of Minnesota, a committee was appointed to arrange for the preparation and publication of a pamphlet on Minnesota and her resources for distribution at Chicago next year, This is a very important and essential piece of work. A pamphlet of this kind, written for the people should be attractively worded and illustrated; condensed, yet omitting nothing touching the resources and advantages of the state. It will bring thousands of people into the state if it is properly prepared. Minneapolis Journal,

The advance ripple of the immigration wave advancing upon this fortune favored section are growing larger every day. Scores of families have already arrived this spring and every train brings more of them. Thousands from all parts of the United States and from foreign countries are on their way to the Red River Valley, And while the Valley is so large and the distributing facilities so good that the old-fashioned boom with its attendant discomforts and hardships is lacking the movement is none the less a fact Six months hence will see the population of the valley enormously in advance of present figures,—Marshall County Leader,

The shameful revelations of the hasty naturilization of aliens just off the ships which brought them from Europe to New York are confirmatory of the real necessity of the passage of the Oats' naturilization bill by congress, no matter if it is a presidential year. The bill is conspicuously right in that it requires a continuous residence of five years preceding admission to citizenship and then no one is admitted unless he will prove that he has no anarchistic or polygamistic affiliations and that; in every other respect he is fit to be a citizen. And he must bring the strongest corroborative evidence to sustain his oath. This is a common sense naturalization measure. It will right a grevious wrong done to the American born.—Minneapolis Journal,

A strange scene is being enacted on the river at St. Louis which shows what a wonderful change has taken place in the status of the Negro race in this country since 1861. Then every colored man south of the free states was as abject in his manner as he could have been if he had been manacled both hand and foot; but two thousand of these same black men are now on a strike, and no steamer can either take or discharge a cargo at St. Louis for want of help. The men are said to be as orderly as men can be under such circumstances, having submitted their grievances to the vessel owners in writing and no redress having been granted, they are still idle and all boats are lying at the wharves. The peculiar feature of the case is, the federation of labor is said to be backing them.—Crookston Times.

The defeat of the silver bill in congress has brought to light the real cause of the great effort which was made to secure its passage. It now transpires that the silver market was so glutted with the immense production of the mines during the past year that there was no hope for the mine owners being able to dispose of their product except by having the limit on coining the metal removed, It is said now that several of the great mines of Montana and Utah will be shut down until the demand for silver for other purposes than that of being made into coin will warrant opening them again. This shows very plainly that silver would have been coined in such vast quantities that it would soon have been depreciated in value by gold being withdrawn from circulation, and the people would finally have lost the thirty or forty cents on the dollar which the mine owners would have gained if the bill had become a law for the depreciation would not have come until they would have unloaded immense quantities upon the country.—Crookston Times.

New machinery for the manufacture of binding twine has been placed in the penitentiary at Stillwater, and eight thousand pounds of the string will be made at the institution, When the season for using binding twine arrives, the prison authorities will have on hand a stock sufficient to frustrate any attempt on the part of twine makers of the country to advance the price beyond a reasonable figure. It is a fortunate thing for the farmers of Minnesota that the twine trust of the country has been thus checked, and those gentleman who have so successfully advocating twine making at Stillwater should be handsomely remembered by the farmers.

Granite Falls Tribune: The latest political gossip is to the effect that Governor Merriam and Knute Nelson have formed and alliance for the mutual advancement politically, by which one is to be governor and the other U. S. Senator, as future events may determine It is said that word has gone forth to all the governor's henchmen to rustle for delegates to the state convention who are favorable to Nelson but uninstructed. If this version be correct there will be music in the air, and Davis' friends will don war paint to do battle for their chief. The time has gone when two or three men can control the politics of this state, even with a barrel behind them, and those who are said to have made this deal better keep an eye out that the people don't catch onto their scheme and dump them overboard altogether. The campaign is going to be a hot one and the party cannot afford to must not have any dissension within its ranks.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Kristoffer K. Sandmoen, and Carrie Sandmoen his wife, mortgagors, to Albert O. Runice, mortgagee, dated the first day of March 1890, and recorded as a mortgage in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk in the state of Minnesota on the 13th day of March 1890 at 4:30 o'clock p. m. in book 48 of mortgages on pages 418 to 421 inclusive on which there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the amount of seven hundred and fifty-eight dollars and sixty cents ($758.60) and no action has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, which sale will be made at the front door of the court house at the city of Crookston, in the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, at public auction by the sheriff of said county, or by his duly authorized deputy, on Saturday the fourteenth day of May 1892 at 2 o'clock, in the afternoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage with the interest thereon and costs and expenses of sale and statutory attorney fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and so to be sold are the lot, piece or parcel of land, situated in the county of Polk in the state of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:—Lot number six (6) of Section seven (7), and the east one-half of the northwest quarter (E. ½, N. W. ¼), and lot number one (1) of section (8) all in township one hundred and fifty-two (152), north of range forty-three (43) west of the fifth principal meridian.

SELECTIONS

HYPNOTISM.

Some Examples of Its Unconscious Influence on Particular Persons.

Hypnotism, which is now the subject of much intelligent and well directed modern research and is also, unfortunately, the plaything of a class of wandering stage performers, is the lineal descendant of many ancient beliefs. I have made for myself a number of counter experiments. Those which I instituted consisted in eliminating precisely those elements which were supposed to be the efficient causes of the phenomena produced.

Thus, the first and most efficient cause of this mesmeric, hypnotic, magnetic or electrobiological condition of the subject was generally assumed to be the will power of the operator or some fluid, magnetic or electrical, physical or other emanating from the operator or from some object he had touched, or which he had otherwise impregnated or invested with an influence or fluid or power proceeding from himself. The first thing I did was to ascertain whether there was anything electrical or magnetic in the phenomena. The most delicate electrical instruments showed that there was not.

In the second class of control experiments I eliminated my will in one set of experiments, and in another set it in direct opposition to the result to be obtained. First, I did away with all passes or gestures, and simply sat in front of my subjects in a mental attitude of indifference and curiosity. I did not will them to sleep, but I allowed them to look at me or at a coin or at a silver spoon strapped six inches in front of the eye or at the tip of their own nose. The same results were attained. I went further.

Staying at the well known country house in Kent of a distinguished banker in this city, formerly member from Greenwich, I had been called upon to set to sleep and to arrest a continuous barking cough of a young lady who was staying in the house, and who was thus a torment to herself and her friends. I sat her down in front of a lighted candle which I assured her I had previously mesmerized. Presently her cough ceased and she fell into a profound sleep, which lasted till noon of the next day. No one had been able to awaken her, and I found great difficulty in doing so.

That night I sat opposite to her at a large dinner party, and she presently became drowsy, and had to be led from the table, alleging, to my great confusion, that I was again mesmerizing her. She became so susceptible to my supposed mesmeric influence that it was found expedient to take her to London, and catching sight of me through a car window at the station she went into a sleep which lasted through the journey, and recurred at intervals for several days afterward.

This was the history of a candle supposed to be invested with mesmeric influence, and therefore acting as though it were. I may add that when I proceeded to a more active and direct intervention of my will, opposing sleep, the results were not affected negatively. So long as the person operated on believed that my will was that she should sleep, sleep followed. The most energetic willing in my internal consciousness failed to prevent it, where the usual physical methods of hypnotism by stillness, repose or a fixed gaze, or the verbal order to sleep, were employed.

Thus, then, we have arrived at proof that the condition produced in these cases, by whatever term it may be designated, is always subjective. It is independent of passes or gestures. It has no relation to any fluid emanating from the operator. It has no relation to his will, or to any influence which he exercises upon objects. Distance does not affect it, or nearness, or the intervention of any conductors or nonconductors, whether silk or glass or stone, or even a brick wall.

We can send the order to sleep by telephone or by telegraph. We can practically get the same results while eliminating the operator, if we can contrive to influence the imagination or to affect the physical condition of the subject by any one of a great number of contrivances.—Ernest Hart in Nineteenth Century.

Explosions That Produced No Rain.

Over two years ago the cogwheel road was graded to the top of Pike's Peak. Thinking that explosions on a high, isolated mountain, rising far above the adjacent country like Pike's Peak, would produce rain if anywhere, I especially noted the weather. Tremendous explosions occurred daily for some months. The reports were often heard thirty to forty miles, and many of them at elevations between 13,000 and 14,147 feet. Yet all this happened in one of the driest years ever known in Colorado, when often for days or weeks there was no precipitation even on the mountains.—Cor. Science.

A Novel Wager.

A pig is a very observant animal, and when walking usually turns its head from side to side to see what is going on around it. This well known habit has led to a novel wager in Belfast, Me. A man there, to win a bet of $5, will attempt to drive a pig a mile, and believes that he can so control the animal that it will not once turn around to see the driver.—Yankee Blade.

Whipped His Twenty-one-year-old Boy.

A Norwalk (Conn.) young man, twenty-one years old, fell in love with and insisted on "keeping company" with a young woman in the neighborhood in spite of his father's violent opposition. Whereupon catching the two together on the street the other day, the irate father seized his son, bent him over, and gave him a good old fashioned flogging.—Philadelphia Ledger.

RAILROAD JOTTINGS.

The Canadian Express company, which has hitherto operated the express business on the Grand Trunk railroad, has been bought out by the latter company.

The National Railroad Clerks' association, which is less than two years old, now has associations at sixteen different railroad points and a membership of 1,100.

The Chicago and Alton has adopted the plan of the Pennsylvania lines, requiring passenger conductors to turn over at terminal points all tickets and cash fares received on a trip to a ticket receiver.

The total number of locomotives in the United States is 29,928, of which 8,381 are passenger locomotives and 10,140 are freight locomotives. This shows ten freight locomotives and five passenger locomotives for each 100 miles of line operated.

The Chesapeake and Ohio company proposes to issue new consolidated bonds to an amount sufficient to double track a large part of the line and to make other needed improvements. Part of the funds will be used to retire the present preferred stock and underlying bonds.

ODDS AND ENDS.

About 700 lives are lost every year upon the English coasts.

Bergen, Norway, boasts a paper church large enough to seat 1,000 persons. The building is rendered waterproof by a solution of quicklime, curdled milk and whites of eggs.

The ingenuity of the American people is shown from the fact that fully three-fourths of the entire manufacturing capital of this country, or $6,000,000,000, is based upon patents.

Cryptograms, for communicating in secret language, are nearly as old as the art of writing, and invisible inks, which could be rendered visible by heat or the action of chemicals, were used by the Egyptians thirty-five centuries ago.

Among the weavers employed in a Biddeford (Me.) cotton mill is a woman who stands 6 feet 8 inches in her stocking feet, and is large and strong in proportion. She is more than a match for any man about the mill, either in boxing or wrestling.

AROUND THE THRONES.

According to a Japanese belief the mikado is descended from the gods, being 121st in direct line of descent.

An equestrian statue of Emperor Frederick is to be put up in Alsace, overlooking the field of Worth, at a cost of $60,000.

Arabi Pasha, the exiled Egyptian mischief maker, lives on the island of Ceylon amid cocoanut groves haunted by squirrels and magpie robins.

Prince Louis Napoleon, the second son of the late Prince Napoleon, has been promoted to the rank of commander of a squadron in the Nijni-Novgorod regiment of dragoons, which is quartered in the Caucasus.

The Grand Duchess of Baden, who is indefatigable in doing good works, has taken a house in the Burgstrasse of Baden Baden, where she has established a lecture room for the girls belonging to the Victoria Pension and to the sewing schools of the Badish Frauenverein.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

Director General Davis has declared that all applications for space ought to be presented by July 1, 1892.

The Grand Rapids (Mich.) furniture manufacturers will make a united exhibit, and want half an acre of space in which to display it.

It is announced that the imperial band of Emperor William of Germany will attend the exposition, having already obtained permission to do so.

The province of Ontario, Canada, will make an extensive mineral exhibit. Canada has asked for a total of 100,000 square feet of space in the various buildings.

Georgia, like Texas and South Dakota, is trying to raise a large portion of its needed World's fair fund through the instrumentality of the school pupils and teachers.

Humor of the Marriage Service.

Some funny stories are told about the marriage service. One of them relates how an old man, brought rather unwillingly to the altar, could not be induced to repeat the responses. "My good man," at length exclaimed the clergyman, "I really cannot marry you unless you do as you are told." But the man still remained silent. At this unexpected hitch the bride lost all patience with her future spouse and burst out with: "Go on, you old fool! Say it after him just the same as if you was mockin him."

The same difficulty occurred in another case. The clergyman, after explaining what was necessary and going over the responses several times without the smallest effect, stopped in dismay, whereupon the bridegroom encouraged him with, "Go ahead, pars'n, go ahead! Thou'rt doin bravely."

Upon another occasion it was, strangely enough, the woman who could not be prevailed upon to speak. When the clergyman remonstrated with her she indignantly replied, "Your father married me twice befoor, and he wasn't axin me any of them imperent questions at all."—Saturday Review.

YOU LEARN

Have you written me yet? If you haven't, wisdom and intelligent ambition suggest write to-day. I promise you my special, personal attention. I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. I charge nothing and receive nothing unless successful, as above. Nothing difficult to learn, or that requires much time. I desire but one person from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number who are making over Three Thousand Dollars a Year, each. All is new, solid, sure. Full particulars free. After you know all, if you conclude to go no further, why, no harm is done. Address, E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.

All over
—your sufferings from Catarrh. That is, if you go about it in the right way.

There are plenty of wrong ways, that perhaps you've found out. They may relieve for a time, but they don't cure.

Worse yet, they may drive the disease to the lungs. You can't afford to experiment.

But there is a right way, and a sure way, that does cure. Thousands of otherwise hopeless cases have proved it. It's with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. By its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, it permanently cures the worst chronic cases. Catarrhal Headache, "Cold in the Head"—everything catarrhal in its nature, is cured as if by magic.

It's a way so sure that the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Remedy offer, in good faith, $500. for a case of Catarrh which they cannot cure.

If it's sure enough for them to make the offer, it's sure enough for you to make the trial.

They risk $500. What do you risk?

TALKED WITH LONGFELLOW.

Experience of a Green Irish Lad Soon After Arriving.

"When I came to this country," said a merchant recently to a Boston Herald reporter, "I was a lad fresh from old Ireland. My first home was with friends in Cambridge. In one of my walks, before I had been here a week, I came across a queer, old-fashioned house that interested me immensely. I described it to my friends, and learned that it was the home of the poet Longfellow. That increased my interest.

"The next day I went again to the queer house and stood gawkily looking at it and at an old gentleman sitting in the yard. I stared so long that the old gentleman noticed it and, coming up to the fence, asked me what I was looking at. I told him that I wanted to see the man who lived there because I had read his works in the schools of Ireland.

"The old gentleman asked me what I knew about Longfellow's writings and I told him that I knew enough about one poem to repeat every word of it.

"When he heard that he asked me to come into the house and recite the poem to him. I went in and repeated 'The Village Blacksmith' without making a mistake. That pleased my listener, and, putting on his hat, he asked me to walk with him. He said that I should have something that many people had asked for and tried in vain to get.

"He stopped under a big tree and said: 'This is the tree under which that poem you repeated was written. The village smithy was under this tree.'

"Then the aged poet marched up and with his own hands broke off a branch and gave it to me."

A Noted Battlefield.

Take up your atlas and find Paducah, Kentucky. At this point the Ohio is joined by the Tennessee River. Follow this stream southward—and it is directly south—across the states of Kentucky and Tennessee. You note on the way, instead of towns the names of numerous "landings." Hardin is the last county before you reach the southern boundary of Tennessee. In the western part of this county you note "Pittsburg Landing." A little further southwest "Shilohville." Both places are now in country solitude, but thirty years ago day before yesterday, there were more than two hundred thousand men there engaged in a desperate battle that raged for two days with varying fortunes. You pass men on the street who had for reveille the rebel yell, as the confeds charged in the dawn of the morning; men who lay that night under the river bank at the "landing," and men who marched with Buell to reinforce Grant's army. Get them to tell you the story, and then go on a trip to the field, taking the Burlington from St. Paul or Minneapolis. For tickets, rates and information address W. J. C. THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER V.

When I met Sir Edmund in the morning, I told him that my partners had agreed with me to alter the clause in the agreement, though we had not yet decided in what manner.

"I am glad to hear it," he said; "anything will be better than that agreement as it stands."

Edith came down late to breakfast. She looked pale, and said she had overslept herself.

"For the first time in your life, I believe," said Sir Edmund. "You did not fall asleep quite so readily as usual,—hey?" he asked, smilingly.

"I could not sleep," she answered, but so gravely that it was not from the cause the Baronet implied,—the love that had kept me awake; and then she added, "I have been terribly frightened."

We looked at her in astonishment and anxiety.

"I will tell you all about it," she continued, "because you may be able to explain what preplexes me, and that will be a great relief."

She paused, as if to collect her thoughts.

"I was nearly asleep, when I noticed a sound coming from the window. It was as if some one were rapping upon the glass,—not loudly or quickly, but softly as though with the tip of the finger, at intervals. I might have counted twenty or thirty between one tap and the next. I took little notice of it at first, thinking that, as I had left the windows partly open, it might be the wind moving the Venetian blind; but after a while the persistent tap,—tap,—tap irritated me. I rose and lit a candle; then I went to the window. The lattice was just as I had left it. The blind hung perfectly motionless. I drew it up and looked out. There was a gray mist everywhere. Not a breath of air stirred; the flame of the candle burned as steadily as though the window had been closed. I let down the blind, and listened; there was not the slightest sound."

"A moth on the ceiling," said Sir Edmund; "they have worried me in the same manner. Then you get a light and the thing stops."

"Hold on, we ain't heered the last on it, I kin see," said the Judge, looking at Miss Lascelles intently, his shaggy brows bent over his quick eyes.

"I explained it as you do, papa. I put out the light and tried to sleep. I heard no sound for quite ten minutes, I think, and then again that soft, slow tap—tap,—tap came from the window,—same sound, with same long interval between them. It was not like the beat of a moth's wing. It was like nothing but the touch of a human finger. But I tried to think it was an insect in the wall,—the insect that is called the 'death watch.' And I did my best to take no notice of it, but I could not help hearing it; and after a time I grew frightened, and the sound grew dreadful in my ears. It became unendurable; I could not lie there listening passively. I got up again, and struck a match. The wick of the candle was slow to light, and during those moments I noticed that the sound had ceased. As I say, I was frightened,—very frightened. And the unbroken silence seemed more terrible than the sound. There was something ghostly and supernatural about it, that brought back the old terror I used to feel, as a child, in passing the room that is said to be haunted at night. And just then the clock in the belfry struck, I dared not go to the window. My hand trembled so that I could not take up the candle, but I looked towards the window. The first thing that struck me was that the laths of the blinds, instead of lying flat, as they generally do, when down, and as I had left them, were opened and turned edge-ways,—do you know how I mean?"

She held her hands, that trembled with recollection of her terror, one above the other horizontally.

"But the next thing," she continued, and then stopped; with a little shudder, while we who listened held our breath,—"the next thing I saw was two great black eyes that caught the light from my candle as they glared in between the lower laths of the blind."

She paused, and then continued, with more firmness:

"I think I fainted,—I must have done so, for I was conscious of nothing after that, until I found myself upon the floor. The light was still burning upon the table. As recollection returned to me, I looked toward the window. The laths were no longer opened, but turned flat. Then it occurred to me that all I had seen was merely a realistic dream,—that I had gone through these experiences in my sleep. My great terror was gone. I went without fear to the window to ascertain if the night was as I had seen it. There was the gray mist; the flame of the candle did not flicker. Nevertheless, when I looked down and saw how impossible it was for any one to have stood outside the window, I felt convinced than at least the vision of the two eyes was imaginary,—an outcome of the fear I felt when I looked toward the window. I lay down again, and, though I could not sleep for some time, I heard no further sound whatever, save the chiming of the clock."

"Is it not very probable, my dear," said the Baronet, "that the sound you speak of was also the outcome of fear?"

"I had no fear when I went first to the window. The sound was a reality. It is that I wish explained."

"Do you know what time it was when the tapping first began, Miss Lascelles?" Van Hoeck asked.

"It was a quarter to one by my watch when I recovered from the fit."

"May I ask, miss, without offense, if a thing o' this kind has ever happened to you afore?" asked the Judge.

"As a child I was timid; but I can not remember ever being so frightened."

"You don't look as if a trifle would skeer you, I will allow;" and rising from his chair, the Judge added, "if you'll excuse me, I'll go and prospect the place straight off, for I'm lorth to say it looks to me like as if the Kid had been taking a hand in this game."

"By all means," said the Baronet; "the sooner the truth is discovered the better."

We all went out onto the lawn which faced that part of the building in which Edith's room was situated. On the way Van Hoeck who had taken my arm for guidance, gripped it tightly, and whispered:

"What did I tell you? This is the beginning of the end!"

CHAPTER VI.

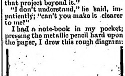
It is necessary for the reader to know what kind of building Monken Abbey was, and something of the disposition of rooms, in order to follow clearly the action of the drama that took place within its walls. I can do no better than to give the discription by which I brought the facts home to the comprehension of my blind partner.

"Tell me what you see, Thorne," he said, as we stood on the lawn.

"An old Gothic building, flanked by two later additions in the Tudor style, that project beyond it."

"I don't understand," he said, impatiently; "can't you make it clearer to me?"

I had a note-book in my pocket; pressing the metallic pencil hard upon the paper, I drew this rough diagram:



He passed his sensitive fingers over the impression.

"The two end blocks are the additions you speak of, the space between them the old part. I understand. Go on," he said.

"The great door is in the centre of the old part, the dining-room is on one side, the library on the other. The floor above is occupied by the picture gallery. It has a gable roof, and the belfry rises from the middle. The block on the right and that on the left are alike. The ground floor is divided into drawing-rooms, sitting-rooms, kitchens, etc."

"Where is the dairy, and the door that is left open at night for the Kid?"

"At the back of the house; it can not be seen from here."

"Is that in the right block or the left?"

"In the right; the kitchen is in the left. On the first floor are the principal bedrooms; the servants' are above. Our rooms are in the right block, Sir Edmund's and Miss Lascelles' are in the left."

"What means of communication are there? For instance, how could Sir Edmund get to your room?"

"By simply passing through the picture gallery."

"I understand; go on."

"There are two oriel windows and a bay in the end of the left block facing us as we stand here."

I drew another diagram to explain the windows to Van Hoeck. Here it is:

"The oriel on the left," I continued, "projects from Sir Edmund's room: that on the right from Miss Lascelles'. There are stone mullions at the angles of the oriel, and lattice windows between, hung inside with Venetian blinds. I have marked a cross where Miss Lascelles saw the eyes looking through. The oriels are supported by corbels. They are perfectly inaccessible from the ground except by a ladder."

"But from the story above?"

"There are no windows over the oriel. The only means of descent would be by a rope from the roof."

"Are there any other means of getting at the window?"

"None whatever that any human being could use."

"What is this projection between the oriels?" he asked, feeling the paper.

"A two-sided bay carried up from the ground to the gable, pierced with latticed windows from top to bottom. It gives light to the stairs inside."

"Do the windows open?"

"Yes."

"And what distance is there between the windows in the bay and Miss Lascelles' window?"

"Seven or eight feet at least."

"And the wall between is perfectly flat?"

"There is a stone moulding runs along parallel with the floor of the first story and the base of the oriel."

"Why didn't you tell me that?" he asked sharply.

"Because it is perfectly impossible for any one to walk along it."

"What width has it?"

"A few inches. It seems to be merely a stone gutter to carry off the water from the oriel."

"Is there no ivy on the house,—nothing to catch hold of?"

"There is no ivy, but there is a pipe midway between the bay and oriel; it descends from the gable to the gutter."

"What! and you tell me it is impossible to get from the bay to the window!"

"I still mean what I said. The gutter is so narrow that no one, even facing the wall closely, could stand on it and maintain a centre of gravity."

"But with the aid of the pipe?"

"The pipe is four feet from the bay, and four feet from the oriel. Now, suppose Lola, for I know whom you suspect, got from the window in the bay; she would have to advance holding to the mullion of the window for support, and with one hand only, until the other could catch the pipe, a span of four feet."

"Four feet; that is not impossible, unless the girl is short limbed."

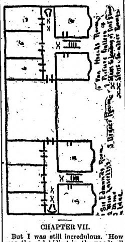
"It is impossible, if in holding to the mullion or the pipe, the girl had to support part of her own weight."

"Let us go and measure the width of the ledge," said Van Hoeck; it may appear from below less than it is."

We went up to my bedroom in the right block, which, as I have said corresponded in every external respect to the block on the left; and from the oriel, I measured the width of the stone ledge outside. Van Hoeck's supposition was just: it was wider than I expected, measuring a trifle less than my span, which is nine inches. Van Hoeck placed himself flat against a wall, and, turning out his toes until he obtained the limit of width upon which he could sustain his equilibrium, bade me measure the distance between his heel and the wall. I found it was fully three inches within my span, and was astonished to perceive upon how narrow a space one may stand with safety. This settled the point. Lola might well have passed along the ledge with safety.

"Now," said Van Hoeck, "draw me a plan of the rooms, roughly and broadly, showing their relative position to the stairs, the bay, and the picture gallery."

I complied with his request, marking the several parts with figures, which I explained to him in the order marked below.



CHAPTER VII.

But I was still incredulous. How was the girl hiding in the woods all day to know of the existence of the ledge? It was true she had access to the house at night; but I doubted if it were possible for her to see the ledge in the dark, even from the bay window. But admitting the possibility would she risk her life for no purpose but to alarm Miss Lascelles? There was too much strength in Lola's character for such a senseless and feeble device to be acceptable to her. It was not the act of a rational being, but of a mischievous or malevolent idiot.

I was inclined to believe that the explanation Miss Lascelles had offered was a just one, and that what she had seen was purely imaginative and the result of fear, inspired by those mysterious sounds which might yet be explained.

This was not Van Hoeck's opinion, nor was it Brace's.

"I will not say the Kid hes not done it," he said; "there's no sayin' what greaser blood will not do. For the sake of argyment, we will say she did; but I undertake she shall not play the same bower twice, if her father's persuasion counts anythin';" and he went off at once to search for Lola in the wood.

When we were alone, Van Hoeck said:

"Ask Sir Edmund; he will tell you, as he told me, that Brace was in the woods yesterday while you were philandering with Miss Lascelles. What was he there for but to find his daughter and employ her in working out this plot?"

TO BE CONTINUED.

Training Extraordinary.

About ten years ago C—— occupied a foremost position as a long-distance runner, and was noted as possessing an extraordinary amount of endurance.

Unfortunately he was not very quick-witted, which resulted in his discomfiture on more than one occasion. He inherited the quality of placing implicit confidence in the instructions of his trainer, to whose direction he attributed much of his success in the racing path.

About six o'clock one summer evening, prior to a coming race, C—— went to the ground for a practice spin; accompanied by his trainer, and the latter, after fulfilling the duties attached to his office, arranged that C—— should run round until he signalled to him to stop.

Meanwhile, the trainer, being of a somewhat bibulous nature, adjourned to a neighboring public-house for a "refresher." As may be surmised, the warm sultry evening was conducive to accelerating his thirst, and he indulged rather freely. The result was that it overcame him, and he fell into a sound slumber, which lasted until closing time, 11 p. m., when he was rudely awakened by "mine host."

He suddenly remembered the instructions he had given to C——, and he forthwith repaired to the ground, when lo, there was his man plodding like a locomotive round the track. He signalled for C—— to stop, and after explanations, both resolved to keep the matter a secret. The affair, however, got circulated amongst the frequenters of the ground, and many a good laugh is the result when the story is told amongst his associates.

Wonderful Memory of a Horse.

A. R. Hill, a leading lawyer of Danville, Ill., is in this city on a peculiar mission. He came to recover an old family horse that was stolen from him on Dec. 21, 1890, and which he has followed over 1,000 miles. The thief that stole the horse carried it to Indianapolis and sold it to some horse-dealers. They sold it to some Atlanta stock dealers, who shipped it to this city. A gentleman from Mr. Hill's home, who was visiting in the city, saw the horse and recognized it, and at once notified the owner. Mr. Hill came to see about the much-beloved animal. On his arrival he was informed that his horse was in the stables of Hill and Walker, and that he would have to prove beyond a doubt the identity of it before he could have it. With some other gentlemen Mr. Hill proceeded to the stable. When he walked into the stall the horse neighed and pranced, and when Mr. Hill held out his hand the horse licked it with seemingly as much passion as ever one person kissed another. The gentlemen present were astounded at the instant recognition of the master by the faithful old family horse after a full year's absence. The gentleman, who had possession of the horse told Mr. Hill to take it, remarking: "You need not identify the horse; he has identified you. I would hate to be a murderer and own that horse. I might run on him some day and could never conceal my identity." The horse will be shipped to Danville and Mr. Hill will follow him.—Elberton (Ga.) Star.

PET PHRASES.

Everyone has a Pet Phrase or Word.

It is hardly much to say that almost everybody has a strong predilection for some particular word or phrase, and shows preference for the same by using it whenever it can be slipped in with a due regard to the context.

One gentleman of the writer's acquaintance meets all troubles—big, little and imaginary—with "Holy Moses!" and if he has occasion at any time to call attention to a slight discrepancy in a statement to any person he will tell you that "It is not according to Crocker." Another interlards his conversation pretty freely with "As they say," although many of the statements thus credited to others are entirely his own.

Others, again, are constantly telling you, when imparting any information, that "You know," and probably never think that if you are already aware of the fact it is not necessary to repeat it. But they know you don't know—it is only a special way they have of talking. Another may keep putting the question, "Don't you see?" although he knows perfectly well that you are not blind, while the next friend you meet accepts every statement you make with "Is that so?" just as if he doubted your word of honor as a gentleman. Then in another quarter you will be brought up sharply, and perhaps too frequently to please you, with "Certainly;" while that friend with the smiling countenance will keep on edifying you with "Dear me!"

"In some parts of the country "No, no," or "Yes, indeed,' appear to partake somewhat of the nature of an oath, for everybody makes use of them "as a guarantee of good faith."

Then your young lady will probably be partial to "really" as a stock expression, and it has the advantage of serving the purpose of a query as well as of an affirmation. These young ladies also adopt many slangy phrases, but this is undoubtedly due in a great measure to the bad example set by their brothers and sweethearts.

Young gentleman, too, are dead on stock expressions, and some of them would not look well in print. When anything startling or unexpected happens, when a chum tells a "whopper," or when the master turns up when he ought not to, the phrase is ready, and does duty many times a day. It may be "Oh, Jehoshaphat!" "By golly," "By jingo," or something stronger which ought not to be used, but all the same it turns out and settles the matter.

These pet words and phrases become such a part of the conversation of many people that when talking to our acquaintances we feel pretty certain that they will turn their darling out and we can almost calculate to a nicety when it will be used. Of course, it might be conceded that very many of the expressions are of a slangy nature, and this may account, in some cases, for their popularity. It is really surprising what a hold these words get upon us, and how often we use them without a thought; in fact, we are quite astonished when our attention is drawn to our shortcomings in this respect.

The Value of Theosophy.

The value of Theosophy intellectually is that it makes clear many obscure problems of life and mind; that it offers an account of the evolution of the universe and of man which renders our present conditions intelligible and affords a basis for further development; that it proves the existence of mental powers at present latent in the majority; that it removes the maddening pessimism which is taking the heart out of life.

Its value morally is that it explains the presence of evil, points the way of escape, demonstrates the unity of humanity, and places the brotherhood of man on a rational and intelligible basis; that, by its doctrine of reincarnation, it makes every man responsible for his own characteristics, and by its doctrine of karma—the law of cause and effect—it places the destiny of each in his own hands, showing that every effort towards right-thinking and right-doing now helps to build up a nobler character for the next incarnation, the "innate" character with which the child is born into the world. (This is the "use of these successive incarnations" wanted by an objector.)

The value of Theosophy socially lies in these ethical teachings of brotherhood and personal responsibility, and in the compelling motives it affords for individual efforts to improve. It makes the good citizens, without which the good State can neither be made nor maintained; and, further it goes to the roots of our social miseries, and shows how they may be removed. It is more concerned with the cause of the evils than with the evils themselves, although, as the practical side of the teaching of brotherhood, it urges its followers to immediate efforts to alleviate social distresses.

By its recognition of religious differences as superficial while, the religious emotion is one and fundamental, it softens the bitterness of controversy and draws good men of different faiths together, while, by the stress it lays on conduct as apart from creed, it gives a platform on which earnest and devoted men may stand side by side for mutal aid against the attacks of vice, hatred, and the spirit of separateness.

By its philosophy and its ethics Theosophy claims to be judged, and in the long run it is by these that it will be justified or condemned in the eyes of men. ANNIE BEASANT.

A Leap Year Scheme.

Maud Cheviot was standing in her friend's boudoir. "It worked," she said to her hostess, "beautifully. There is your ring, and thank you so much. I shall always, in some sort, owe you much of my happiness, you know. It is a pretty ring. I hope your fiance will never object to my temporary use of it. Tom proposed 24 hours after he saw it on my finger. It's always the way with men. When they think they have lost you they find they wanted you all the time. And now, you see, I've got a real engagement ring of my own; not yours, dear. But—we're to be married in three months. You must come to the wedding. Tom has very much to thank you for—or your ring. He shall know that—some day."—Chicago Times.

The proprietors of Ely's Cream Balm do not claim it to be a cure-all, but a sure remedy for Catarrh and Cold in the head.

I have been afflicted with catarrh for 20 years. It became chronic and extended to my throat, causing hoarseness and great difficulty in speaking, indeed for years I was not able to speak more than thirty minutes, and often this with great difficulty. I also, to a great extent, lost the sense of hearing. By the use of Ely's Cream Balm all dropping of mucous has ceased and my voice and hearing has greatly improved.—Jas. W. Rev. James P. Stone of Lower Cabot, Vt., formerly of Dalton, N. H.

A Faithful Pastor

Is held in high esteem by his people, and his opinion upon temporal as well as spiritual matters is valued greatly. The following is from a clergyman long influential in New England, now spending well earned rest in Cabot, Vt.:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:

"We have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in our family for many years past, with great benefit. We have, with confidence, recommended it to others for their various ailments, almost all of whom have certified to great benefit by its use. We can recommend it as the best blood purifier we have ever tried. We have used others, but none with the beneficial effects of Hood's. Also we deem Hood's Pills and Olive Ointment invaluable. Mrs. Stone says she cannot do without them." REV. J. P. STONE.

Better than Gold

Mr. Geo. T. Clapp, of Eastondale, Mass., says: "I am 82 years of age, and for 30 years have suffered with running sores on one of my legs. A few years ago I had two toes amputated, physicians saying I was suffering from gangrene and had but

A SHORT TIME TO LIVE

Eight months ago as a neighbor urged me, I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. The whole lower part of my leg and foot was a running sore, but it has almost completely healed, and I can truthfully say that I am in better health than I have been for many years. I have taken no other medicine and consider that I owe all my improvement to

Hood's Sarsaparilla

It is "better than gold." "I cheerfully verify the above statement of Mr. Clapp, whom I have known 30 years." J. M. HOWARD, Druggist, Eastondale, Mass.

CORNELIUS CORNELL was found dead in a house occupied by Mrs. Buckley in Boston. There were marks of violence on the head. Mrs. Buckley was arrested on suspicion.

"August Flower"

"I am happy to state to you and to suffering humanity, that my wife has used your wonderful remedy, August Flower, for sick headache and palpitation of the heart, with satisfactory results. For several years she has been a great sufferer, has been under the treatment of eminent physicians in this city and Boston, and found little relief. She was induced to try August Flower, which gave immedaite relief. We cannot say to much for it." L. C. Frost, Springfield, Mass.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

The land department recently forwarded 283 patents.

An option bill is reported to the house, which Mr. Washburn will introduce in the senate, it being practically his own.

The house, by an overwhelming vote, passes a bill absolutely prohibiting Chinese, except government agents, entering the United States.

Admiral Brown, stationed at Honolulu, is said to have notified the secretary of the navy by cipher message that a revolution is pending in Hawaii and asking for instructions.

Secretary Noble rendered a decision in the case of Wentel Grant against the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, in which he holds in favor of Grant. The land involved is located near the city of Spokane Falls, state of Washington, and is said to be very valuable.

Secretary Noble made an order changing the site for the county seat of county "H," in the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservation in Oklahoma territory. The site first selected was found to be unsuitable for the purpose on account of its liability to overflow from the neighboring stream. The new site is the south half of section 13, township 9, range 16 west.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Rev. John Collingwood Bruce is dead in London. He was a noted antiquarian and historian.

Sir Arthur Sullivan, the composer, has had a serious relapse at Monte Carlo, where he has been endeavoring to recover from overwork.

Mrs. Annie Besant's daughter Mabel is betrothed to Mr. Scott, the well known English socialist writer, a nephew of the noted dramatic critic, Clement Scott.

William Denamore, aged 103 years, died at East Liverpool, Ohio, recently. He was born at Lockport N. Y., in 1789, and served in the war of 1812 and the war with Mexico.

Miss Bettie Fleischmann, daughter of the millionaire yeast man and distiller, Chris Fleischmann, of Cincinnati, has broken her engagement with Count Logothetti because he refuses to become an American citizen.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Much damage was done near Greensburg, Pa., by a storm.

The number of lives lost in the Kansas cyclone approximate 100.

Cronkill's furniture factory at Piqua, Ohio, was destroyed by fire; loss, $150,000; insurance, $60,000.

At an Alliance picnic near Cove, Ark., trees were blown down, killing two persons and mortally wounding two others.

The telegraph lines and the Michigan Telephone Company's wires were badly damaged by the recent storm. The wires are reported down at half a dozen places.

Two train hands were slightly injured in an accident on the Northwestern road near Madison, Wis. It was rumored that four persons had been killed.

The west span of Clarissa street bridge across the Genesee river at Rochester, N. Y., fell, precipitating six persons into the river, which is now at flood height. All were rescued alive.

While attempting to light his pipe at an electric light, as he was told to do in a joke by a fellow workman, a Hungarian at Johnstown, Pa., was instantly killed. A current of 2,000 volts passed through his body.

SINS AND SINNERS.

Forty women of Vilna, Russia, are to be tried for infanticide.

Gerald Spaulding, a St. Paul young man, is murdered and robbed at Portage, Wis.

Indictments are found in Chicago against nine aldermen and a member of the school board for bribery.

A young girl witness in the Michaels arson trial, St. Paul, is arrested for confessed perjury.

Deeming, the English murderer, it is discovered, performed rascally exploits in the Canadian Northwest eight years ago.

Chas. Whalen, the murderer of Gerald Spaulding, is arrested at St. James, Minn. He attempts to escape and is shot, but not badly wounded. He confesses the murder.

Rev. Dr. Parkhurst's life has been threatened if he persists in the crusade which he has pursued with such relentless vigor in New York.

Melisha McGlumphrey the proprietress of a well known house of ill-fame, in a drunken orgie, stabbed and fatally wounded Ada Foster, a companion at Wheeling, W. Va.

"Capt." Hatfield, the notorious leader of the Hatfield gang whose record of murders is probably second to none in this or any other civilized country, was killed in a fight over a game of cards near Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Mary Stebbins, arrested at Chicago for causing the death of Mrs. Nichols by the so-called Christain Science treatment, was released in bail of $5,000. City Building Commissioner Louis O'Neill, who claims to have been cured by "Christian Science" after seven regular physicians had failed to relieve him of rheumatism and quinsy, volunteered to sign the bail bond.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

Ex-President Pierola of Peru is endeavoring to overthrow the government.

There is a movement in Hawaii to form a republic.

China threatens to sever all diplomatic relations with the United States if the Chinese exclusion bill becomes a law.

One thousand five hundred delegates are expected to attend the Ulsterite convention in Belfast.

The Peruvian legation at London denies the reports that have been circulated regarding a revolt in Peru.

A meeting of 20,000 Durham miners adopted by acclamation a decision to stand firm against a reduction of wages.

The report that the British steamer Main, Capt. Broan, from New Orleans, March 1, for Liverpool, had been destroyed by fire at sea was erroneous.

In the house of commons Patrick O'Brien revived the question of the wearing of the shamrock on St. Patricks day by Irish soldiers in the British army.

The Staffordshire and other pottery manufacturers have decided to lock out 20,000 workers, the latter refusing to submit their disputes with their employes to a board of arbitration.

Italian commerce for the first two months of 1892 showed imports amounting to 161,609,876 lire, as against 174,225,312 lire for the same period in 1891, and exports of 155,052,432 lire, as against 125,700,550 lire for the same period in 1891.

Great anxiety is felt in Ireland regarding the safety of Lord Headley, of Aghadoe house, near Killarney, county Kerry, who some time ago left for Salisbury, one of the stations of the British South Africa in Massoland with the avowed purpose of traversing Mashonaland.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

Chairman Finley has asked the Western Passenger Association to give him a brief vacation.

A. A. Whitcomb, formerly with the Northern Steamship company, has been appointed contracting freight agent of the St. Paul and Duluth in Minneapolis.

Eastern and Western railroads combine to fight the commission business and boycott roads which are not in the combination.

Active negotiations are in progress for the purchase of the Chicago & West Michigan by the Lake Erie & Western road and every indication is favorable to its consummation.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road continues to show large increases in revenue from traffic. During the fourth week of March the gross earnings were $899,380, an increase as compared with the corresponding week last year of $202,327. For the entire month the earnings were $2,741,040, an increase of $600,147.

At a meeting of the Chicago Railroad Association the following officers were elected: President, James C. Pond, general passenger agent of the Wisconsin Central; vice-president, D. Martin, of the Big Four, secretary and treasurer, A. F. McMillan, of the Michigan Central; executive committee; George H. Heafford, C. L. Stone and W. E. Davis.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

The Wisconsin city elections reveal Republican gains.

McEnery decides to remain a candidate for governor of Louisiana. There are five tickets in the field.

The Republicans secure the Rhode Island legislature, but there is no election of governor by the people.

The contest over the Nebraska governorship is finally disposed of, the state supreme court deciding against Thayer.

A circumstantial story comes from Washington that Blaine will, after all, accept a nomination at Minneapolis.

There is talk of the free coinage men in the house obstructing all legislation except tariff bills until consideration of the Bland bill is again secured.

LABOR CIRCLE.

The river men's strike at St. Louis ended in victory for the men, who were granted the wages they asked.

Large numbers of messengers have been discharged at St. Louis by various express companies because they are members of the Messengers' brotherhood.

Orders were received at Easton Pa., from the Reading management shutting down the Lehigh valley shops three days in each week. This puts 600 men on half pay. The city is greatly excited over the affair.

A Boston paper says: Through the intercession of the state board of arbitration the striking furniture workers and cabinet makers, who wanted a nine-hours' day will return to work on the basis of nine hours with nine hours pay.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

Johnny Sowders has signed to pitch for the Louisville club.

Jerry Denny is out in California playing third base for San Jose.

Gumbert is pitching a great game for Chicago at the Springs.

Arthur Sunday has been assigned to Kansas City in place of Ed Pabst.

Kennedy, pitcher for the Denvers last season, has signed with Brooklyn.

Big Jim Davis will probably join one of the clubs in the Southern league.

"Kid" Baldwin will probably stay in the Pacific Coast league this season.

The Philadelphias are very weak in the box and are looking for pitching timber.

President White, of the Eastern league, says no players will be assigned to clubs until April 6.

Tommy Quinn has joined his team at Indianapolis. He has become reconciled to the situation.

Over $1,000,000 worth of trotting horses have been sold in Lexington during the past two months, and still the demand for first-class stock is as active as ever.

The St. Louis Jockey club have been fortunate enough to secure the services of John J. Carter, as presiding judge at their spring and summer meeting. The selection warrants the assertion that the remarkable placings of former years will not be duplicated.

A deal between the Louisville and Chicago ball magnates has been made, and Pfeffer will wear a Louisville uniform in the opening game of the season. It is in the nature of a trade, Canavan and a bonus being given for Pfeffer. The amount of the bonus is said to be $2,000, but this is not positively known.

OTHERWISE.

The congressional committee which is investigating the "sweating system" began operations in Chicago recently.

The Kentucky house of representatives passed a bill appropriating $100,000 for Kentucky's exhibit at the Columbian Exposition at Chicago.

Armour & Co. have begun twenty-two suits in the circuit court at Chicago to recover in the aggregate $1,155,000 from various railroad companies throughout the country for overcharges on dressed beef.

John M. Carter and Mathew K. Aiken, trustees in the Nicholson bank failure, at Baltimore, filed in the city court the first statement of the condition of the firm. The statement shows liabilities of $1,158,061 and actual assets of between $150,000 and $200,000.

Timothy Hopkins, who resigned the treasurership of the Southern Pacific railroad, marked his retirement from railroad work by giving to Stanford university 1,000 volumes and 1,000 pamphlets on the history of railroading in the world, with money to increase the collection.

Actress Margaret Mather's application for divorce, reported in Pittsburg as having been filed at Chicago a month ago, was made public today. Orchestra Leader Emil Haberkorn, the husband, is charged with desertion. The special clause is inserted whereby if divorce be granted the parties are at liberty to marry again.

Rev. Dr. Parkhurst's life has been threatened if he persists in the crusade which he has pursued with such relentless vigor in New York. He has been informed of his prospective fate through an anonymous letter, but those who mean business are evidently limited to one person. Dr. Parkhurst is afraid that he will be killed on the street at night.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, North and South Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

Lake Pepin is clear of ice.

Gov. Merriam designates May 2 as Arbor day.

Ex-Gov. McGill avows himself a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Edward Hakes, while playing with a dog at Pine City, fell and broke his arm. His father's arm was broken a few weeks ago in the woods.

M. N. Cadwell, of Ann township, near Windom, was seriously, if not fatally, injured by a windmill casting weighting about five hundred pounds falling on his head.

Ole Sweberg and Mrs. Johnson were married at Cannon Falls. The groom is seventy-eight and the bride has seen seventy-four summers.

The Ladies' World Fair organization of Blue Earth county met at Mankato for the purpose of furthering the work of the association.

Rev. J. F. Hill, of Minneapolis, who has occupied the pulpit in the First Baptist Church at Northfield for some time, has formally accepted the pastorate and will begin work at once.

For the second time the Northern Pacific station of Fergus Falls was dismantled by fire. It caught from a defective chimney and burned three hours. It is a total wreck. The loss is $2,500.

Tramps ransacked the barns in connection with the River View House at Dundas, stealing a gold watch belonging to P. H. Empey, proprietor, valued at $50. The thieves made good their escape.

The new knitting mill at Mankato, owned by Mayor J. A. Willard and his brother, M. G., will be in operation in a few days. When all the plans are carried out it will be one of the largest institutions of its kind in the United States.

The farmer's elevator in Fergus Falls was badly damaged by fire the other day. There was about 500 bushels of wheat on hand. The building is insured in the Caledonia for $1,200, and contents in the Concordia of Milwaukee for $900. The fire caught from a stove.

Miles & Prescott, who are drilling a well for the Chicago & Northwestern railroad at Lake Benton, struck water at a depth of 620 feet. The water rose 400 feet in a few minutes, showing immense pressure. The indications are that a flowing well will be obtained if put deeper.

A remarkable happening, illustrating the great vitality of a dog, came to light at Anoka a few days ago. For 21 days and 21 nights the dog had remained alive at the bottom of a cistern without light, food or water.

Ole Sjurson Mangen, the second oldest man in Goodhue county, is dead, ninety-seven years of age. He has a daughter aged seventy years, a grand-daughter aged forty-six, several great grand children over twenty and some great great grandchildren.

Henry Arola, a Finlander aged twenty-seven, hanged himself to a tree at Fergus Falls. He was to have been married in a week to a young woman living at his home. She discovered his body. His brother killed his father a few years ago and was sent to the asylum, where he died.

On account of the accident on the Northern Pacific at Grand Forks, whereby a train was precipitated into the river and the track destroyed, all the Winnipeg business of that road comes to Moorhead and is transferred to the Great Northern. This necessitates a large amount of extra work at Moorhead.

William Morrison and W. B. Ankeny, late of Omaha, Neb., and men of considerable means, have decided to establish a large iron and brass foundry in Little Falls, and expect to be ready for business about May 1. They are both practical foundry men.

News has just reached Lake City of the suicide of Iran Iverson, of Frontenac. The verdict of the coroner's jury was suicide by a powerful narcotic. He leaves two sons, Louis and Ole, to whom he wrote a letter stating he had become tired of life and died happy.

The St. Louis county commissioners appropriated the $2,000 to complete the quota of $7,300 of St. Louis county to the state fund for the world's fair. The commissioners also appropriated $5,000 for the improvement of the county road to the mines east and west of Mesaba station.

An injunction has been served on the city officers of Wells enjoining them from issuing bonds voted at the recent election and from disposing of the present city hall. This action was taken by those who are dissatisfied with the council's selection of a site for the new opera house to be erected. Attorneys think the injunction will be set aside and the preparations will go on for building.

George A. Paulson's hardware store in the village of Henning was broken into the other night. The safe was blown open and $60 in money and two good revolvers taken. Two persons suspected of being the burglars took the early train for Fergus Falls. A telegram was received by the officials here to look out for them, but they were not captured.

The assignment deed of the Iron Bay Works to F. W. Paine, filed at Duluth, was made public. The attachments against the property have all been dissolved and the property turned over to the assignee, whose bond in the sum of $200,000 was approved. This company has been in a bad way financially for some time, and the assignment has been made as the quickest way of bringing its business into proper shape.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

The South Dakota prohibition law is declared constitutional by the state supreme court.

Reports from parties in from the country near Miller indicate that considerable stock perished in the recent storm. Snow drifts 5 and 6 feet deep are still to be seen, and no trains were able to get West on account of the snow for a couple of days.

An institute for the cure of drunkenness was established at Yankton recently, with Dr. H. F. Livingston as superintendent. The institute is incorporated and has a capital stock of $2,000. The cure used is the Hagey bichloride of gold.

The supreme court has decided that private parties may do banking business without incorporating. Another decision requires the state auditor to issue a warrant for 2 per cent of insurance moneys to the fire departments of the state on a test case of the Pierre department.

A Huron dispatch says between 11,000 and 12,000 acres of school lands in this county were leased at public auction, ranging in price from 5 to 20 cents per acre. This is about one-fourth the school lands in the county. Others will be offered for lease later in the season.

The governor has ordered the sheriffs of Day, Grant, Marshall, Roberts and Codington counties to organize a posse of 100 each to keep order on the Sisseton reservation April 15 and protect everybody's rights. The state militia will be held in reserve. The prospect is that trouble will occur.

Considerable feeling exists at Blunt because of Gov. Mellette's failure to call a special meeting of the legislature for the purpose of making a World's Fair appropriation. It now looks as if South Dakota, as a state, will not have any exhibit.

Three detectives from Washington have been sent to Watertown by the commissioner of the general land office to look after any crooked work that may be going on in connection with the reservation opening. There are big frauds alleged on the part of land agents in the vicinity of Brown's Valley, Minn., and they will be investigated.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Conductor K. S. Stokes, of the Great Northern, on trial at Grand Forks for burglarizing a freight car, was acquitted.

A fierce storm is raging at Inkster. The roads are almost impassable. Threshing is now stopped. The unthreshed wheat is of very little value.

The Methodist church building at Mandan, was burned. It is thought the fire was started by enemies of the pastor. Loss, $2,000; insurance, $1,000.

A term of the United States district court opened at Bismarck recently, Judge Thomas, presiding. It will probably be a short term, although several important cases are to be disposed of.

There was a large attendance of farmers at the sale of school lands at Grand Forks. The prices ranged from $14 per acre to $40, the highest being paid by Thomas Campbell for a quarter section one mile from the city. The bidders are all farmers who own farms adjacent to the lands they purchase.

The Methodist church at Mandan, was destroyed by fire. Evidence shows it to have been fired. The pastor and leading members are prominent in the work of enforcing the prohibition law. Suspected parties are under surveillance and arrests will be made. Loss, $2,000.

At a meeting of the State Board of Agriculture held at Grand Forks business men met the proposition of the board and tended a bonus of $3,000 to guarantee the board against loss in case the state fair is held here. The board will undoubtedly accept the tender and locate the fair here.

WISCONSIN.

The vote at West Superior amounted to 4,670, which shows an increase of 1,900 over last year and puts this city next to Milwaukee in voting population.

Frank Kane, of Durand, a member of D. McMahon's driving crew on the north fork of the Eau Claire, was drowned at a point about fifteen miles north of Thorpe.

Dr. Irwin, a well known physician, was found drowned in the mill pond at Lodi. It is supposed that he committed suicide, as he has been despondent of late. He was about 60 years of age.

William Tiets, of Ashippun, Dodge county, has been arrested on the charge of criminally assaulting his own daughter, who is about 14 years of age. Tiet's friends are disposed to believe that the charge is false.

The public schools at Hudson have been adjourned one week for the new high school building has been condemned. Architect Bassford, of St. Paul, has inspected it and pronounced it unsafe.

There is but little change in the situation caused by the carpenter's strike at La Crosse a few days ago. Two or three contractors have conceded to the demand; others refuse to. Both sides are confident of winning. All is quiet.

The Black River House, a large frame building, one of the old landmarks of Black River Falls, owned by Mrs. Fred Gebhart, caught fire from a defective flue and was partially destroyed. No insurance.

A stranger who registered at the Revere House, West Bend, as Charles Miller, of Ashland, committed suicide in a saloon at Barton, a mile north of here, by shooting himself through the head. He was stately looking and well dressed. Family troubles seem to have been the cause.

Black river came up to a 10-foot driving stage the other night, caused by the breaking of some of the tributaries, and there has been an excellent run of logs. The driving crew will begin operations soon, and as a result there will be an unusually early, heavy run of logs. The break up is from a week to 10 days earlier than usual.

Edward Callahan, aged 25 years, employed at Hickory Grove farm, near Racine, while returning from a visit at Milwaukee on a train, got up out of his seat asleep and walked out of the door and off the platform. The train was going at the rate of 40 miles an hour. Strange to say he was not much hurt, but was taken to a hospital for treatment. A physician says he is injured internally but will recover.

IOWA.

A merchant named Warner, of Mt. Auburn, shot himself. Financial troubles the cause.

A heavy frost which covered the ground at Burlington the other morning has caused no little anxiety for the safety of the fruit buds.

Advices were received at Keokuk of a shower of mud which fell at Framington, supposed to have been carried up in the clouds by a cyclone and then precipitated.

John Steiner, a well-known resident of Dubuque, has mysteriously disappeared. He was last seen standing at the corner of Main and Seventh streets. He was serving as a juror, but was off duty. It is feared he has met with foul play.

A strong creamery association was formed at Ottumwa. The various creameries of Southern Iowa sent representatives who formed a syndicate for the promotion of the creamery interest and to control the output of dairy products in the state. L. F. Newell, of Agency, was chosen president.

The Grand Army posts at Dubuque will present the name of Capt. L. M. Langstaff for department commander of the order at the coming Ottumwa encampment. He was a member of the 3rd Iowa infantry and served through the war in a most creditable manner.

Yelta Oltens an Lubbe Greed, married, and a young unmarried man named Lohman, all residents of Fulton, Ill., had been at Clinton looking for work and attempted to cross the Mississippi in a small boat on their return. A high wind prevailed, the boat upset and all were drowned.

The unprecedented high water in the Des Moines carried away the second span of the new bridge just building at Ottumwa. A large number of people were on the bridge at the time and seven went down with narrow escape from drowning. One man was seriously injured.

S. G. Palmer is now under arrest at Mason City, for the murder of William Mills, at Dows three weeks ago. It is claimed that Palmer, upon returning home one evening, found Mills in company with his wife and pounced upon him and beat his brains out with a club.

SAVED BY SOAP.

A Mariner's Yarn of the Cannibals off the Coast of New Guinea.

A cake of soap is said to have saved the lives of five men and a boy off the coast of New Guinea. The story, as told in the smoking-room of a steamer going to Brisbane, by an old man, the owner of several vessels engaged in pearl fishing is as follows:

"It all happened in a moment," said the old man. "The ship struck a part of a reef and went down like a thunderbolt, and we had only time to jump overboard and swim ashore.

"We were at the mouth of Cloudy Bay, which meant slow roasting alive as soon as the natives got a peep at us. We were wet, hungry and miserable, with nothing to stay the pangs of hunger.

"As daylight dawned, I saw a case slowly drifting to shore. In a moment we were wading and swimming to secure the treasure. We had it on shore in no time, and prying it open with our fingers, found it filled with soap. We bemoaned our hard luck in emphatic language.

"'Close round the case, boys, they're coming!' I shouted, as I saw fifty mop-headed savages armed with spears, bows and arrows, rushing toward us. At fifteen yards distance they paused, and their chief came out to talk to us. I grabbed up an armful of soap tablets and advanced to meet him. His eyes lighted as he saw the amber-like cakes on which the sun was shining. Novelties, when they take, means success.

"Going straight up to the man-eater, I offered him a cake. He took it, smelt it, and tasted it. Evidently he did not like its taste for he scowled at me. By signs I showed him how to use it. The Papaun is fond of washing himself, and my pantomime took his fancy. Seeing a stream of fresh water, I led the chief to it. First washing my own hands, I gave him the tablet. He did as I had done, and was delighted.

"Then for the next ten minutes there was a scrubbing among those copper skins. Their weapons were thrown down, and they lathered one another and then tossed the water over their bodies.

"We were saved and made on the spot medicine men of the tribe. The pictorial advertisements of the soapmakers were used to decorate their idol houses. Two weeks afterward we were rescued by an English war-sloop."—Colonial Times.

IT FOOLS EVEN EXPERTS.

Few Everyday Drunkards Can Tell Good Whisky From Bad With Certainty.

Talk about telling good from bad liquor, it's all nonsense. Of course if whisky is very, very bad it can be detected, but that man does not live who can select whisky when there is but 50 cents or $1 difference in value. I know that this is claimed, but they don't tell me, for I know better. I recall once when I was on the road, I tried to sell a barrel of whisky of a certain brand to the landlord of the hotel where I stopped when in the city. He declined to buy, alleging that he did not dare change from the brand he had been using many years. I tried to convince him that mine at $2.25 was as good as that for which he had been paying $3.50, but he would not listen to me. I tried to lay a wager with him, but he was not sufficiently confident of his own judgment to undertake to pick out his own goods from mine. Finally after much discussion, he bet a hat that the druggist near by who had been in the same business for years, and who sold the same class of goods as did my landlord, could not be fooled.

We went over to the drug store, and the landlord bought a pint of the famous whisky, and putting it into his pocket we returned to the hotel, and emptying one of my sample cases, filled it with the liquor just from the drug store. Then we returned to the drug store together, and when opportunity offered I was introduced to the proprietor and opened the battle by asking him to look at a superior whisky I had.

"It's no use, young man; I have a brand I've been selling for a number of years, and nothing can induce me to change."

"Not even price! I have some excellent goods in this bottle. May I ask what you pay for yours?"

"I pay $3.50 a gallon."

"I'll sell you this for $2.25."

"It's no use, I don't want to change."

I pleaded with him to just sample mine, and finally he condescended to taste, and immediately spewed his own whisky out of his mouth, declaring he would not have it in his store if he could buy it for fifty cents a gallon!

I tell you it's no use I can fool the best of 'em.—Toledo Journal.

TALE OF A CRIME.

One of the Men Implicated in the Custom Frauds Confesses.

Details of the Smuggling Scheme Secured by a Promise of Immunity.

San Francisco, April 12.—Some inside facts in connection with custom house frauds were obtained to-day. Outside of perhaps ex-Appraiser Seavey there will be no prosecution of federal officials. Several merchants are implicated and indictments will probably be found against them.

It was learned that ex-Deputy Collector D. M. Cashin was in Sacramento a week ago last Saturday, having come from Victoria, B. C., in response to a telegram from the government, promising him immunity if he should reveal the details of the smuggling scheme. According to the story told by Cashin, the people implicated in the smuggling frauds are Gen. E. S. Salmon, Charles Edward Heise, Charles M. Seavey and the firms of Neuberger, Reis & Co. and Steinbergh & Kalishner.

"Other firms are in the swim," Cashin said, "but I had nothing to do with them. Seavey engineered them alone. Heise was broker for Neuberger, Reis & Co., and others, and it was he who designated cases that were to be sent up for appraisement in which there was to have been fair divy all around, but I was treated very shabbily occasionally. I would get a check from Seavey through the mail for a few dollars, but never a sum to amount to anything. While others were making thousands I was getting tens. I was in it, however, and I could not see any way out. We were all members of the Grand Army and I did not like to give them away. All the time I was miserable. I knew that I was a thief in a certain sense, and I was positive that I was being fooled. They were making the money while I was doing the work and was in reality the scapegoat. When Heise would present me with an invoice, the numbers opposite the cases that were to be sent up for appraisement would have a faint mark opposite them. Those cases I would designate and they would come to the store while the others would go to the merchant's place of business."

THOSE ALLEGED BOODLERS.

Ashland's Grand Jury Getting Some Valuable Pointers.

Ashland, Wis., Special, April 12.—After a two days' rest the grand jury resumed its work to-day with a will, and quite a number of witnesses were examined, the most important of whom was Bert Williams, cit. editor of the Daily News, who in his daily vocation, has been the main person to make the charges against the officials, whose actions are now being examined. Mr. Williams was on the stand for over three hours, and gave some entirely new facts in the cases which went to substantiate the charges made public against the officers. F. J. Williard, supervisor from this city, was also examined, and it is supposed Mr. Williard can give some damaging testimony against the parties charged with boodling. The taking of testimony in the case of Richard Sleight, district attorney, who has been cited to appear before Gov. Peck on April 10 and show cause why he should not be removed, began to-day before J. Cover, circuit court reporter, who was made special court commissioner by Gov. Peck. Sleight is charged with illegally drawing pay or clerk hire, office rent, etc., and approving fraudulent claims against the county and appearing as attorney for claimants against the county, against the laws pertaining to his office. Documentary evidence was introduced by the state in support of the charges.

RUSTLERS SCATTERING.

Wyoming Cattle Thieves Making Tracks for Other States.

Douglas, Wyo., April 12.—Kid Donnelly of Powder River Crossing, brought word to-night to Antelope Springs, thirty miles north of Douglas, that the stockmen were camped on North Powder river sixty miles north of Casper. Two rustlers, Nate Champion and a man named Ray, were killed yesterday on Powder river. Donnelly reports the rustlers flying in every direction and attempting to escape from the country. Three of them passed through Antelope Springs to-day. When Donnelly left Powder River crossing there had been no casualties in the stockmen's party. The telegraph line from Douglas to Buffalo is working, but an intermediate telegraph office near Ross in the hands of one of the factions, and no messages have been allowed to come through this afternoon. Casper, Glenrock and Douglas have a large number of small ranchmen on the streets anxiously waiting for news from the scene of trouble.

A LOVERS' QUARREL.

It Causes a Hudson Youth to Take His Own Life.

Hudson, Wis., Special April 12.—G. W. Addison, familiarly known as "Stub," committed suicide last night by taking laudanum. Yesterday Addison had a quarrel with Miss Carrie Seidell, to whom he was engaged, when he handed over his watch and a few little trinkets to her, remarking that she would never see him again. He then went to a drug store and procured an ounce of laudanum, which he swallowed while driving through the street. He was taken home and doctors summoned, but they could do nothing for him and he died shortly afterward. Addison was interested in the Addison hack line, driving one of the hacks, and was well known. He would have been twenty-one years old next Wednesday. Miss Seidell refused to marry him on account of his intemperate habits. The girl is prostrated. The funeral will occur to-morrow from the residence of the parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Addison.

A Gain for the Democrats.

Providence, R. I., April 12.—The second election in Charlestown to-day resulted: Senator Joseph C. Church, Republican representative; Herbert A. Gates, Democrat. The representative is a gain for the Democrats.

Charged Up to Perry.

Pomona, Cal., April 12.—The mystery of the robbery of George E. Holden of New York of $8,000 in a Pullman car last November has just been cleared up. Holden has identified the securities, which prove that the money and bonds were stolen by Oliver Curtis Perry, who made the sensational attempt to rob the New York Central train last February. Curtis was on the train with Holden, but represented himself as a New Mexican cattle rancher. After stealing Holden's valuables he left the train in the night. Pinkerton detectives have found the bonds and jewelry, but Perry spent all the money.

CONGRESS

Proceedings of the House and Senate.

Monday, April 4.

SENATE.

When the vice-president laid Mr. Morgan's silver resolutions before the senate this morning, a discussion as to rules between Mr. Sherman and Mr. Morgan occurred, Mr. Sherman endeavoring to repress the silver matter. Finally, however the resolutions were taken up. Mr. Morgan spoke in their support. He criticised the silver act of 1890, and Mr. Sherman remarked that there was not the slightest doubt as to what was meant by the act of 1890.

Mr. Stewart made a speech on the general subject of silver. At the close of his remarks the matter went over, Mr. Morgan's resolutions being placed on the calendar under the rules.

HOUSE.

The "Chinese exclusion bill" was passed by the house of representatives today after only 30 minutes debate by a vote of 179 ayes to 43 nays.

Mr. Springer appeared in the house today and received quite an oration. He requested Mr. Bryan of Nebraska to read a speech he had prepared on the fine wool question but on account of his health was unable to deliver. Mr. Bryan read the speech after which the committee took up the bill by paragraphs.

Tuesday, April 5th.

SENATE.

The Indian appropriation bill was taken up in the senate today, the question being on Mr. Dawes's motion to strike out the provision for the assignment of army officers to the duties of Indian agents, with the amendment attached to it (as offered by Mr. Hawley), that whenever the president shall be of opinion that the good of the service specially requires it, he may appoint a civilian.

Senator McMillian, chairman of the committee on the District of Columbia, today introduced a bill providing for the regulation of saloons in the district and in Washington.

Senator Sherman, from the committee on finance, reported adversely a number of Alliance financial schemes.

HOUSE.

A bill was reported in the house today authorizing the State of Wisconsin to place in statuary hall a statue of Pere Marquette.

A bill was reported by Representative McMillin, from the postoffice and post roads committee, which reclassifies railway postal clerks and adds two more classes at salaries not exceeding respectively $1,000 and $1,800 a year, besides increasing the maximum salaries of all the other classes, except the first, by about $100 a year.

The wool bill was taken up again today but the house adjourned without accomplishing anything.

Wednesday, April 6.

SENATE.

Morgan's resolutions on free coinage were up in the senate today. Senator Wolcott made a long address on the subject of free coinage in which he bitterly attacked the administration for its action in the matter.

Mr. Pettigrew also offered an amendment authorizing the secretary of the interior to expend not over $50,000 in the construction of two Indian industrial schools (to cost not over $25,000 each), one near Chamberlain, S. D., and the other near Rapid City, S. D. Agreed to.

HOUSE.

After considerable discussion in committee of the whole the fine wool bill was reported to the house.

The joint resolution agreed upon by the house committee on foreign affairs calling on the president for information as to whether by operation of the Russian laws concerning Jews any American citizen of Jewish faith is subjected to restrictions which violate the treaty between the United States and Russia, was reported to the house by Representative Chipman.

Thursday, April 7.

SENATE.

The wool bill was laid before the senate by the vice-president and referred to the finance committee.

The senate passed a bill to extend to Marquette, Mich., the privilege of immediate transportation of unappraised merchandise.

The senate devoted the entire day to the District of Columbia appropriation bill. It was only partly completed at adjournment, and a hot debate was in progress over the appropriation of $100,000 to defray the expenses of the visiting G. A. R. to Washington.

HOUSE.

The house to-day passed the bill placing wool on the free list. The vote stood 194 to 60.

After the passage of the free wool bill the house went into committee of the whole on the Turner cotton bagging bill. After a short debate the committee rose and the house adjourned.

Friday, April 8.

SENATE.

The senate today passed the bill appropriating $100,000 for entertaining the national encampment of the G. A. R.

The senate today made public the correspondence transmitted by the president touching the declination of the Chinese government to receive Hon. H. W. Blair as United States minister.

Several postmasters were confirmed today.

HOUSE.

In committee of the whole today the house resumed consideration of the cotton bagging bill. After considerable debate the committee won and reported the bill to the house.

Interest in the tariff discussion is steadily on the decline and the attendance in the house was small.

Representative Dickerson, of Kentucky, reported to the house from the banking and currency committee a bill to require the redemption of bank notes which may have been lost by or stolen from any national bank and put in circulation before being signed by the officers of the bank or where they were issued upon the forged signatures of such officers.

Saturday, April 9.

SENATE.

No business of importance was transacted in the senate to-day.

HOUSE.

The house to-day finished the consideration of the cotton tie bill, Dr. Dalzell of Pennsylvania taking the floor in opposition to the measure. Mr. Turner followed Mr. Dalzell, and at the close of his remarks the bill was passed by a vote of 167 to 46.

In the lighthouse bill reported by the committee on commerce, Bayfield gets a pier light and bell, Superior bay a lighthouse and Grand Portage a light and fog whistle.

The house to-day passed a joint resolution authorizing the State of Wisconsin to place in the statuary hall of the capital a statue of Pere Marquette.

The house committee on Indian affairs has non-concurred in the senate amendments to the Indian appropriation bill.

He Has It.

Bumley—Say, old fellow, have you a five that you could lend me?"

Notmuch—Oh, yes.

"Oh, thank you, old fellow, thank you very much!"

"Yes, I have it, and I'm going to keep it."—The Jester.

Oscar Olson, of Crookston, was in town the first of the week on business.

The roads were never worse and business suffers considerable in consequence.

Fred Eickhoff returned to-day from St. Paul where he has been spending a few days.

Agent McKallor has received word to-day that he will be relieved, next Friday.

This is the nice early spring our weather prophets told us about last winter.

Daniel Patterson made a short business trip to Lake Park, Minn, last week returning home on Monday.

P S. Stranahan arrived to-day from Donaldson and will stay a few days and cultivate the acquaintance of his family.

Dr. Watson, of Red Lake Falls, was in town last Thursday attending Mrs. J. L. Johnson, who has been quite sick, Cashier L. Ellington, of the Scandia American Bank, of Crookston, was in town the first of the week on business.

Agent McKallor expected to leave us to day but received word yesterday that they could not relieve him until Friday at least.

Four carloads of stock are being shipped from here to-day by parties who have bought them in the surrounding country.

The Thief River Falls stage comes into town now-a-days behind four horses and their schedule time is about two miles an hour,

James Door, of St. Paul, general agent for the Aetna Life Insurance Co. has been in town this week in the interest of that company.

If seeding commences by the 1st of May we will be in luck. If this weather dont change soon it will be at least a month later than that.

Seeding cannot commence for at least two weeks under the best possible conditions and it may be considerable longer. The prospects for a large acreage this year is not brilliant to say the least.

S. M. Dainard received a carload of baled hay last Monday. This is we believe the first hay ever shipped into this town. Hay is plentiful enough in the country but at present it is almost impossible to get it into town.

James Dainard has rented the butcher shop from M. Hendrickson for one year, Jim has considerable experiance in the business and will we predict do well, He says that he will keep a good stock of fresh meat on hand at all times.

We have to be contented with mail three times a week now as the stage from Crookston has not been running the past week. The roads between here and there are almost impassible and it would be next to impossible to get through.

Messrs. Tindolph, Pratt Kratka, Knox and Grundy, the irresistable boomers of Thief River Falls, walked down last Friday to take the train for Crookston. They informed us that the walking was not near as good as it might be but that the roads were impassible for a team.

The editor of this paper wishes to publicly express his thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Martin Williams for the party generously given in honor of his twenty-eighth birthday last Monday evening; also to M. E. Bjerk, Martin Williams, S. M. Hoff, Sever Elstad and Christ Hall for valuable and appropriate presents.

The water in the river has been raising rapidly the past few days and fears are entertained that the county bridge will be washed away. The water this morning was within about four feet of the bottom of the bridge and if the ice jams above ar at the bridge it would probably go.

There is talk of nominating Knute Nelson for Governor, If the Norwegians swallow Knute Nelson because of his nationality after his grand flop from free trade in Congress to protection in Minnesota, they lack the principle of honesty which characterized their political actions,—Red Lake Falls News.

Paul S. Ware, foreman of the Crookston Times, was in town to-day on his way back from Thief River Falls. He informs us that he has purchased a one half interest in the Thief River Falls Press. He has also purchased the plant formerly used by the Crookston Chronicle and it will be moved. The new firm of Mussey & Ware will commence operation in a few days and they expect to make things hum. Mr. Ware is a newspaper man of considerable ability and should succeed,

The Toronto Empire quotes largely from Democratic statements as to the results and prospects of reciprocity and chuckles over the disparaging views taken. The Empire may derive all the satisfaction it can out of the misstatements of the enemies of reciprocity; but, all the same, the policy is a substantial success even in its very inception. However, this country does not care a straw for Canadian opinion on our policies.—Journal,

It is a somewhat formidable current statement that in the last two years 10,196 murders were committed in this country and only 552 of the murderers suffered the death penalty and 322 of of these were lynched. This may be slightly exaggerated, but in the main the statement is true, One cause of the ebullition of murder is the failure of constituted authority to limit the saloon power narrowly, and another cause is the failure of constituted parental authority to assert itself over wilfull children, who, unrestrained, become the agents of crime.—Journal.

The approaching political contest in Minnesota, so it seems, is not to be fought on any partisan lines, but purely upon personal consideration. Protection, free silver, prohibition and the sub-treasury are not in it for discussion excepting with certain factions who are not in it for offices. The great questions now are: "Give me C. K. Davis, or give me death!" "Knute Nelson or nothing!" "Merriam and Lind against the world!" "McGill and our crowd!" These are the momentous "issues" upon which the Republican party in Minnesota is thundering toward defeat at a rapid rate,—Midway News.

The opening of the Sisseton reservation, just over the Minnesota line, in Dakota, is to be characterized by a rush of settlers, just as was the opening of Oklahoma, This means some lumber trade for the dealers at Browns Valley Ortonville and other towns in the vicinity. Men are already preparing to rush on the lands as soon as the reservation is declared open for settlement horses are being bought instead of hired and excitement runs high. But in nine cases out of ten equally as good land can be bought either in Minnesota or Dakota for what it will cost the excited would-be settlers to get title to the lands in the reservation and bring them to the same state of cultivation as the lands which can be had for cash, There seems, however, to be a facination about grabbing for reservation lands, even though equally good government lands can be had elsewhere upon substantially the same terms, but without the attendant hurrah.—Mississippi Valley Lumberman.

Washington April 8.—The board appointed by the government to examine and estimate the lands on the White Earth reservation has completed its labors, and reports have already been placed on file here, The same examiners are now busy on the Red Lake reservation but it will be some time before the work assigned to them at that place can be gone over. Parties who had anticipated upon filing claims on either of the reservations this year may be disappointed and forced to await the spring of 1893 before they can secure any of the valuable lands located on the tracts, as the examiners must finish before entries can be made. At the present time the timber sales are not all made, nor can they be until the appraisements are all made. Some of the agricultural lands may be opened for settlers this fall, but indications now point to the probability of no proclamation being made until next spring. This will be a great disappointment to speculators who were sizing up choice pieces of property and making arrangements to stake it out this fall,

The end of the wheat investigation has been reached without anything of practical benefit having been accomplished. It has been a jumble of politics and legal or lawyer's strifes, with a little bit of agriculture on the side. Whether the next legislature, to whom the report is to be submitted, can find anything in the vast mass of irrelevant matter and guess work from which any practicle deductions may be deduced, is altogether a puzzle.

The subject of grain inspection is of sufficient consequence to be treated upon business principles and attended to by practical men and not intrusted to politicians and speculators who are more interested in something else than in securing fair justice for the farmers from the elevator men and any and all others who may come in for the handling of the crops.

The state has expended some $16,000 for the purposes of the investigation, and there is really nothing to show for it, That is to say nothing has been found out or developed, in any way, to be of permanent benefit to the grain growers, in whose interest the inquiry was instituted. As a matter of fact the farmers will be quite as well off should the system of grain inspection be accomplished until such time as business can be done without the intervention of political bosses.—St. Paul News.

MORTGAGE SALE.

Default has been made in the conditions of a certain mortgage executed and delivered by Kristoffer K. Sandmoen, and Carrie Sandmoen his wife, mortgagors, to Albert O. Runice, mortgagee, dated the first day of March 1890, and recorded as a mortgage in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the county of Polk in the state of Minnesota, on the 13th day of March 1890 at 4:30 o'clock p. m. in book 48 of mortgages on pages 418 to 421 inclusive on which there is claimed to be due at the date of this notice the amount of seven hundred and fifty-eight dollars and sixty cents ($758.60) and no action has been instituted at law or in equity to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof.

Notice is hereby given, that by virtue of a power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the mortgaged premises therein described, which sale will be made at the front door of the court house at the city of Crookston, in the county of Polk and state of Minnesota, at public auction by the sheriff of said county, or by his duly authorized deputy, on Saturday the fourteenth day of May 1892 at 2 o'clock, in the afternoon, to satisfy the amount which shall then be due upon said mortgage with the interest thereon and costs and expenses of sale and statutory attorney fees, as stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure.

The premises described in said mortgage, and go to be sold are the lot, piece or parcel of land, situated in the county of Polk in the state of Minnesota, and known and described as follows, to-wit:—Lot number six (6) of Section seven (7), and the east one-half of the northwest quarter (E. ½, N. W. ¼), and lot number one (1) of section [8] all in township one hundred and fifty-two (152), north of range forty-three [43] west of the fifth principal meridian.

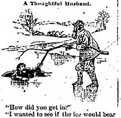
Not to Be Buried.

The late Sir Thomas Chambers was not a wit, and laughter seldom entered the court over which he presided so solemnly. There is, however, one good story told of him in The Temple. It is to the effect that a prisoner who was undefended pleaded "Guilty," and counsel, having been instructed to defend him at the last moment, withdrew the plea and substituted that of "Not guilty," with the result that the jury acquitted him. In discharging the prisoner Sir Thomas is said to have remarked: "Prisoner, I do not envy your feelings. On your own confession you are a thief, and the jury has found that you are a liar."—Argonaut.

A Thoughtful Husband.



"How did you get in?"

"I wanted to see if the ice would bear me and my wife, and"——

"Where is she?"

"I'm standing on her. How the deuce could I keep my head above water to yell for help if I didn't?"—Harper's Bazar.

Too Much Climax.

A man rode in the elevator car of a big down town building the other day. The boy who boosted the car was ambitious in letters and had a novel hitched up in front of him. He was not as much skilled as he was ambitious, and like other unlearned men he read painfully and half aloud, keeping at the same time an eye on the floors.

"Flossie," he muttered, "turned upon the baffled inventor, her eyes flashing with indignashun, and stamped her foot on the"—second floor, gents—"on the marble-pavement, while her voylet eyes flashed fire and her shapely bosom heaved with"—third floor, massage parlor, 309, to your right—"with wrath. 'Oh, sir,' she said, 'you little recked with whom'—fourth—'you had to deal. I am but a pore country girl, little skilled in the ways of'—seventh floor, Dr. Williams—'the ways of the world: but I know you, caitiff, and I defy you.' 'Ah,' cried the baffled fiend, 'you'—ninth floor—'shall not thus escape me.' He drew a murderous revolver from his"—tenth—"and pointed it at the fair creature. At this moment"—eleventh floor: 'sfar's we go. Who do you want to find, sir?

"I wanted to get off at the sixth," said the fat passenger, "but that does no' make any difference. Does the feller kill her?"

"I'll see," said the elevator booster, reversing the lever for the down trip. "At this moment the door burst open and a lithe, active form tore into the room. The girl gave a little scream of delight, and with a wild cry of 'Thank God, I'm saved!' she fell into the protecting arms of honest John Souther. Here's the sixth floor."

"Thank you!" said the fat man.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Saved.

"My daughter, I am ruined," sadly said the unsuccessful business man. "I do not know what we can depend upon hereafter for our support."

"Do not worry, father dear," was the loving daughter's fond reply. "I will save you, and by my sacrifice we shall live as happily as before."

"You, my daughter!" exclaimed the stricken man. "Why, what in the world can you do to raise ready money for me now?"

And the girl answered him proudly, "I will melt up my engagement rings."—Somerville Journal.

A Little Too English.

Chum—What! You are not engaged to Miss Hightone? Well, I declare! I thought surely that would be a match."

Young Tremolo—I backed out. She was too much a slave of fashion, too English, you know.

Chum—You amaze me.

Young Tremolo—Fact. She wanted me to go by myself and ask her father's consent.—New York Weekly.

A Doctor's Opinion.

First Friend—You have not been looking well lately. You should try dieting.

Second Friend—By Jove, old fellow, you ought to diet.

Third Friend—Say, old boy, your blood is out of order. Try plain food and a little of it for awhile.

Doctor (after a brief examination)—All you need is dieting. Five dollars, please.—Good News.

To the Influenza Germ.

By the shivering fits that chill us,
By the feverish heats that grill us,
By the pains acute which fill us,
By the aches which maul and mill us,
By the quacks who draft and pill us,
By the hydropaths who swill us,
By the allopaths who bill us,
By the nervous fears which kill us—
Tell us, tell us, wee Bacillus,
What and why and whence you are!

Say, are you a germ atomic?
Have you uses economic?
Are you truly miasmatic?
Are you solid or lymphatic?
Frankly, is your cause zymotic?
Are you native or exotic?
When your business is transacted
Is your stay to be protracted?
And do you intend, Bacillus,
To return again and kill us?
Do make answer, if you please!

Tell us briefly, tiny mystery,
What's your source and what's your history;
Clear the clouds of obfuscation
That surround your incubation.
Furnish, without more obstruction,
Your belated introduction.
Let us know your why and wherefore,
What it is you're in the air for.
And meanwhile, O wee Bacillus,
Since with morbid dread you fill us,
Prithee, take your leave at once.

Declining Population of France.

At the last meeting of the Paris Academie de Medicine the question of the depopulation of France was discussed "from beyond the tomb" in a posthumous report of the late M. Fereol, the learned secretary for the year, whose death the academy had recently to deplore. In the year recently closed M. Fereol states there was a deficit of 30,000 births, when compared with deaths. Whatever explanations may be offered of the striking falling off in the natality of the French race, there can be no doubt as to the fact. From 1861 to 1880 the proportion of births to population was 25 per 1,000 in France, while Prussia reached 38 and Italy 37.

Dr. Leon Lefort two years ago calculated that Prussia doubled its population in fifty-four years and Saxony in forty-five, while France would take, at her then rate, 354 years. Since then the birth rate instead of rising has fallen still lower. If the latest figures are to be taken as normal, "it is no longer," observes Dr. Fereol, "a matter of reckoning how long it will take France to double her population, but rather how soon she will lose one-half of her present number."

The "Ancient Regime" of France was the period of the oldest son; the present age is the period of the only child. Like all Frenchmen, Dr. Fereol foresees war between the Gaul and the Teuton, and he is disquieted by the prospects of a struggle between a race increasing and multiplying with steady and rapid growth and a nation which, with all its fine qualities, is beginning almost to decrease. The appeal to the young, however, in the name of patriotism, to marry and have large families gives the subject a humorous aspect.—London Tablet.

Cardinal Manning.

I trouble myself little about dogma, and I judge men rather by their lives than by what they believe or disbelieve in regard to matters respecting which mankind has differed for ages and is never likely to agree. And this is why I so greatly admired Cardinal Manning. If he was a prince of the church to which he belonged, he was a soldier, and did soldier's work in the army that regards all men as brothers, ever ready to battle for all that would alleviate human suffering or make men better.

Never did I see any one who looked more the ideal cardinal. Only a week or two before his death he sent a message to me to come and see him, as he said that we were neighbors, and that he could not leave his house. I was unable to do this, as I was myself unwell, but I had on previous occasions enjoyed the privilege of sitting with him. The house in which he lived was a large one, and to my thinking a most unlivable one. But he affected no state or ceremony. The caller sent up his name, and if the cardinal was disengaged he was received in a large room, with a little table by the fire, near which he sat arrayed in a cassock and with a scarlet cap on his head. He was dignified and yet genial, talking on every subject, and talking well on it.—London Truth.

"Vagabond Parties" in Washington.

The latest fad in the social circles of Washington is what are termed "vagabond parties." The new amusement consists of the simulation of poverty, the guests vieing with each other as to dress and manner, even to the smallest details. All sorts of startling realistic personifications of the dejected and forlorn are presented, but most of the types are drawn from the lower stages of American life of today, the tramp being a favorite character. At a party of this kind last week a new feature was introduced. When most of the guests had assembled there drove up to the house, with great noise and clatter, what looked like a police patrol wagon.

Several policemen jumped out, drew their clubs, ran up the steps, rang the bell, rushed into the house past the astonished and terrified domestic who opened the door, and proceeded to arrest everybody in the parlors. There was general consternation until it was discovered that the policemen were guests in disguise, who had taken that way of adding "realism" to the occasion.—Washington Letter.

A 335-Mile Aqueduct.

Nearly every year some new scheme is brought out for securing to Paris a pure and unfailing water supply. In 1890 it was proposed to take the water from the Lake of Neuchatel, and now M. Duvillard, engineer at Creuzot, again speaks in favor of the already much ventilated plan of utilizing the water of the Lake of Geneva for that purpose. It is an acknowledged fact that the water of this latter lake is very pure, and that its temperature at a depth of about ninety feet rests stationary at nearly 46 degs. Fahrenheit, while at Paris the mean temperature of the water is about 54 degs.

The water, according to the plan of M. Duvillard, would be taken at Thonon, carried from there through tunnels and steel pipes to Culoz, thence to Macon, to Charolles, and alongside the hills of Morvan to Clamecy. From this place it could be conducted to Paris in one straight line. The total length of the conduit would be 335 miles.—Industries.

Will Keep Heat for Twenty Hours.

A useful, seasonable invention called a foot warmer is being introduced. The special feature of this invention consists in its being so constructed that it will retain the heat for many hours. The warmer is double cased and packed with a special nonconducting material, only a small quantity being used on the top, allowing the heat to escape where required. This arrangement insures a comfortable heat from first to last, thereby presenting a great advantage over other warmers, which are frequently too hot at first and soon get cold. It is claimed that the small foot warmer will keep at a comfortable heat for at least six hours when exposed to the atmosphere; if used in a bed or otherwise protected, for about twenty hours.—New York Telegram.

Drawing Money for Christmas.

It is stated that two days before Christmas day, 1891, no fewer than 28,000 notices of withdrawal reached the Post-office Savings bank. On several occasions 25,000 notices of withdrawal have been received, but 28,000 is the highest number received in one day since the establishment of the department.—London Tit-Bits.

Royal Deaths Always Sudden

"Monarchs may die, but they may never be ill," is an old Turkish proverb which is brought home with peculiar force in connection with the recent demise of Khedive Tewfik of Egypt, Scarcely any one, either in Euorpe or even in Egypt itself, was aware that the Pasha was ill before his death was announced.

It is curious that each of his predecessors is stated to have died in an equally sudden manner, and there is suspicion of Oriental mystery surrounding the deaths of these men, who but a day prior to their decease were popularly regarded as full of vigor and health.

Thus no one knew that Said Pasha had been ill until he had been dead for two days, while his predecessor, Abbas, the namesake of the present Khedive, was driven in a closed carriage, but in public view, through the streets of Cairo after having been strangled in his harem by order of the Sultan. It was only when his corps had reached the citadel that his death "from sickness" was announced.—N. Y. Recorder.

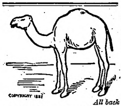
When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Capt. Charles Rath, who hanged Mrs. Surratt and the other Lincoln conspirators in Washington, was suddenly bereft of reason on the run to Jackson, Mich., with the mail train. He has been mail agent for twenty years between Grand Rapids and Jackson.

Pure and Wholesome Quality

Commends to public approval the California liquid laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs. It is pleasant to the taste and by acting gently on the kidneys, liver and bowels to cleanse the system effectually, it promotes the health and comfort of all who use it, and with millions it is the best and only remedy.

Cheerfulness is the daughter of employment.



All back

—every cent you've paid for it, if it doesn't benefit or cure you. A medicine that promises this is one that promises to help you.

But there's only one medicine of its kind that can and does promise it. It's Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It's the guaranteed remedy for all Blood, Skin and Scalp Diseases, from a common blotch or eruption to the worst scrofula. It cleanses, purifies, and enriches the blood, invigorates the system, and cures Salt-rheum, Tetter, Eczema, Erysipelas and all manner of blood-taints from whatever cause. Great Eating Ulcers rapidly heal under its benign influence.

It's the best blood-purifier, and it's the cheapest, no matter how many doses are offered for a dollar—for you pay only for the good you get.

Nothing else is "just as good" as the "Discovery." It may be better —for the dealer. But he wants money and you want help.

"German Syrup"

I must say a word as to the efficacy of German Syrup. I have used it in my family for Bronchitis, the result of Colds, with most excellent success. I have taken it myself for Throat Troubles, and have derived good results therefrom. I therefore recommend it to my neighbors as an excellent remedy in such cases. James T. Durette, Earlysville, Va. TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER VII—CONTINUED.

"Good heavens!" I exclaimed, losing my temper; "what notion have you got hold of now? Last night you suspected Sir Edmund—"

"I would suspect any one who has the opportunity to possess himself of such a treasure as you hold. Do you blame the man who protects himself when his life is in danger? That diamond is life to me. What could I do if it were lost? You hold that diamond—my life—in your keeping. You are bound to take every precaution for its safety. You have no right to despise my warning because it does not agree with your reckless trust in humanity."

"Take the diamond into your keeping, if you think it is not safe in mine," I said.

"You make that offer because you know I am powerless to accept it in my blind and helpless condition. How can I keep it against a man like Brace?"

"If you have more faith in my power to keep the diamond why do you accuse me of neglecting its safety?"

"Because you are blind to the danger that exists. God!" he exclaimed, protruding his sightless eyes to the light, and clenching his hands in frenzy, "to think that those who can see will not see?"

"What possible connection can there be," I asked, "between the safety of our diamond and the event of last night?"

"A palpable connection. The event of last night was an abortive attempt to obtain the diamond."

As I heard this, and looked at Van Hoeck, I almost doubted if he were in his right mind.

"The plot failed," he continued, "because the girl mistook the room."

An incredulous explanation escaped me.

"You shall hear me," he muttered, stretching his arm to the right and left until he encountered mine with his hand, and then clutching it tightly; "you shall see—with my eyes, if not with your own. You have urged that the girl could know nothing of the disposition of the rooms; but she might receive instructions from her father. He went into the wood to give her instructions yesterday. Look at your plan." He handed me the diagram I had drawn at his request. "Brace, having his room at the back of the right block, would naturally tell her that, when she got to the top of the stairs, she was not to pass through the picture gallery, but to go straight to the landing over the stairs she had ascended, open the window in the bay, which would then be on her left hand, and make her way to the oriel facing her. That, according to his calculation, would bring her to your window."

"Certainly."

"But he did not take account of the fact that the door by which the girl enters the house is at the back of the right block, and that the stairs by which she would ascend to the first floor bring her to the landing between Sir Edmund's room and Miss Lascelles'. Thus, though carrying out her father's instructions to the letter, she must inevitably make her attempt upon Miss Lascelles' room, and not upon yours. Look at your plan."

"I follow you perfectly well," I said astonished by the ingenuity of his explanation, which had made a perfectly incredible supposition possible,—nay, for the moment probable.

"Are you convinced?" he asked triumphantly.

"You have yet to explain how Brace thought to obtain the diamond by the means he employed. He would scarcely expect that I should faint with terror."

"Who said he would? Brace calculated upon dealing with a heavy sleeper, not a nervous girl. The tapping is described as soft and regular; it was intended to test whether you were asleep or not. The moment a light appeared the sound ceased,—the girl had gone back to the bay. From the landing she could see when the light was put out, and it was safe to recommence the attack. The candle was lit with some difficulty the second time,—Miss Lascelles possibly stood with her back to the window as she held the vesta. Lola may have detected the first glimmer, and, uncertain or not whether it was safe to continue, turned the blind and looked through. At that moment the wick burned up, and Miss Lascelles, turning, saw the girl's eyes between the laths. The knock was not repeated, for a simple reason,—Lola had discovered her mistake, and retreated. Do you know now the purpose with which Brace has gone to seek the girl to-day?"

I was forced to admit that this explanation was feasible; yet I could not believe that Lola, who seemed sincerely attached to me, would consent to aid in my ruin merely at the instigation of her father, whose authority she habitually disregarded. I said this to Van Hoeck.

"It is because she is attached to you—because she loves you," he replied, with emphasis, "that she would readily enter into her father's project to rob you of the diamond. The diamond is her enemy,—it has separated you from her, and placed you side by side with Miss Lascelles, for whom she has manifested a jealous hatred from the very first. What could be more gratifying to her savage disposition than to take away the diamond that has created this difference between you and her, and to reduce you once more to her level? It is the only hope she can have of getting you away from Miss Lascelles, and restoring the former condition of equality upon which your companionship with her rested."

Again I was compelled to admit the force of Van Hoeck's argument.

"But why," I asked, should Brace trust such a perilous undertaking to his daughter?"

"For an obvious reason," he replied. "If you caught her in the act of robbing, you would not raise your hand against her; if you caught him, you would blow his brains out. For her you would find excuse; for him none."

In this there was truth also.

"Talking of that," he continued, "what arms do you keep about you for defense?"

"None," I replied.

"I thought so. Take this," he said, drawing a long clasp-knife from his breast pocket.

He showed the spring with which the narrow blade opened, and the catch which locked it at the back of the horn handle, and made me promise to use it for my defense, no matter who attacked me. I also promised to close my window, which I habitually kept open at night, and to secure the fastening of that, as well as the door, before going to bed. Finally, he exacted that I should once more inclose the Hesper in the leather case, and strap it to my wrist the last thing at night.

The Judge did not return until dusk. He was fatigued, and his general appearance indicated a pursuit through rough and thorny ways.

"I hev seen the Kid," he said, "but she would not listen to reason; and, not bein' afeered of spiling her clothes, she nat'rally got the best of the argument, and played it low down on her father."

He advocated starving her into better behavior and would have had the door closed to cut off her communication with the dairy; but Miss Lascelles would not listen to this; she would not yield to fear, and declined to change her room or alter her ordinary habitudes.

We separated a little before eleven. The night was close and stuffy. I had no inclination to go to bed, especially as I had given Van Hoeck my word to close the window beforehand.

There was a reading-lamp in my room. I lit it, put out the candle, and seated myself in a comfortable chair with a book. Not a sound was to be heard after the clock struck. I read on, without moving from my chair, until past twelve. From time to time I had taken my eyes from the book and listened intently,—not in anticipation of hearing the mysterious tapping at my window, but in apprehension of its being repeated upon Edith's—and, as the last stroke of midnight reverberated through the still night, I closed my book and listened again. The silence without was so complete that the burning of the oil in the lamp at my side was distinctly audible.

At that moment I heard a board creak. It was so slight a sound that, had my attention been fixed upon the book, I should not have noticed it. I could not tell where it came from; I was not sure that it was not from the floor under my foot, as I changed my position. Instinctively I looked toward the window. I could see nothing beyond the circle of light reflected by the lamp shade. It was too absurd to take the lamp to the window,—there was no board there to creak. I waited some minutes, and, there being no repetition of the sound, I reopened my book; but I paused with my finger on the page to listen once more. A shuddering sigh, like that of a child who is crying itself to sleep, reached my ear.

I went to the window, drew up the blind softly, and looked out; for the sound had seemed to come from a distance, and I thought it might be the flutter of leaves in a breeze. But the night was unchanged,—heavy and still, the moon obscured, and a thin gray veil of mist hanging over the lawn, as Edith had seen it the night before. I opened the door noiselessly. All was dark. I could see only the mullion of the bay standing out vaguely against the grayness. I listened. At night heavy curtains were drawn across the head of the corridor, shutting it off from the passage upon which it abutted at right angles; nevertheless, I could hear the stertorous breathing of the Judge or Van Hoeck from the rooms beyond. I was sure that the sound I had heard was not imaginary, and determined, if possible to discover the cause. I went back to the table and fetched the lamp.

I had returned to where I stood by the door, when my eyes fell upon something lying at the threshold. Another step, and I should have put my foot upon it.

In steadying the shade, my left hand screened the light; as I withdrew it, I saw that the object at my feet was Lola!

She had curled herself upon the mat within the embrasure of the door. Her face was toward me, and pillowed upon her folded hands. She was asleep, yet her long, black lashes were wet, and clung to her cheek with an undried tear.

"Even Van Hoeck, if he could see you now, poor child," I said to myself, "could not think ill of you."

I would not awake her; I withdrew the light until she was in shadow, placed it on the table, fetched my book, and seated myself where I could read and yet watch the sleeper. As I did this, the clock in the belfry chimed the half-hour; I looked at my watch, and saw that it was half-past twelve.

I could not fix my attention upon the book for some time, my mind being occupied with conjectures to account for Lola's presence. It fitted in with Van Hoeck's theory and warning in some respects, yet—possibly because my judgment was biased by sentiment—I could not believe she had come there with any sinister intention. I was rather disposed to think that she had found solitude no longer bearable, and had sought this resting-place to be near the only friend she knew.

As I pondered, my eyes grew accustomed to the gloom, and I could see dimly the girl's face, her arms scarcely distinguishable against her dusky camisole, and the darker mass of her red petticoat. She did not move. If she had evaded her father, it is possible that she had fatigued herself as well as him. My heart was stirred with pity, and I resolved that when she awoke I would try, if she would listen to me, to reason her out of her savage isolation, and induce her to accept the kindness that Edith longed to bestow upon her. I would not purposely awake her, for in sleep there was the relative happiness of forgetfulness.

It was past one when I again began to read. From time to time I looked away from the page and assured myself that she was still sleeping. And so I sat watching and reading until past four o'clock, when the light began to fail, my eyes grew heavy, and unconsciously I fell asleep. I was awakened by my book falling from my hands to the floor. The lamp was yet alight, but burning so dimly that, looking toward the door, I could see nothing. I carried the lamp that way. Lola was gone.

When we met at breakfast, Edith was in her customary bright and cheerful mood. Reassured by her appearance, Sir Edmund said smiling:

"Well, my dear, has there been any recurrence of strange sounds and spectral sights during the night?"

"Yes," she answered; "but they did not frighten me, for I knew it was only poor Lola."

"Lola!" I exclaimed.

"I had left a light burning," she said; "the blinds were turned downward, and the light shone upon them; the tapping woke me. It was just the same sound that I heard before. Whilst I was looking at the blind before the open window, the tapping stopped, and I saw a finger come down between the third and fourth laths from the bottom, and turn the third; after that the finger slid in between the next two, and turned the second. Then I saw her two lustrous black eyes looking through. Almost immediately afterward they disappeared. 'Don't be afraid, Lola,' I said, in a low voice; for I feared, if she were frightened, she might slip from that terribly narrow ledge. I waited a few minutes, to give her time to get back to the bay, if she intended to, and then I drew up the blind and looked out. There was no one there, and the window in the bay was as we left it last night—closed."

"Are you sure it was Lola?" I asked.

"Yes, they were her eyes."

"Do you know what time it was when you saw her?" I asked.

"I can be sure of that, for taking my watch from the stand it fell, breaking the glass and stopping the hands, and very soon after that I heard the clock strike."

She showed me the watch; the minute-hand was so bent that it could not pass the hour-hand; when I lifted it, the movement recommenced, proving that the spring had not run down.

The hour marked by the hands was five minutes to one.

"At five minutes to one Lola was sleeping at my door." I said.

CHAPTER VIII.

Edith could not say whether the lath she had seen turned were open when she went to the window, and there were no means of confirming the fact afterward, because in pulling up the blind they would, if open, be returned to their former position. In face of my evidence, she was firmly convinced that what she had seen and heard was an extraordinary illusion of the senses, parallel to that which furnishes the sole excuse for a tolerably widespread belief in supernatural appearances. She was ashamed of the feebleness of mind which her experiences seemed to imply, and, resolved to overcome the weakness, resisted all her father's persuasions to change those conditions under which she had passed the last two nights.

Van Hoeck alone refused to believe in Edith's hallucination.

"One has only to hear Miss Lascelles speak to discredit a notion of that kind," he said; "she has every sign of mental vigor and physical strength, and to accuse such a girl of that kind of morbid insanity called hallucination, is just as creditable to your understanding as to believe in the simplicity and honesty of a vagabond Californian card-sharper, and the half-breed wench he chooses to call his daughter.

LOVE-MAKING BY TELEGRAPH.

The Momentous Question That a Message Answered Not Long Ago.

Said a Western Union telegraph operator the other day: "You wouldn't think that spoony lovers would resort to such public means of correspondence as the telegraph for the transmission of their sweet little messages of love and devotion, would you? But they do, just the same.

"Often a certain young man of whom I know if he does not regularly recieve a letter from the future source of his joy and happiness rushes here with a crestfallen countenance and files a message like this:

"'My dear, why did you not answer my last letter? Yours devotedly, ——'

"Perhaps you don't believe that such a message as this was ever sent, but I would show some of them to you if it wasn't against the rules. We fellows on the wire enjoyed quite an amusing incident not long ago, in which 'Sophia' revealed 'John's' brilliant scheme of popping the question by wire. We surmised that this brace of lovers had been conducting a correspondence for some time, which the artful 'John' culminated with the following dispatch that was evidently intended to draw forth an answer to an entirely different question:

"'Sophia: Did you receive my last letter?
JOHN.'

"Sophia, in her ecstatic delight, evidently understood the querry in a different sense from that which the ordinary reader of the epistle would, and proceeding to the telegraph office left the following:

"'John: Yes. How about next Christmas?
SOPHIA.'"

Hard To Get At.

Inquisitive city people in the country sometimes find small satisfaction in catechizing little country boys about their names and affairs. A "summer boarder" once said to a small boy dressed in a broad straw hat, a gingham waist, long trousers and bare feet:

"Hello, little boy! What is your name?"

"Same as pa's," said the boy.

"What's your pa's name?"

"Same as mine."

"I mean, what do they call you when they call you to breakfast?"

"They don't nuvver call me to breakfust."

"Why don't they?"

"'Cause I alluz git there the fust one!"

A Regular Freak.

"Can't you tell me, sir, where I might find a situation?" asked a man of a Chicago citizen.

"I am a stranger here, but I am a good worker."

"What at?" was the reply.

"Oh, anything at all; I am not afraid to work."

"Got any recommendations?"

"Well, no, but I am industrious; I am honest; I go to church regularly; I don't drink; I don't smoke; I don't lie; I have never been divorced."

"Ah, I see; just apply around the corner at the dime museum."

HERE IS A BEAR STORY.

A Trapped Brute Assisted by Another Bear in Carrying off the Trap.

Not long ago a cow died in the vicinity of the Guinn ranch, near the head of Goose creek, South of Wagon-Wheel gap, says the San Juan Prospector. It soon became apparent to William Guinn, owner of the ranch, that the carcass of the cow was being visited by a bear of very large dimensions, and, in company with Dell McClelland, Mr. Guinn decided to "sit up with" the bear and endeavor to get a shot at it by night. This was done, but owing to darkness the bear was not killed by shots fired. As the next resort a large bear-trap, weighing about seventy-five pounds, was procured and set near the dead "critter," and the trappers went to bed laughing at the trick they had played on the bear. The trap was chained to a pole eighteen feet long and eight inches through at the large end. In the morning an examination of the premises about the dead cow showed plainly that the bear and a cub had been there during the night. There was a large track, eighteen inches long and six or seven inches wide, and a small track, evidently made by a cub. The trap, however, was gone, and with it the eighteen-foot pole, and the disturbed condition of the ground showed conclusively that the bear had been caught in the trap. The trail, however, away from the scene was only the trail of two bears—there was not a mark of dragging either trap or pole. Mr. Guinn took up the trial, which he followed eight miles without coming upon the bears, trap, or pole. At the camp of Tom Carey, seven miles away, that gentleman told how in the night he had been awakened by a sound as of something walking, with an occasional pause and heavy fall on the ground, as though something had been dropped. Having no gun Mr. Carey set up in his tent the balance of the night and endeavored to keep warm by poking wood into a sheet-iron stove. The trail was followed a mile or so further and then lost. In one place the bears had passed through a heavy quaking aspen thicket and had literally mowed a path through the saplings showing that the trap and pole were being taken along. The natural inference is that the bear was caught in the trap and had picked up the same, with the pole, and started for the hills. The bear is an old offender in these parts, and Mr. Guinn hopes to find it yet.

Later—A man just in from the head of the San Juan reports that he passed the bears on the Pagosa road, beyond Summitville, jogging contentedly along, each carrying one end of the pole, while the old bear was caught in the trap by the right front foot.

Scotland and the Thistle.

The thistle was selected as the national emblem of Scotland in the year 1010. It was during the reign of Malcolm I. that a notable invasion of the country was made by the Danes. They came in thousands, and, landing on the coast, swarmed over the inhabited districts like locusts, destroying, burning and plundering wherever they went. For safety the inhabitants fled to the castles and fortified towns, and among the most notable of the fortresses of Aberdeenshire was Staine's Castle, where were collected a large number of people of the neighborhood. The Danes projected a surprise. Approaching the castle in the darkness, they planned to scale its walls, and laid aside their shoes that the greater secrecy might be observed when drawing near to the fortifications. The surprise might have been successful had it not been for the fact that, on descending into the dry moat, they found, to their great discomfiture and mortification, it was filled with thistles, by which their feet was so severely pricked that several made an outcry, which aroused the defenders of the castle and brought them to the wall in time to repel the onset. Regarding their good fortune in repelling the Danes as due to the thistles, these plants were immediately placed in the arms of Scotland and adopted as the emblem of the country.

Hypnotized by a Snake.

A remarkable snake story was told by a resident of Clarion county recently, and but for the unimpeachable character of the narrator would sound like a "snake story." He stated that a farmer who lived near Clarion while in a field was attacked by a snake fully ten feet in length. The reptile coiled itself around the farmer's waist and glared fixedly in his face evidently trying to charm him. Shaking off the dizzy feeling caused by the snake's hypnotic gaze, the farmer cut it to pieces with the scythe and then, exhausted with fright and overexertion, sank to the ground.

The head of the snake, with a portion of the body, lay near him and the peculiar color caused him to pick it up and he found it was an albino blacksnake. The peculiar formation of the snake's eyes caused him to examine them closely and he could hardly believe the evidence of his senses when he discovered a perfect reproduction of his face photographed in the center of the eye. He brought the snake back to town, where it was photographed and preserved in alcohol. The negative taken by the photographer shows the snake's eye perfectly with the farmer's face showing as clearly as if also taken with a camera.—Oil City Derrick.

A Joke on Her Majesty.

Few people are perhaps aware how thoroughly the queen enjoys a joke. A gentleman-in-waiting, whom let us call Mr. A——, distinguished for his imitative powers and dramatic talent, is not infrequently called upon to trip the light fantastic toe, figuratively speaking when in attendance at Windsor and Balmoral.

One day the great lady, looking with a certain austerity straight into the face of Mr. A——, demanded:

"Now, Mr. A——, I am perfectly well aware that when my back is turned you imitate me. I wish to see you do it now, this minute!"

Poor Mr. A—— fell straightway into the royal trap, crimsoned, faltered, utterly lost his countenance.

"Ah!" exclaimed the queen, "I see I was right! You ought to be ashamed of yourself," and then added, laughing as heartily as any school girl, "but don't do it again."

A Discharge of Cannon,

Close to the ear could hardly startle a person of sensitive nerves more than the slamming of a door, the outcry of a child, the rattle of a heavy vehicle over a cobble stone pavement, the wailing of an asthmatic hand organ. Quiet and strengthen supersensitive nerves with Hostetters Stomach Bitters, and you can brave any hubbub with tranquility. Indigestion, a fecund cause of nervousness, is banished by the Bitters. So are malarious, bilious and kidney complaints, debility and rheumatism.

"I think I'll give the country the shake," remarked the malaria as it prepared for business.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars; free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O.

A highly esteemed lady of Freeport, Ill., was in Failing Health Because of Dyspepsia

But was fully cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

"A year ago this last fall I commenced to feel poorly. Although I was never a very strong woman, I had generally enjoyed good health. But I commenced to fail very rapidly, lost all appetite and ambition, did not take any interest in things, and barely dragged along with my work. During the winter and spring had to have help about my house work. Physicians did not help me and I got more and more discouraged. I suffered from dyspepsia so that I or meat, and at last so that I could not even use butter on my toast. Used to dip the toast in tea and even then it would distress my stomach. In the spring I hired a girl permanently, my health was so poor. She tried to persuade me to take Hood's Sarsaparilla, as a lady for whom she had worked before had been greatly benefited by its use. She continued to urge me, strongly saying 'It would only cost a dollar to try it.'

Could Not Eat Vegetables

I Dragged Along

Until August, when I purchased a bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla at Mr. Peich's drug store. In about a week I commenced to feel a little better. Could keep more food on my stomach and grew stronger. I took three bottles, am now perfectly well, have gained 22 pounds, am in excellent health. I owe all this to John Egan, a prominent and wealthy farmer of White Water township, near Dubuque, was found dead on the Cascade Narrow Guage road with his throat cut from ear to ear. Everything indicates that the man was murdered. He was in the habit of carrying considerable money. An investigation is being held.

The Millwaukee railway was awarded a verdict in the case of Mrs. William Werthkoff of Decorah, Iowa, against that road. Action was brought for damages for injuries received in a wreck at Coon Rapids, this state, and is but one of the many suits now pending in which the damages asked aggregate $100,000.

The first bulletin of the Iowa weather and crop review issued, makes the outlook for crops in this state a very bright one. There was a general excess of rainfall, which has delayed seeding, but the soil is well saturated at a greater depth than at any time within the past five years. Winter rye is in good condition. Live stock is in excellent condition. On the whole the outlook for the farmer is favorable.

CZAR ALEXANDER AS A BOXER

Few Men Dare to Put on the Gloves and Stand Up Before Him.

I hear that while at Copenhagen last summer the Czar distinguished himself as a boxer, boxing having become the favorite form of exercise of this imperial Hercules, writes the Marquise de Fontenoy.

His great difficulty is, and always has been, to find any one ready or willing to stand up against him and to respond to each blow by a counter one. Neither his Russian brothers nor any of the dignitaries of his court are particularly willing to oblige him in this matter, as they dread not only the force of his powerful fist but also fear of incurring his resentment in the event of their responding to his blows.

Indeed, the only man who ventures to put on the gloves with him and meet him fairly and squarely is his brother-in-law, young Waldemar, the sailor Prince of Denmark.

The other day during the performance of one of Wagner's most wearisome operas, the Czar and the Prince withdrew to a vacant room and had a good set-to, which was on the point of ending fatally, for the Czar's huge fist struck Prince Waldemar's chin with such force as to dash him to the ground, where he lay for a quarter of an hour before the Czar and his attendants could restore him to consciousness.

The Czar would do well to abandon the gloves, for he is apparently unable to realize the extent of his strength, and does much damage with his sledge-hammer blows. Indeed it was a blow such as this which struck his elder brother, the late Czarowitz Nicholas, on the chest, the which enabled Alexander not only to marry one of the most attractive Princesses in Europe, but also to become the heir to and eventually occupant of the Russian throne.

Trajan's Floating Palace.

One of the most wonderful buildings of antiquity was Trajan's floating palace. It was a wooden structure of two, or some say three, stories in height and built upon a gigantic raft which was set adrift in Lake Nemi in Italy and towed from place to place, as occasion required, by rowboats. It was a model pleasure house, having gardens and courts, covered porticoes and towers and pleasure boats plying from it to the shore, while the occupants of the place amused themselves fishing from its windows. It sunk A. D. 195, and on July 15, 1535, it was said to have been rediscovered at the bottom of the lake. According to the description given of it at that time the structure was 500 feet long by 270 wide and 69 in height. The floating palace has never reappeared in history since 1535, and much doubt has been thrown on the accounts then written.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A GREAT COMBINE.

Minority Report in the Grain Investigation Case Submitted.

Mr. Moore Finds a Great Combine Organized to Lower Prices.

Committeeman Moore has submitted a minority report on the wheat investigation. It is a very voluminous report, containing over 20,000 words. A synopsis is given below:

Representative Moore first expresses his regrets for being unable to sign the majority report. In his opinion the duty of the committee was to report the evidence, something more than an expression of the committee's opinion on the serious topics covered by the investigation. It was the committee's duty, he believed, to report specific findings when fully justified by the evidence in order that they may be the basis for the recommendations for legislation. He could not sign the majority report, because it did not make specific findings, or such findings as be thought ought to be made in view of the testimony.

Mr. Moore then explains the reasons which moved him to coincide with most of the conclusions of the majority report. Speaking of the combine the minority report states:

THE COMBINE.

I cannot agree with the finding in the majority report that the evidence fails to disclose a combine which fixes the price to be paid for wheat throughout the regions of Minnesota and the Northwest. On the contrary I most conscientiously declare that from the evidence taken before this committee it cannot be successfully denied that such a combine does exist throughout the State of Minnesota and the Northwest, and that the direct effect of such combine is to deprive the producer of wheat of a large per cent of the profits of his industry.

UNDER THE LAW OF SUPPLY AND DEMAND,

Duluth and Minneapolis should have three times the power, influence and every other element in fixing the price of Minnesota grain than Chicago and Milwaukee. What fiction prevents this natural application of the law of supply and demand to the market at Duluth and Minneapolis? If Chicago, with the wheat aggregated at Milwaukee, having but a little over 21,000,000 bushels to its credit can fix the price for 63,000,000 bushels gathered at Duluth and Minneapolis, it most certainly is done by some power other than law of supply and demand. To complete the logic of this reasoning let it be understood that the evidence in this case discloses the fact that the lake and rail rates from Duluth to the seaboard as reported in the testimony taken July 2, 1891, and March 8, 1892, make the freight from Duluth to the seaboard the nearly equal rate and freight from Chicago to the seaboard.

Bear in mind in this connection that the tonnage to and from Duluth is the equal of the tonnage to and from Chicago. The freight being practically the same from Duluth to the seaboard as it is from Chicago to the seaboard, the tonnage of the two ports being equal, what facility, what power, what influence is it which permits Chicago, with twenty-one millions to govern the price of sixty-three million bushels at Duluth? The situation of the Duluth and Minneapolis markets—their prostrate situation to the influence of an unnatural combine is doubly told and described, when it is ascertained from the testimony and an admitted fact that the price of wheat at Duluth is permitted and forced to be the price at Chicago, less the freight rate from Duluth. I quote now the testimony of Mr. Amsden bearing upon this question, which is here introduced.

NOW WHAT POWER

or what influence could possibly make the difference of 6½ cents between Chicago and Duluth, unless some power foreign to the law of supply and demand arbitrarily fixes this difference? Why does not the 63,000,000 bushels of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis control the 21,000,000 at Chicago and Milwaukee? It may be that my brethren on the committee do not understand the word combine to mean what I understand that word means. If my brethren on the committee understand that no combine has been discovered in the sense of the discovery of the two or three or more persons who sit down and arbitrarily fix the price of wheat at Duluth and Minneapolis, then I must agree with them that the evidence has not reached so far into the heart of this combine as to discover the names of these two or three or four individuals. But the word combine as used by me and as believed from the testimony to exist and control the price of wheat in Minnesota and the Northwest is rather that the price is unnaturally fixed and enforced by those interested in the gathering of the wheat crop of Minnesota and the Northwest upon other than the natural competitive and honorable principles. There can be no just reason why, with equal facilities and with equal freight rates, the 63,000,000 bushels at Duluth should not rather control the 21,000,000 tributary to Chicago than be controlled by it. What I mean by combine is that the united action of all the dealers in wheat in Minnesota and the Northwest is based upon the fiction that the price of wheat at Chicago necessarily governs the price at Duluth and Minneapolis. That the entire wheat business of Minnesota and the Northwest is carried on under this fiction is logically admitted by every witness who has been before the committee. How is this accomplished?

THE TESTIMONY SHOWS

that there is located at Minneapolis a board called the chamber of commerce, and at Duluth a similar board called the board of trade. The testimony shows that these boards are composed, so far as the wheat dealing interests are concerned, of dealers in wheat, both elevator men and commission merchants, with a few bonanza farmers. It is conceded that these boards meet daily and transact between themselves the purchase and sale of wheat. It is also conceded that these sales are largely fictitious sales. It must be borne in mind that the wheat of Minnesota and the Northwest cannot escape these dealers who control the board of trade at Duluth and the chamber of commerce at Minneapolis. They own all the elevators along the different lines of railroad throughout this wheat region. They have all the facilities at the lake ports. It is impossible for any considerable amount of wheat to escape their handling. They necessarily have the sympathy, if not the co-operation of all the lines of transportation. It seems, from the testimony, that the dealers adopt, as the price to be paid for wheat each day, the closing price which they make on the preceding day. And how do they make the price? Do they fix the price in regard to the value of the wheat as calculated by the law of supply and demand, the freight rates and the facilities for export? If this were honestly done, the law of supply and demand, natural in its character, would necessarily govern the price paid for wheat. It matters not whether this price is fixed in open board or by secret committee. It is a price which they, the elevator men and dealers fix. It is the result of the combined interests of the dealers, the elevator and commission men. It makes no difference by what means it is ascertained, fixed or agreed upon. The testimony, as referred to hereinbefore, fully establishes the fact that every elevator man in the Northwest adopts the list price promulgated

BY THEIR COMMON AGENT,

Frank H. Irons at Minneapolis, and whether the elevators and dealers shall deny that Frank Irons fixes the price, and shall claim that such price is fixed by themselves, either in open board or by committee, or in whatsoever way they shall fix the same, and afterwards communicated to their general agent, Frank Irons. Why do they not fix the price in accordance with the law of supply and demand? In order to understand this question, it is necessary to refer to deductions and inferences which follow the testimony. It is the testimony of all persons examined on that subject that the price at Minneapolis is the price at Chicago less freight from Minneapolis to Chicago. This is the agreement of the dealers and elevator men. This is the combine.

That there is no power in the business circles, which, emanating through the boards of trade, the transportation lines or from whatever source engaged in the wheat traffic in Minnesota and the Northwest which confronts the despotism of this forced condition of the market, is the highest proof to my mind of the existence of that was ever known in the history of the world, and that this can exist only by virtue of an unnatural law is another proof of conspiracy; for, in the absence of a conspiracy, God's natural laws take their own course. No one who reads the testimony can fail to see that this condition is brought about by a conspiracy, surely reflected in the care which the elevator companies and all the dealers and even the lines of transportation have exercised to maintain the price list promulgated by Frank H. Irons.

Mr. Pillsbury's testimony on the relationship existing between the Minneapolis and Chicago markets is produced.

Some attention is here given to the disclosures of S. S. Scott in reference to the business of Frank H. Irons. Among other evidence corroborating the existence of the combine, he states, was the fact that the testimony of Mr. Amsden contains the statement that the elevator companies employ traveling agents to look after each other's business transactions. Another instance was the buying off of J. M. Stowe of Wadena.

IT IS UPON THIS TESTIMONY,

only a portion of which I have specially referred to, that I find myself forced to find from the testimony that a combine does exist to control the price of wheat in the State of Minnesota and the Northwest. It is true that the investigation into the history and autonomy, the detail, circumstances and economy of its working and maintenance has not been pursued to that extent which the impending danger and tyranny against the interests of the producer imperatively demanded.

The report enters into a thorough discussion of the matter of weighing wheat at Duluth, and its dockage and inspection, taking up the subject of the shipment of uninspected and bin-burnt wheat.

The report proceeds to aggregate the testimony in regard to these non-inspected shipments and finds a total of 825,540 bushels shipped out of Duluth elevators between 1886 and 889 uninspected.

After making allowance for bin-burnt wheat there remained 750,000 bushels.

THE QUESTION NOW NATURALLY ARISES

how was this 750,000 bushels of wheat accumulated? By what means did 750,000 bushels of wheat belonging to the producers of Minnesota and the Northwest come into the possession of the elevators of Duluth? That question cannot now be answered specifically under the testimony. Whether it came from short weights or whether it came from unswept cars, or whether it came from improper dockage or whether it came from not cleaning out dockage, or whether it came from abstractions made from grain being shipped Eastward, or whether it came from all of these causes or from causes entirely unknown and unsuggested the testimony does not now plainly and specifically disclose. It remains, therefore, as yet an unsolved proposition as to whether the inspection department and the weighing department of the State of Minnesota have not by short weights and large dockage permitted this vast accretion, or on the other hand whether this accretion and accumulation has not been made in violation of the inspection and weighing service by the predatory spirit of these elevator companies.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

From a consideration of the entire testimony, and taking the public elevator system in the condition that it now is, I am moved to recommend to your excellency and the legislature of the state that some means should be provided for weighing the grain by the railroad companies at the station where it is received, and the common carrier should be held responsible for delivery in equal weight.

In view of all the testimony, I further recommend what seems to me to be one of the most important measures for the proper protection of the wheat producers of this state, and that is that all persons in the State of Minnesota desiring to market wheat shall have equal facilities of railroads at Minnesota stations, and that a law be passed by which it is made the duty absolute of every railroad or railway corporation, association or company now or at any future time operating a railroad or railway as a common carrier within this state to provide and furnish at all stations established or that may be established on their roads sidetrack facilities for all persons or parties to erect and maintain private elevators or warehouses of a capacity of not less than 5,000 bushels each for the storage of grain while awaiting shipment on such line of railroad or railway, and to permit and allow such elevators and warehouses to be erected, maintained, controlled and operated by any person or corporation desiring to erect, maintain, control and operate the same for said persons, and further making it the duty absolute of said railroad companies and corporations to receive and carry over their line or lines of railway all grain offered for shipment to and from such private elevators and warehouses, and further making it the duty of said railroad companies and corporations to receive directly into its cars and carry over its line [illegible] or railway all grain offered in car load lots at such stations without any previous storage and as offered.

I desire also to coincide with the recommendation made to your excellency by the majority report in as far as such recommendations are made or modified by the recommendation which I herein make.

It seems to me and I further recommend that under the present system each inspector should be charged with the duty of seeing that the

and that all grain in cars or other vehicles carried to a public elevator shall be actually received into the scales and weighed.

It seems proper also to recommend that where cars are inspected on the track by the inspector and are liable to remain for any time whatever before they are unloaded they should be resealed by the inspector making such inspection.

I also recommend to your excellency and the legislature that whatever system of grading and inspection shall hereafter seem fit to be established by law such system of grading and inspection shall never be permitted to affect the sale of wheat on its merits in the country, and in no case to permit it to be graded at the country station by a state official.

Before concluding this report I feel it my duty to call your excellency's attention to the fact that the labors of this investigating committee have been confined, so far as the illicit shipment of non-inspected grain is concerned, to only the elevator system at Duluth. It certainly is a suspicious circumstance that these shipments of non-inspected grain at Duluth have occurred while the general market of the State of Minnesota was in the hands of a combine, as I have endeavored to show is exhibited by the testimony.

THE TESTIMONY FURTHER SHOWS that the wheat growers of Minnesota are discriminated against in the matters of freight rates. The distance from St. Cloud to Duluth is nearly forty miles less than from Minneapolis to Duluth, by way of the Great Northern and Eastern Minnesota, a corporation owned and controlled by the Great Northern, as admitted by Mr. Grover. The rate on wheat from Minneapolis to Duluth is 4½ cents, while from St. Cloud to Duluth, forty miles less, the rate is 7½ cents per bushel. This being a single instance of the general discrimination against the wheat growers of Minnesota and the Northwest and in favor of the milling combine of Minneapolis.

And I wish to give it as my opinion that if the board of railroad and warehouse commissioners had observed the law in relation to the posting of damaged grain at Duluth and had held the Duluth elevator companies to a strict observance of that law there probably would never have been any cause for the expenditure of $9,000, which has been made by this committee. It seems to me that the was opened by the permission to disregard the provisions of the law in regard to the posting of grain, a permission which, it seems to me, was not contemplated by the board of commissioners, but which the elevator companies have made the excuse for their clandestine and secret shipment of non-inspected wheat.

The testimony of Mr. Pillsbury before the joint committee is interesting in that it attempts to lay the entire blame of the depressed condition of the Minnesota wheat market at the door of the wheat pit gamblers on the board of trade in the city of Chicago. I am not disposed to agree with Mr. Pillsbury in this opinion and this opinion I form in view of the testimony taken before this committee. I believe that the present depressed condition of the market in Minnesota is due more which in my opinion exists between the elevator systems and the railroads of Minnesota and the Northwest than to the reflected influence of either the Chicago or New York markets.

What I mean by the erection of elevators at Duluth is simply the erection of elevators by the state, carried on in such manner that the interests of the individual producer of wheat in Minnesota and the Northwest shall be forever maintained as separate individual rights, and not massed into one general aggregate, to be thereby controlled by the financial circles and interests of this combine.

I do not mean that the state shall erect and maintain elevators at the expense of the state generally, but that it shall erect elevators upon such a system or plan of providing for the payment of such erection and maintenance as can be charged with the intervention of a sinking fund to the persons interested in the storage and marketing of grain. It is evident to me, and it seems to be admitted by the greatest financiers that have been brought before the committee, that something must be done, and I can conceive of no agency but the state itself adequate to protect now the producer of wheat in Minnesota and the Northwest from the influence of this combine. I have the honor to be, very respectfully E. J. Moore,
Member of the Joint Investigating Committee.

Topeka Capital: Nine-tenths of the intelligent voters of the west who were in favor of free coinage before the law of 1890 was tested by experiance have been convinced that free coinage would be disastrous. We have purchased 4,500,000 ounces a month for a year and a half and silver is lower to-day than it was before we began.

Two hundred thousand Italians came to the United States in 1891. The fact that less than 20 percent of them were women shows that many of these swarthy individuals propose to go back and enjoy their opulence in their native land as soon as they become bloated capitalists to the amount of $500 apiece —Ex.

General Manager Mohler, Chief Engineer Miller and Division Supt, Jenks, of the Great Northern were here on a special a short time yesterday. He seemed to be of the opinion that it would do nearly as well as on plowed land. It would be a good thing for our farmers to try this spring,

It is asserted to-day by Senators Washburn, Pettigrew and others that Secretary Blaine will accept and run if nominated. It is pretty well known, however, that Harrison intends to remain non-committal until the last moment, and then, if his nomination is doubtful, throw his strength, all of it, if possible, to Uncle Jerry Rusk, the soldier, farmer, congressman, temperance man, governor and executive officer, whom Harrison believes would run like a scared rabbit and distance all all others in the race.—Dispatch.

There are conventions of all kinds to hold their sessions and orators of all kinds to mount the stump. Hall and Fitzsimmons and Sullivan and Corbett will show their punching powers but in the midst of all the excitement the knight of the bat is conscious that he has a hold upon the American imagination which no circus political moral or pugilistic can effectively shake.—St. Paul Dispatch.

Ada Index. The Democrats continue to assert that there will be a fusion between the Democrats and Alliance in Minnesota while the Alliance leaders deny that they will forsake their principles for the sake of bettering their chances of receiving the spoils, One thing is certain if the Alliance forsake their principles and go in with a party they have always condemned it will be the worst case of eatin crow ever taken by any party and could never be swallowed by a majority of that organization who have been fighting the Democratic party for thirty years.

The Kansas City Star tells lots of truth when it says: It is a fashion of courts after a lynching to issue, with a great display of indignation, an edict to the grand jury, public prosecutor and sheriff, commanding them to bring the perpetrators to justice. There is no doubt but that lynchings are wrong and should be discouraged, but courts can hardly lay claim to the right to inaugurate a protest. Courts are directly responsible for the resort, to lynch law, which has become so frequent in recent years. Let courts reform themselves Let them cease the habit of giving murderers new trials and the advantage of senseless quibbles and technicalities.

The New York Recorder has discovered that Napoleon I. was a book canvasser, that George Washington followed the same illustrious business, selling over two hundred copies of "Bydell's American Savage;" that Longfellow sold books by subscription; that Daniel Webster handled De Tocqueville's "America;" that Gen. Grant canvassed for Irving's "Columbus;" that Blaine began life as a canvasser for a "Life of Henry Clay" and that Bismark when at Heidelberg, took orders for one of Blumenbach's hand books. The moral of this is: Don't kill the gentle but tenacious book agent. Content yourself with maiming him, He may be a world renown hero in embryo, though the probabilities are 11 to 3 that he is an intolerable nuisance in toto.

Marshall County Leader: The fact must be faced that the Red River Valley has sustained an enormous loss in its unthreshed grain. It cannot be escaped, Thousands of stacks stand with their bottoms in water and there are but few that do not hold snow and ice enough to damage grades terribly. It is a sorry thing to believe that fully one-half the unthreshed grain can never make flour but there is hardly a doubt of it and nothing can be gained by misrepresenting the situation. It is not a fault of the country, and it is not advertising a disadvantage to tell the world our crop was so large it could not all be threshed and was ruined in part by standing over winter. Tell the truth, thank God the country can and will raise such crops and pray the next one may be better saved.

Minneapolis Tribune: The document which resulted in the discovery of America was drawn up at Santa Fe, on the plain of Grenada, 400 years ago to-day. The pageant commemorating the conquest of Grenada, after a conflict of 800 years with the Moors, had just passed before Ferdinand and Isabella. It was there on the 17th of April, 1492, that the great adventurer and chart-maker—known to the Spaniards as Christoval Colon, to the Germans as Stoeffel Tauber, to the Italians as Christoforo Colombo, and to the English as Christopher Columbus—after eighteen years of vain scouring among the courts of Europe, secured the articles of agreement which made him high admiral and Governor-general over all the lands which he might discover, and entitled him to one-tenth of the net profits from the gold, silver, precious stones and merchandise that might be found or bought.

It seems to be the general opinion particularly of those who have lived here since the country was new that we are to have a bountiful crop again this year. The old settlers all say there has never been a light yield with a very wet spring. There is no disputing the fact that we have the latter condition now. But the acreage sown to wheat will be cut down heavily. With the best of weather from now on, the wheat acreage of the valley will not be over 70 per cent of last year's at the outside and quite likely not more than 50 or 60 per cent, L. D. Marshall, superintendent of the Red River Elevator line, estimates that 25 per cent of the ground was plowed last fall, that 15 will be plowed this spring and that 40 per cent more will be sown to grain without plowing. This makes his estimate of the acreage 80 per cent of last year. It is a foregone conclusion already that the crop cannot approach that of last year in the aggregate of bushels, but in the matter of profit to the producer it ought to exceed it by far.—Marshall County Leader.

Not to Be Envied.

The late Sir Thomas Chambers was not a wit, and laughter seldom entered the court over which he presided so solemnly. There is, however, one good story told of him in The Temple. It is to the effect that a prisoner who was undefended pleaded "Guilty," and counsel, having been instructed to defend him at the last moment, withdrew the plea and substituted that of "Not guilty," with the result that the jury acquitted him. In discharging the prisoner Sir Thomas is said to have remarked: "Prisoner, I do not envy your feelings. On your own confession you are a thief, and the jury has found that you are a liar."—Argonaut.

At this moment"—eleventh floor: 'thar's we go. Who do you want to find, sir?

"I wanted to get off at the sixth," said the fat passenger, "but that does not make any difference. Does the feller kill her?"

"I'll see," said the elevator booster, reversing the lever for the down trip. "At this moment the door burst open and a lithe, active form tore into the room. The girl gave a little scream of delight, and with a wild cry of 'Thank God, I'm saved!' she fell into the protecting arms of honest John Souther. Here's the sixth floor."

"Thank you!" said the fat man.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Saved.

"My daughter, I am ruined," sadly said the unsuccessful business man. "I do not know what we can depend upon hereafter for our support."

"Do not worry, father dear," was the loving daughter's fond reply. "I will save you, and by my sacrifice we shall live as happily as before."

"You, my daughter!" exclaimed the stricken man. "Why, what in the world can you do to raise ready money for me now?"

And the girl answered him proudly; "I will melt up my engagement rings."—Somerville Journal.

A Little Too English.

Chum—What! You are not engaged to Miss Hightone? Well, I declare! I thought surely that would be a match."

Young Tremolo—I backed out. She was too much a slave of fashion, too English, you know.

Chum—You amaze me.

Young Tremolo—Fact. She wanted me to go by myself and ask her father's consent.—New York Weekly.

A Doctor's Opinion.

First Friend—You have not been looking well lately. You should try dieting.

Second Friend—By Jove, old fellow, you ought to diet.

Third Friend—Say, old boy, your blood is out of order. Try plain food and a little of it for awhile.

Doctor (after a brief examination)—All you need is dieting. Five dollars, please.—Good News.

To the Influenza Germ.

By the shivering fits that chill us,
By the feverish heats that grill us,
By the pains acute which fill us,
By the aches which maul and mill us,
By the quacks who draft and pill us,
By the hydropaths who swill us,
By the allopaths who bill us,
By the nervous fears which kill us—
Tell us, tell us, wee Bacillus,
What, and why and whence you are!

Say, are you a germ atomic?
Have you uses economic?
Are you truly miasmatic?
Are you solid or lymphatic?
Frankly, is your cause zymotic?
Are you native or exotic?
When your business is transacted
Is your stay to be protracted?
And do you intend, Bacillus,
To return again and kill us?
Do make answer, if you please!

Tell us briefly, tiny mystery,
What's your source and what's your history;
Clear the clouds of obfuscation
That surround your incubation.
Furnish, without more obstruction,
Your belated introduction.
Let us know your why and wherefore,
What it is you're in the air for.
And meanwhile, O wee Bacillus,
Since with morbid dread you fill us,
Prithee, take your leave at once.

Declining Population of France.

At the last meeting of the Paris Academie de Medicine the question of the depopulation of France was discussed "from beyond the tomb" in a posthumous report of the late M. Fereol, the learned secretary for the year, whose death the academy had recently to deplore. In the year recently closed M. Fereol states there was a deficit of 80,000 births, when compared with deaths. Whatever explanations may be offered of the striking falling off in the natality of the French race, there can be no doubt as to the fact. From 1861 to 1880 the proportion of births to population was 25 per 1,000 in France, while Prussia reached 38 and Italy 37.

Dr. Leon Lefort two years ago calculated that Prussia doubled its population in fifty-four years and Saxony in forty-five, while France would take, at her then rate, 354 years. Since then the birth rate instead of rising has fallen still lower. If the latest figures are to be taken as normal, "it is no longer," observes Dr. Fereol, "a matter of reckoning how long it will take France to double her population, but rather how soon she will lose one-half of her present number."

The "Ancient Regime" of France was the period of the eldest son; the present age is the period of the only child. Like all Frenchmen, Dr. Fereol foresees war between the Gaul and the Teuton, and he is disquieted by the prospects of a struggle between a race increasing and multiplying with steady and rapid growth and a nation which, with all its fine qualities, is beginning almost to decrease. The appeal to the young, however, in the name of patriotism, to marry and have large families gives the subject a humorous aspect.—London Tablet.

Cardinal Manning.

I trouble myself little about dogma, and I judge men rather by their lives than by what they believe or disbelieve in regard to matters respecting which mankind has differed for ages and is never likely to agree. And this is why I so greatly admired Cardinal Manning. If he was a prince of the church to which he belonged, he was a soldier, and did soldier's work in the army that regards all men as brothers, ever ready to battle for all that would alleviate human suffering or make men better.

Never did I see any one who looked more the ideal cardinal. Only a week or two before his death he sent a message to me to come and see him, as he said that we were neighbors, and that he could not leave his house. I was unable to do this, as I was myself unwell, but I had on previous occasions enjoyed the privilege of sitting with him. The house in which he lived was a large one, and to my thinking a most unlivable one. But he affected no state or ceremony. The caller sent up his name, and if the cardinal was disengaged he was received in a large room, with a little table by the fire, near which he sat arrayed in a cassock and with a scarlet cap on his head. He was dignified and yet genial, talking on every subject, and talking well on it.—London Truth.

"Vagabond Parties" in Washington.

The latest fad in the social circles of Washington is what are termed "vagabond parties." The new amusement consists of the simulation of poverty, the guests vieing with each other as to dress and manner, even to the smallest details. All sorts of startling realistic personifications of the dejected and forlorn are presented, but most of the types are drawn from the lower stages of American life of today, the tramp being a favorite character. At a party of this kind last week a new feature was introduced. When most of the guests had assembled there drove up to the house, with great noise and clatter, what looked like a police patrol wagon.

Several policemen jumped out, drew their clubs, ran up the steps, rang the bell, rushed into the house past the astonished and terrified domestic who opened the door, and proceeded to arrest everybody in the parlors. There was general consternation until it was discovered that the policemen were guests in disguise, who had taken that way of adding "realism" to the occasion.—Washington Letter.

A 335-Mile Aqueduct.

Nearly every year some new scheme is brought out for securing to Paris a pure and unfailing water supply. In 1890 it was proposed to take the water from the Lake of Neuchatel, and now M. Duvillard, engineer at Creuzot, again speaks in favor of the already much ventilated plan of utilizing the water of the Lake of Geneva for that purpose. It is an acknowledged fact that the water of this latter lake is very pure, and that its temperature at a depth of about ninety feet rests stationary at nearly 46 degs. Fahrenheit, while at Paris the mean temperature of the water is about 54 degs.

The water, according to the plan of M. Duvillard, would be taken at Thonon, carried from there through tunnels and steel pipes to Culoz, thence to Macon, to Charolles, and alongside the hills of Morvan to Clamecy. From this place it could be conducted to Paris in one straight line. The total length of the conduit would be 335 miles.—Industries.

Will Keep Heat for Twenty Hours.

A useful, seasonable invention called a foot warmer is being introduced. The special feature of this invention consists in its being so constructed that it will retain the heat for many hours. The warmer is double cased and packed with a special nonconducting material, only a small quantity being used on the top, allowing the heat to escape where required. This arrangement insures a comfortable heat from first to last, thereby presenting a great advantage over other warmers, which are frequently too hot at first and soon get cold. It is claimed that the small foot warmer will keep at a comfortable heat for at least six hours when exposed to the atmosphere; if used in a bed or otherwise protected, for about twenty hours.—New York Telegram.

Drawing Money for Christmas.

It is stated that two days before Christmas day, 1891, no fewer than 28,000 notices of withdrawal reached the Post-office Savings bank. On several occasions 25,000 notices of withdrawal have been received, but 28,000 is the highest number received in one day since the establishment of the department.—London Tit-Bits.

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER IX—CONTINUED.

When night came, he said to me, after we had separated from the rest,—

"This is no time for sleep, Thorne; we must watch through the night, whether you like it or not, if it is only for Miss Lascelles' sake."

I readily agreed to this, and for an hour we walked on a part of the lawn front which I could see Edith's window. Then the rain, which had been drizzling for some time, fell heavily, and forced us to go in.

We changed our boots for slippers, and together in my room, I with a book, he with his chin in his hands, his face hideous with the light of the lamp on his protruding eyes.

Heaven knows, I was not wanting in love for Edith, or solicitude for her welfare, and yet I could not keep awake. It must be remembered that I had had no sleep the preceding night, and that I did believe in Edith's hallucination, and therefore saw no actual danger menacing her. I tried to interest myself in the book, but my thoughts grew confused, the type swam before my eyes, and helped to bemuse my senses. At length I put down the book, and, shaking my wits together, I said to Van Hoeck,—

"Let us talk."

"Talk!" he muttered scornfully; "why not ask me to sing you a comic song? If the Kid were here I suppose you wouldn't want me to amuse you. You could keep awake until three or four in the morning watching her; but, as it is only your future wife who is concerned, you are logheaded before midnight."

This sarcasm did not prevent me dozing again a few minutes later. I was ashamed of my drowsiness, and after a minute's doze I would wake with a guilty start, only to drop off again in a few moments. I know not how long this had been going on, when Van Hoeck shook me by the arm, and woke me thoroughly.

"It is courting destruction to sit here with the door open, he said, "one of us blind, and the other dead asleep. I can not stand it any longer; it is intolerable. Tell me if it rains."

I went to the window, and found that the rain had ceased. I told him this.

"I will go out; take me down to the door," he said.

I led him down-stairs, and gave him his umbrella and hat. Then I took mine, and opened the door quietly, fearing to awake Edith. I would have accompanied him, but he refused, saying night and day were alike to him, and he knew his way along the paths and about the lawn.

"Go back to your room, and fasten yourself in," he said; "it is our only security. Tap at the window to let me know that all is fast. I beg you to do this," he added earnestly; "you can not understand the feelings of a man in my position,—the torture of conscious impotency as you feel the approaching fate that you are powerless to avert."

His voice rattled in his throat, and indistinctly I heard him mutter, as he groped his way along the wall of the terrace,—

"Cramped in a coffin, and the clods falling, falling—"

I closed the door, and returned to my room with a shudder.

When I had fastened myself in, I tapped at the window, and Van Hoeck replied by tapping on the wall below.

The fresh air had revived me; I had no longer to struggle with an irresistible drowsiness,—the inclination to sleep was gone.

I had my book to finish, but my mind was not sufficiently composed to read. As I walked about the room, I thought of Edith and of Van Hoeck, wondering if there could be any connection between her strange hallucination and the terrible presentiment which night and day possessed him. It seemed as if there must be something abnormal in the conditions under which we lived, to produce an effect which, though characterized by different peculiarities, was in both cases attributable only to a disordered imagination; and I wondered if I, in my turn, should come under this occult influence.

I might have been occupied with the speculation for half-an-hour or more, when I heard a scream of terror that I could not doubt came from the wing in which Edith lay. In an instant I opened the door and ran through the corridor. The doors in the picture gallery were open. As I drew aside the curtains which closed in the staircase corridor of the left wing, I saw Sir Edmund come from his room with a lamp. The door of Edith's room exactly faced his; it was wide open; all was dark within.

"What is it, my dear, what is it?" he called as he entered the room.

There was no answer.

I followed to the door. Sir Edmund was standing by the empty bed looking around him in blank dismay.

"She is gone," he gasped "The door was wide open—"

The bed stood away from the wall. I bade Sir Edmund look on the further side.

There was scarcely room for him to pass between the foot of the bed and the wall; but, as he lowered the light, he said, in quick alarm,—

"She is here—unconscious,—ring the bell for the women."

I ran to the bell and rang it violently; then from the stairs cross the gallery I called to the servants to come down. In the meanwhile Sir Edmund had raised Edith, and placed her on the bed, where she lay like one dead.

From his room I got a spirit case; but we knew not how to apply the remedies at our hand, and it was an intense relief to us when the housekeeper bustled in, followed by Edith's maid, for we were as helpless as children in this emergency.

The housekeeper told me to leave the room. I went to the door, and stood there trembling from head to foot.

I had taken Edith's hand, and the icy coldness of the lifeless fingers that I had only known quick with warm blood, chilled my very heart with fear.

There was a long period of terrible suspense, and then I heard the dear voice murmur, and my heart bounded with joy, I ventured forward that I might see the life once more in her beautiful face. Sir Edmund stopped me on the threshold.

"Thank God!" he said fervently, "she has come back to us; but the women said she must be kept quiet. Go back to your room, my dear fellow, and we will talk it over at breakfast time. Good-night, good night."

I returned reluctantly to my room. As I passed his chamber, I heard the Judge snoring loud and long.

It needed something more than such trifles to wake him when he had a bed to sleep in.

What already puzzled me was how Edith's door came to be wide open, when she had fainted in a quite remote part of the room.

CHAPTER IX.

What happened in Edith's room that night I did not learn until the next morning; but I will give her account in this place, in order to preserve the sequence of events.

True to her resolve, she had left the window open and the blind down, exactly as on the preceding nights. It was her habit to lock the door, and that she did not omit to do so on this occasion, she was convinced by the fact that she had found some difficulty in turning the key, and had afterward tried the handle, to know if the bolt was shot. She left the lamp burning on the table screened from her by the lace curtains of the bed. It was half-past eleven when she lay down, and she felt so little fear that she fell asleep almost immediately.

A pillow slipping from beneath her head awoke her, she believed. Her first consciousness was that her head felt uncomfortably low. She put her hand out to find if she had slipped to the edge of the bed; but no, her position was unchanged.

Then it struck her that she had left a light on the table; it was now out, and all was dark.

She wondered if this was a trick of imagination. Was she awake or asleep? She touched her eyes to be sure they were open. Then it occurred to her that she might have been asleep for a long while. There was nothing extraordinary in a lamp going out, or her head slipping from the pillow. Saying this to herself, she felt for the pillows.

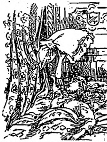
To her astonishment, she found that both were gone.

It was droll. She felt inclined to laugh, thinking how she must have tossed about in her sleep to knock both pillows out. But the bedclothes were perfectly smooth, the bed on each side of her even and soft and yielding. That was strange!

"I must have done all the tossing with my head," she said to herself, still tickled by the oddity of the thing.

One thing was certain,—she could not sleep in comfort with nothing but a bolster under her head.

She leaned out, and felt upon the floor as far as she could reach to the right. The pillows had not slipped out on that side. Then, putting her shoulder against the wall, she felt down on the left. There was nothing there. What did it all mean? Decidedly this must be a new freak of her imagination.



She was not yet thoroughly frightened. The spirit who could steal her pillows must have some sense of humor; it was preferable to drumming on the window-panes, and glaring through the blind at her. Hearing and sight had been tried, and now her sense of touch was to be tested.

But though she tried to make light of the affair, she felt that something terrible underlay its comic aspect, and a little shiver ran through her at the thought of getting up and striking a light. It was so much easier to be courageous in the daylight than in such darkness as this.

After all, perhaps the pillows had slid out of bed in a natural way, and lay just a little beyond her reach. But rather than stretch her arm out again in the dark, she preferred to put up with the bolster doubled.

She doubled the bolster, and gave it a pat; then she put up a lock of hair that had come down, and told herself not to be stupid about a little thing like that; and, wondering whether she should dare tell of this incident in the morning, she dropped on her elbow, and lay down her head,—down, down, down, till it touched the bed.

"What was this?" she asked herself, starting up in a fright. She felt from side to side; now the bolster was gone; there was nothing there but the bed.

But this pantomime trick was no longer comic. She felt the tears of fright springing to her eyes, and something rising in her throat. Cold fear chilled her to the bone.

Was she in reality awake?" The striking of the clock in the belfry assured her of that.

Ding-dong, ding-dong, ding-dong, ding-dong it lightly chimed; and then the hour was tolled out slowly, sonorously solemn:

Boom, boom, boom, boom:

But, if this was not hallucination, what was it? The work of actual hands? What then? If they had no more direful intention than to play a trick of this kind, they were not to be feared. It was not terrific; it was merely childish mischief, and this reflection suggested that, after all, it might only be Lola who was trying to frighten her. And just for one moment, as she leaned back on her elbow, she fancied she saw something like those luminous eyes in the midst of the darkness, and close to her,—there! there, above her, toward the side of the bed.

"Is it you, Lola?" she asked, but in a voice so faint, for she was sick with fright, that she herself could hardly hear the words she spoke.

It was a fancy, or the eyes were turned away. Yet, still leaning upon her elbow, that quivered under her, she strained her eyes to penetrate the darkness.

Not long, perhaps, though it seemed so, her heart beating painfully, her mouth parched and dry, the hot breath catching the back of her throat.

Something seemed to be touching her hair. Was it the lace curtain?

She raised her trembling hand, and felt something level with the top of her head. But it was not the lace curtain. It was the pillow, or she was mad.

Her strength gave way, and she fell back upon the bed; but the terrible suspicion that the pillows had been withdrawn for the purpose of smothering her made her throw her hand up.

The pillow had descended; it was close to her face. She tried to scream, but the pillow was already upon her mouth, and smothered the cry.

It closed down upon her head, firm and hard. She could no longer breathe. It pressed upon her throat, as she lay with the back of her head pushed down into the bed.

The touch of Death aroused the instinct of self-preservation within her, and, with a frantic effort, she tore herself from under that suffocating pressure, flung herself from the bed, and, as respiration returned, cried with all her force for help.

CHAPTER X.

Ignorant of what had occurred in Edith's room before her cry for help, I paced my room, thinking how terrible the fright must have been that made her faint a second time, and despite her belief in the unreality of these mysterious appearances.

"Your turn will come," Van Hoeck had said to me, and, these words coming back to my mind, I asked myself if the repeated attacks upon Edith might not be part of a complicated scheme to obtain the diamond.

Such a plot was the more possible because it seemed impossible. An act of legerdermain succeeds or not, according to the skill with which the conjurer fixes our attention on a false, train of operations while he works out the actual feat. As I made these reflections, I took the Great Hesper from the pouch on my waist strap, and buckled it in its case upon my left wrist; then I doubly locked the door, saw that there was oil in the lamp, put a box of wax matches beside it on the table, and finally opened the long-bladed knife Van Hoeck had given me, and stuck it between the mattress and the side of the bedstead.

The room was thickly carpeted and oak-paneled. The furniture—with the exception of the toilet arrangements, and a low saddle-back chair—was antique, and of oak. The bedstead was particularly wide, with four carved pillars carrying a baldaquin, and heavy curtains of some thick brocaded stuff, looped at the foot, but hanging loose at the head: it faced the oriel.

TO BE CONTINUED.

ECCENTRIC WHISTLER.

Some Odd Points About the Erratic English Painter.

No man is a hero to his valet-de-chambre, and even the unique and irrepressible Whistler is evidently not a demigod in the eyes of his own relations, says the Collector. "I stayed with my cousin, James Whistler, the artist, when I was in London last summer," says a San Francisco lady, "and I must say that he is a most curious individual. He is a thorough Bohemian and does the oddest and queerest things imaginable.

He comes down to breakfast in knee-breeches, silk stockings and shoes with large buckles and the funniest sorts of coats. He is decidedly eccentric. His house at Chelsea is called "the White House," and is painted in the most abominable colors. It is really an eyesore, but Cousin James thinks it is very artistic. You would never imagine that he was an American. He and all his brothers are thorough Johnnie Bulls. He was born in Baltimore, and the Whistlers that are in the army are our relatives. One brother in London is quite a famous doctor, but is totally dissimilar in taste and habits to Cousin James."

The Right Kind of a Girl.

Let a girl be ever so graceful in the dance, let her be ever so elegant of walk across a drawing-room, ever so bright in conversation, she must possess some other qualities to convince the great average run of young men that she can be the manager of his home, the pilot that steers his ship of state, writes Edward W. Bok in the April Ladies' Home Journal. Frugality, womanly instincts of love for home, an eye to the best interests of her husband and the careful training of her children—these are the traits which make the good wife of to-day, and which young men look for in the girls they meet. Men may sometimes give the impression that they do not care for common sense in their sweethearts, but there is nothing they so unfailingly demand of their wives.

A Woman's Wonderful Hair.

It is said that Mercedes Lopez' a Mexican woman who lives on the Rio Grande, is perhaps the longest haired woman in the world. She is some five feet in height, and when she stands erect her hair trails on the ground four feet and eight inches. Her hair is so thick that she can draw it around her so as to completely hide herself. Her present suit of hair is only five years old. It grows so heavy as to cause her headaches and she is compelled to cut it frequently, and she sells large tresses to hair dealers every month. She is an ignorant woman, the wife of a sheep-herder and is of Castilian blood.

Averting Trouble.

Maid breathlessly—"Oh, miss both the gents you is engaged to has called, and they'r in the parlor, and somehow or other they've found it out, and, oh, miss, I'm 'fraid there'll be trouble."

Miss Flintie—"Horrors! Oh, dear! What shall I do?"

Maid after reflection—"I'll fix it. I'll run an' tell 'em you're cryin'y'r eyes out 'cause y'r father has lost all his money."—New York Weekly.

Selfish Parents.

Small Boy—"Mamma, when will there be another war?"

"Mamma—"Never, I hope."

Small Boy—"Huh! You and papa saw a great big war when you was young, an' now you don't care whether us childrens has any fun or not."—Street & Smith's Good News.

Appreciation.

The Rev. Doctor Cuyler was seventy years old a few days ago, and received gratifying tokens of regard from many friends. The drawing-room and study were fragrant with roses and flowers, and were a bower of beauty, says the Brooklyn Eagle.

It occurred to some one to bring a faithful servant who had been knitted by interests, association and affection with the life of the household through years of tender and trusting service, up to the drawing-room to see the evidences of the loving remembrance in which the good man was held.

She examined the gifts with great interest, and expressed her delight in these glowing words to Mrs. Cuyler: I tell you, ma'am, the doctor couldn't have had more flowers sent him if he was dead!"

Fatal Constancy of a Buck.

Lyman Pusshee, of Dennysville, had a unique experience in hunting recently. He was lying in wait for a deer when, almost without warning, three fine animals came into an opening a short distance from the place of his concealment; they were two does and a buck. Opening fire, one of the does fell, and the others ran away. Pusshee, still remaining in hiding, was soon rewarded by the return of the buck to his dead mate. A shot followed by others, failed to bring the noble fellow down, and again and again did he return, until eleven shots had been fired at him, when he fell a victim to constancy.—Bango Commercial.

Spinning Bog Yarn.

Yet another substance which is being utilized is bog peat from Ireland. When the news was first bruited abroad, people laughed at the idea, and gave the reporter credit for being an uncommonly bold liar. Now the matter is placed beyond question. I have seen it; and it is an open secret now that at Dewsbury they are actually producing shoddy goods, of which the weft is composed of yarn spun from fibers obtained in the Irish bogs. The yarn is very coarse, and will not bear much tension; But the great fact that required to be grasped is that the stuff can be used at all.—Textile Record.

Mr. Wm. A. Lehr
of Kendallville, Ind., says Hood's Sarsaparilla is

King of Medicines

And His Cure Was

Almost a Miracle

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

"Gentlemen: When I was 14 years of age I was confined to my bed for several months by an attack of rheumatism, and when I had partially recovered I did not have the use of my legs, so that I had to go on crutches. About a year later, Scrofula, in the form of appeared on various parts of my body, and for eleven years I was an invalid, being confined to my bed six years. In that time ten or eleven of these sores appeared and broke, causing me great pain and suffering. Several times pieces of bone worked out of the sores. Physicians did not help me and

I Became Discouraged

"I went to Chicago to visit a sister, as it was thought a change of air and scene might do me good. But I was confined to my bed most of the time. I was so impressed with the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla in cases similar to mine that I decided to try it. So a bottle was bought, and to my great gratification the sores soon decreased, and I began to feel better. This strengthened my faith in the medicine, and in a short time I was

Up and Out of Doors

To make a long story short, I continued to take Hood's Sarsaparilla for a year, when I had become so fully released from the chains of disease that I took a position with the Flint & Walling Mfg. Co., and since that time have not lost a single day on account of sickness. I always feel well, am in good spirits, and have a good appetite. I endorse for it has been a great blessing to me, and to my friends my recovery seems almost miraculous. I think Hood's Sarsaparilla is the king of all medicines." WILLIAM A. LEHR, No. 9 North Railroad st., Kendallville, Ind.

Hood's Pills cure Biliousness.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer who will send me their Express and P. O. address. T. A. Royal Superstitions.

"The Little Red Man of the Tuileries" was to the house of Bourbon what the "White Lady of Berlin" is to the House of Hohenzollern, a foreboder of any great disaster. According to the accepted legend, after the Tuileries was built by Catherine de Medical, she had no sooner taken up her abode in the new palace than she hastily left it, never to return, declaring that the spectre of a little red man had appeared to her, fortelling her death. She did in fact die not long afterward, and the spectre was next seen on the night of May 14, 1610, a few hours before the assasination of Henry IV. by the fanatic Ravallac.

It appeared to Louis XVI. when the latter was a child, and foretold the civil wars of the Fronde, and was seen in the King's bedroom after Louis XVI. had left the palace for Varrennes, where he was apprehended and whence he was brought back, and it was again seen in the palace just before the King's execution. According to tradition, the specter appeared repeatedly during the Winter before Napoleon's Russian campaign, and was seen also before Leipsic and again before Waterloo.

After the Restoration the little man appeared to foretell the assassination of the Duke de Berri, and walked into the death room of Louis XVIII. a few hours before the King breathed his last. Rumor says that he was seen just before Sedan, and repeatedly during the siege and the war of the Commune, making his last appearance on the night the Tuileries was burned to the ground by the Paris mob.—From the Globe-Democrat.

An Ideal Juryman.

A great many stories are attributed to General Tom Bennett; but this is a true one and illustrates his ready wit. He was on the bench as Mayor of the city of Richmond in the trial of a liquor case. The witnesses could not remember anything, the place, the man who sold the liquor, or the kind of liquor. It was evidently a case of collusion, and Mayor Bennett became a little impatient. He finally took a witness from the state attorney and questioned him himself.

"Where was the liquor bought?" he asked,

"Couldn't say, yer Honor," was the reply.

"What kind of liquor was it?"

"Don't know, yer Honor."

"Do you know whether it was liquor or not?" The question was put a little tartly.

"Couldn't say, yer Honor, my mind is a perfect blank."

"Stand aside then," said General Bennett; "we may want you for a juror."

The defendant was dismissed by the disgusted Court.

Not Alone.

Very stout persons may sometimes be noticed glancing at other stout persons with a pleased expression that seems to say, "Well I am not as stout as that, any way;" or, "There is some one who is quite as stout as I am." Evidently it is quite a consoling thought.

The French Marshal Vivonne once indicated this feeling in a witty reply to the king. Vivonne and the Comte d'Auvergne were probably the most corpulent gentlemen in the court at the time.

"Marshal, you are really getting to fat," said the king. "You ought to take more exercise."

"Your majesty does not know, then, that I take a great deal of exercise?"

"No, what do you do?"

"I walk around the Comte d'Auvergne three times every day."

No wonder the minutes fly so fast—they are making up time.

Time gallops under the spur of the moment.

With Ely's Cream Balm a child can be treated without pain and with perfect safety. Try the remedy, it cures Catarrh.

My son has been afflicted with nasal catarrh since quite young. I was induced to try Ely's Cream Balm, and before he had used one bottle that disagreeable catarrhal smell had all left him. He appears as well as any one. It is the best catarrh remedy in the market.—J. C. Olmstead, Arcola, Ill.

One of my children had a very bad discharge from her nose. Two physicians prescribed, without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and, much to our surprise, there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning N. Y.

One of the Richest Mines

Ever discovered is the mine of health that is found in a bottle of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Its "output" is unprecedented. Richly does it "pan out" in the paying ores of vitality and regularity of organic action. The debilitated should work this mine for "all it is worth." So also should the constipated, the bilious, the dyspeptic, the rheumatic, and persons troubled with inactivity of kidneys or bladder, and la grippe.

THE TRIUMPH OF LOVE

"The Triumph of Love is Happy and Fruitful Marriage."

A TREATISE FOR MEN ONLY ON

PHYSICAL DEBILITY AND ATROPHY

A BOOK FOR MEN, MARRIED AND SINGLE.

A full explanation of a wonderful method for the quick restoration of PERFECT MANHOOD, in all that the term implies.

A method that overcomes EVERY EVIL CONDITION of the male system, giving to the weakest organs and parts their UTMOST NATURAL VIGOR and TONE, and to those shrunken and stunted their FULL and PROPER SIZE.

IT EXPLAINS how to build up all sexual vigor.

IT EXPLAINS how to build up all bodily vigor.

IT EXPLAINS how to preserve all mental vigor.

IT EXPLAINS how to avoid all the physical evils of married life.

IT EXPLAINS how to cure most bladder, kidney and urinary diseases.

IT EXPLAINS how to cure bodily failing, in any stage, for all time.

IT EXPLAINS how to cure unnatural losses from dreams, in urine, &c.

IT EXPLAINS how to cure mind-wandering, forgetfulness, confusion of ideas.

IT EXPLAINS how to cure nervousness, trepidation, lack of self confidence.

IT EXPLAINS how to cure varicocele (swollen, tender, sagging veins and parts).

IT EXPLAINS how to give tone, to remove excitability, to overcome sensitiveness, to remove physical and mental irritability.

IT EXPLAINS how the entire sexual system of the male may be brought to that condition so essential to general good health and peace of mind.

IT EXPLAINS how to be self-controlling, self-respecting, to be free from degrading thoughts, superior to debasing inclinations, to feel "A VERY KING AMONG MEN."

IT EXPLAINS how to develop, strengthen, enlarge all weak, stunted, undeveloped, feeble organs and parts of the body which have lost or never attained a proper and natural size, whether due to early errors, ill-health or natural causes. (A simple, infallible MECHANICAL method, endorsed by physicians.)

To many, this book is uninteresting and valueless, being a PURELY MEDICAL TREATISE; to others, to those whose welfare is at stake, IT IS ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT PUBLICATIONS EVER ISSUED FROM THE PRESS.

☞ To simple curiosity seekers it is not worth the trouble of writing for and we will not send it to such if we know it. But we will cheerfully mail ONE COPY SEALED IN PLAIN ENVELOPE, POSTAGE PAID AND ENTIRELY FREE OF ANY CHARGE, to the man who writes for it in good faith, either for his own use or for some friend.

☞ Beware of petty quacks and all their schemes; don't even answer a medical advertisement (or you may be sorry) till you have studied this remarkable book. THE NEWS SUMMARY

The Latest News of the World Condensed and Arranged in Convenient Form.

Washington, Personal, Foreign, Criminal, Casualty and Other Important News.

THE CAPITAL.

The senate promptly ratifies the treaty renewing the Bering sea modus vivendi.

John R. Tanner is made assistant United States treasurer at Chicago.

Secretary Blaine and the British minister fix up a modus vivendi evidently just to both parties.

A. W. Barrett, of Los Angeles, was selected as the successor of Maj. Bonebroke, of the California board of managers of national soldiers' homes.

A resolution was adopted by the house authorizing the civil service commission to investigate the alleged violation of the civil service law by certain officials in Baltimore.

Mr. Young, whom the senate legislated out of office, writes to Vice-President Morton asking a chance to clear himself of the charges against him. The senate tables the letter.

PERSONAL.

Frederick Martin von Bodenstedt, the German poet, is dead.

Truman A. Merriman, ex-member of congress from New York city and a well known newspaper man, died suddenly.

Ex-Senator William J. Sewell of New Jersey is quite ill at Camden with congestion of the lungs, contracted during his recent trip to Chicago.

At the age of 95, ex-Gov. Nathaniel S. Berry of New Hampshire is said to be the oldest living ex-Governor—a regular elder Berry, so to speak.

Fanny Crosby, who is 65 years old, pleads guilty to having written 3,000 hymns, and has not even yet reformed far enough to take a verseless rest.

Baron Fava's only fear about his return to this country is that somebody will be brutal enough to send him copies of his portraits as they were served up in the papers.

Roswell Smith, president of the Century Publishing company, died in New York. He had been ill for three years of Bright's disease, and during that time had three paralytic strokes.

Samuel Jackson the most famous pyrotechnist of the country, and the inventor of the present form of railroad danger signals, died of heart failure at his home in Philadelphia. He was seventy years old.

Rev Henry Allon, D. D., the well-known Congregational minister died in London. For twenty-two years he was editor of the British Quarterly Review. He was twice elected chairman of the Congregational union.

Capt. Aird, the retired commodore of the Allan line of steamships, after having crossed the Atlantic in safety more than five hundred times, was drowned while crossing a swelling stream near Cowansville, Que.

CASUALTIES.

Further severe earthquake shocks are felt in various towns in California.

Twelve men lose their lives in a Pennsylvania mine accident.

Seven men are blown to atoms by an explosion in powder works in New Jersey.

Several towns in California are badly damaged by earthquake and a number of people injured.

Fire in a tenement house in St. Petersburg caused the loss of nine lives. Fifteen others are missing, and it is thought that their bodies are beneath the debris.

Julia Brussi, of West Bay City, while in a skiff in tow of the steamer Atlantis on Clinton river, became frightened, fell overboard and was drowned. Her husband, who was with her, jumped in to her rescue, but she was dead when pulled out.

Extensive forest fires have been raging in the vicinity of North Windham, four miles from Willimantic, Conn. The damage to the farmers will be very heavy, as hundreds of acres of mowing and woodland have been burned over.

The fire waste in Massachusetts in 1891 amounted to $6,581,479, upon which there was $5,177,916 insurance. The loss is against an average loss of $5,160,000 for fourteen years, and the average number of fires increased eight hundred.

THE WICKED WORLD.

Soldiers shoot and kill eight sooners on the newly opened Cheyenne reservation.

Four negroes suspected of murder are lynched in Florida.

Interesting disclosures are made at the trial of Lieut. Hetherington in Yokohama.

A negro doctor near Quincy, Ill., kills a man for refusing to pay him for treating his mother for cancer, having failed to cure her.

A woman in Tennessee burns her husband and child to death, and a few moments later she and her paramour are gored to death.

George Frahn, a German farmer, at Dunning, near Chicago, shot his wife and then committed suicide. Frahn was killed instantly, but the woman will probably recover.

Two reports are made by the New York legislative committee which investigated the charges against Judge Maynard. One condemns and the other whitewashes.

At Niles, Ohio, Samuel Williams crushed the skull of his twenty-year-old daughter with a flat-iron and cut his own throat. The girl will recover.

Two men drove up to the residence of Mrs. Cowan, a widow in Neshannock township, Pa., and forcibly carried off Ethel Young, the ten-year-old daughter of William Foster, a wealthy farmer. Since the second marriage of her father, Ethel has made her home with Mrs. Cowan. The men are unknown.

At Kansas City Lizzie Dennis, who kidnaped Banker Beale's 3-year old child last winter and held him until a reward of $5,000 was paid for his return, pleaded guilty in the criminal court. She will turn state's evidence when her accomplices are brought to trial.

FOREIGN.

The formation of a new Italian cabinet has been completed. Its programme includes retrenchment in the army budget.

The condition of Grand Duke George, second son of the czar of Russia, who has been ill for some time past, has become worse.

The mikado has appointed a committee of seven members, including five leading noblemen, to report a draft of a revision of the treaties between Japan and the Western powers.

It is reported that a national loan of 200,000,000 lire has been authorized by the Italian government to cover the estimated deficits of 1888-1891, 1891-1893 and 1894. A part of this is to be issued soon to cover the deficit of 1891-1892.

In a fight between Mexicans, thought to be a remnant of Garza's band, and United States officers near Rio Grand City, Sheriff W. V. Shelly of Starr county and Deputy Sheriff Carolino were slightly wounded and two bandits were killed.

The Red-line steamer Philadelphia arrived from La Guayra, which place she left April 8, and brought information of a battle between the government forces and revolutionists at Trujillo, Venezuela, March 29, in which it was reported 150 were killed and a large number wounded.

POLITICAL ECHOES.

Alger, it is believed, will soon announce his withdrawal as a presidental candidate.

Louisiana is carried by the anti-lottery Democrats, Foster being elected governor by 10,000 plurality.

The Massachusetts and Pennsylvania Republicans hold their state convention and pronounce for Harrison.

The Indiana Democrats resolve to support Cleveland, with Gray as second choice.

The People's party conventions in Alabama are adopting the following as a plank in their platform. We demand that the government pay the former owners of the slaves liberated by the United States as the result of the civil war."

Col. W. W. Dudley intimates that he will not work for Harrison's re-election in case the president is renominated. Indianians believe that his opposition to Harrison is feigned.

THE RAILROADS.

Notice has been given by the Kansas City, that commencing June 1, all stop-over privileges will be discontinued.

The Canadian Pacific earnings for the week ending April 14 are $394,000, against $371,000 for the same period last year, an increase of $23,000.

R. S. Hayes, president of the St. Paul & Duluth road, it is expected, will succeed Sidney Dillon as president of the Union Pacific.

The interstate commerce commission disposes of Raworth's case against the Northern and Union Pacific; deciding that greater rates on sugar from San Francisco to Fargo than to St. Paul are not justified.

In answer to current rumors, the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company authorizes the publication of the following: There is no truth in the story that the Reading has posted a notice reducing wages, nor that any such policy is under consideration.

THE TOILERS.

The Massachusetts house has passed the bill fixing ten hours as a day's work for railroad employes.

Delegations representing the different seamen's organizations convened in Chicago recently to organize all American sailors into one society. All the unions of the gulf, Atlantic, Pacific and great lake ports are represented.

It is stated that, within a short period there will be inaugurated a fight which means the "survival of the fittest" in so far as the American Federation of Labor and the Knights of Labor are concerned. The trouble is over the boycotting of Rochester (N. Y.) clothing manufacturers by the Knights.

The strike of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Works, which was inaugurated at Lebanon, Pa., on the 18th of last July and continued ever since, has been declared off, and the men are now at liberty to resume work wherever they may get it. The benefits of the single men were cut off by the national association, last week, which led to this action on the part of three lodges in this city.

SPORTING MATTERS.

Fred Lake is having a good many errors in his work for Milwaukee.

Fred Johnston, the English bantamweight, has never lost a match fight.

Jack Glassock has many enemies among his own men at St. Louis.

A Columbus fan has titled the Indianapolis team "The Blue Jays."

If Jack O'Brien defeats Pritchard, then Fitzsimmons et al. will be after O'Brien.

Otto Praeger, a San Antonio reporter, has started for the city of Mexico awheel.

T. M. Manning of Buffalo and Martin Weldon of Kalamazoo are matched to wrestle at Kalamazoo April 30.

Mayer up to date seems to be the cleanest hitter in the Kansas City team.

Carney is the best first baseman Kansas City ever had, to judge from his work so far.

Wild Bill Widner has sent in his terms to President Williams of the Western league.

W. H. Watkins is to appear on the base ball scene once more. He will manage the Rochesters.

A number of drivers of trotting horses at Lexington have taken the preliminary steps toward the formation of a national drivers' association.

William Barnie, the manager of the Washington Baseball Club, was notified of his release. Danny Richardson, formerly of the New York Club, and one of the latest additions to the home team, is to be made manager.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A discovery of gold is reported from Buckner, Ark.

Mr. Allard of Levis, Que, has discovered a method of tempering red copper and has sold his secret to a rich American.

Rev John Stephen Michaud, has been appointed coadjutor to the bishop of Burlington, Vt., with the right of succession.

Rudyard Kipling, it is reported, has purchased a piece of property in Vermont, where his wife was born, and will take up his permanent residence in that state.

Chief Redstone, the Assinaboine sachem who some weeks ago had an operation performed in Chicago to restore his eyesight, is now able to see, and he will soon be sent back to his tribe.

The supreme court of Pennsylvania has declared the oleomargarine law constitutional, but says that persons cannot be fined when the goods are shipped into the state and the packages broken and sold in smaller portions.

The claim of a large number of members of the Skillings family scattered all over the United States, to a large tract of land in the heart of Portland, Me., has been abandoned, as a lawyer reports that the claim is not worth prosecuting.

The United States circuit court of appeals for the California district holds that a Chinese merchant domiciled in the United States on his return thereto after a temporary absence therefrom is not required to produce the certificate provided for in the act of July 5, 1884, in the case of a Chinese first coming to the United States.

MINNESOTA.

W. H. Dixon, the widely known railroad man, dies suddenly in St. Paul.

Two St. Paul laborers quarreled and one is struck with perhaps fatal results.

Patrick Shanley, the St. Paul man who was shot at the dog fight in Anoka county, dies as the result of an amputation.

August Holmberg, who drives a delivery wagon at Cloquet, was thrown from it and had his leg broken.

A young lady is drowned near Crookston, Minn., under very mysterious circumstances.

The latest idea in connection with Duluth railway terminals is to tunnel the ship canal.

Judge Mills dissolved the injunction against the city of Moorhead in the jail question.

A voucher clerk of the Northern Pacific is arrested in St. Paul for securing over $4,000 by raising checks.

Mamie Malone, a little girl living in Jerome's addition, Crookston was shot in the left hand by some playmates who were shooting at mice in an old barn.

Seeding will commence on the high ground the latter part of the week, the past few days of warm wind and sunshine having dried the land very fast.

The Bank of Echo was opened by Griffith, Smith & Co., of Sleepy Eye, Minn., with a capital stock of $10,000. J. B. Lorge is cashier.

Andrew Olson, who was struck recently by a falling ore bucket in one of the mines on the Mesaba, died. This is the first fatal accident on the new range.

Five members of the Sleepy Eye Mill company purchased the Marshall River mills, paying $50,000 for it, They will assume charge of it May 1.

Asage Rassaen, a young farmer living in Blackhammer, near Caledonia, committed suicide by hanging. He leaves a widow and two children.

John H. H. Canfield, son of Hon. Thomas H. Canfield, one of the early directors of the Northern Pacific railroad, died at Lake Park after an illness of forty hours of spinal mengintis.

Patrick Kelly was bailed out of jail at Albert Lea, where he had lain for nearly a week, charged with an attempt to shoot an officer. He got out in time to attend his father's funeral.

Lyon county's quota to the world's fair fund will be speedily raised. Supt. Hunt arrived at Marshall from Tracy, where he secured the pledge for one-half the county's apportionment and Marshall will readily raise the balance.

Albert Quieltner, a 14-year-old lad was arrested at Anoka, on a warrant of a Mr. Sawyer charging the boy with stealing a horse from his barn and trying to sell it. The culprit was brought to Anoka and lodged in jail.

Miss Brule was found in the river at Crookston. Neighbors searched for her the night previous. Her parents reside near Gentilly, in this county. Coroner Shepard did not think an inquest necessary as the death was evidently accidental.

An unknown man was found squeezed in between telegraph poles loaded on a flat car on a Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul freight train that arrived at Winona, the other morning. The man, who was about 22 years of age, had been dead about 15 hours. He was badly mangled.

A North Branch Special says: Seeding in this section nearly finished. A large acreage of new ground has been broken last fall and this spring. More grain has been sown this season than formerly. The potato crop will have about the same acreage as last year.

All the present saloon keepers of Litchfield have decided to abide by the law, as interpreted by the attorney-general, and close their saloons April 24, 20 days after election. All have made applications for new licenses, which will no doubt be granted.

The new portion of the Imperial mill at Duluth was started and is operating successfully. It has a capacity of 3,500 barrels daily, and with the older portion of the mill that has been in operation about four years, gives the mill a daily capacity of 6,000 bbls.

B. C. Sanborn, the editor and founder of the Madelia Times paper, that has existed under his guidance for fifteen years or more, was convicted after a four day's trial, of cruelty to animals and fined $10 and costs. The charge was starvation and lack of shelter to a horse.

J. H. Dobbell, of Pine City, who was reported missing, is supposed to be drowned. The boat was found at the mouth of the Mission creek, 2½ miles from here. One seat was torn out and the boat capsized. His companion and hired man, named Frank, is also missing. The river will be dragged.

The Grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. of Minnesota will hold their annual session at the State Capitol, St. Paul, May 3, 4 and 5. The governor has kindly tendered the use of the hall of the house of representatives for the meeting. This rapidly increasing order now numbers close on to 10,000 members in this state.

Sam Dougherty, fifty years old and single, a laborer in Paulsen's sawmill, at Park Rapids, was found near the railroad track in a dying condition from a blow on the head. He was taken to Wadena by the train crew, where he died in a few hours. Later circumstances indicate foul play.

John Endres of Verndale was found dead on the Northern Pacific track at Detroit. Sheriff Smith had him in charge for forging his father-in-law's name, and as the train was approaching the station he either jumped or threw himself from the train. He was an old resident of Detroit, and leaves a widow and two children.

The Seventh Annual Encampment of Minnesota Division, Sons of Veterans, will be held at Worthington, June 21-22. This excellent order has experienced a wonderful growth during the past year, and if the deep interest taken in its welfare by the officers and members goes for anything, it will not be long till it will have advanced to the front rank of fraternal orders. It is expected that there will be a large gathering at the encampment.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

At a public meeting at Howard, citizens pledged a carload of wheat for the Russian sufferers.

It may be safely said for the first time this season that seeding has actively begun in the entire Jim Valley. The acreage will be largely increased in many localities.

Many farmers began seeding wheat at Harrison in February and it is not all sown yet.—Land is advancing in value rapidly, owing to the prosperous outlook and the number of land buyers who are arriving daily.

Fred Larson, a young man, met a fearful death near Webster. In an effort to separate two vicious dogs who were fighting, a man named Olson, who was using the handle of a pitchfork on the dogs, drew back and one of the tines struck Larson just below the brow and above the ball of the right eye, penetrating the brain.

James Everett came very near death at Watertown. He was agitating a soda fountain which had been charged when it exploded, injuring him severely, but not dangerously. One piece of the fountain made its exit through an open doorway and was fifty yards from the scene of the explosion.

A Miller Special says Sowing grain is now in full blast again, although the ground is in a moist condition for the work. The scarcity of farm help is quite a drawback to the rapid advancement of the work, and it will be the first of May before all the wheat is sown.

Prof. James E. Todd has been elected to the chair of geology and mineralogy, left vacant by Prof. G. E. Culver. Prof. Todd previously occupied the chair of natural sciences at Tabor college, Iowa. He has also filled the chair of geology at Beloit. Few, if any other, geologists have had the practical field experience in South Dakota geology enjoyed by Prof. Todd.

The Sisseton reservation boom is by no means over, although the rush for land is about over. A town site fever epidemic has taken possession of a great many, and numerous are the prospective fortunes of the boomers. At present indications are that the liveliest town will be at the crossing of the Milwaukee road and the proposed Sioux City, Watertown & Duluth.

NORTH DAKOTA.

A Grand Forks bank cashier embezzles. He attributes his downfall to gambling.

Executive Manager Tyler, of the state world's fair board, spent a day at Jamestown recently working up interest in the state exhibit.

The working of the industrial school at Fort Totten is being investigated by Supervision of Indian Schools Ansley, and testimony is being taken at Devil's Lake.

An Edinburgh special says: Seeding is in progress, having commenced. The soil is in good condition. The acreage will be about two-thirds that of last year, as but little plowing was done last fall.

The Normal School Board, in session at Valley City recently accepted the designs and plans of W. B. Hancock, of Fargo, for the new normal school building to be built here. Mr. Hancock is to superintend the work.

At the school election at Grand Forks, D. Lay was relected member at large. The board of directors are: James Elton, Second ward; J. D. Bacon, Fourth ward; W. L. Wilder, Sixth ward.

Roadmaster McNamara, of the Northern Pacific, has been arrested at Grand Forks on a charge of falsifying his pay rolls, drawing money for fictitious employes and forging signatures to the pay roll, pocketing the proceeds. He is in custody at Pembina. He is said to have made a full confession.

Heavy immigration still continues. The Great Northern is carrying loaded trains. The Northern Pacific also is doing a heavy business. Settlers are scattering out among the small towns west of Grand Forks. A large party from Indianapolis, Ind., passed through to take government homesteads in Towner county.

WISCONSIN.

Property valued at $400,000 is burned at Kenosha, Wis.

A 10-year old daughter of James E. Cornwell, living three miles north of Downing burned to death while playing with fire during intermission at school.

Rodin, a photographer, living at West Superior, was killed on the Eastern Minnesota road, fifteen miles south of this city.

County Supervisor P. J. Ryan's residence at Durand, was totally destroyed by fire. His wife was alone with small children at the time. The origin is unknown. Loss over $2,000.

The home of A. D. White, the agent for the Singer Sewing Machine company at Brandon, was entered by thieves while the family was at church and $1,000 in money stolen.

Albert W. Weisbrod, a prominent lawyer of Northern Wisconsin, and one of the attorneys in the celebrated state treasury cases, died at Oshkosh suddenly.

Two children were poisoned by eating something they picked up on the street, which is supposed to have been strychnine, as both died in a short time of convulsions. One was five and the other six years of age.

The wife of Theodore H. Specht, of the firm of Specht, Cronen & Co., carriage manufacturers, of Milwaukee, presented her husband with three babies, two boys and a girl, weighing exactly six pounds each. All are doing well.

A row boat was found near the shore in Green lake Dartford containing the dead body of a boy, aged fifteen, the son of the wealthy owner of "Sunnyside," one of the finest summer houses on the lake. The lad had just breathed his last. He had evidently been killed by the accidental discharge of his gun.

Wm. Bortel, who tried to get out of Barron county with a livery team, was captured at Eau Claire by Deputy Sheriff Deilz, who returned with him and the team.

IOWA.

A number of prominent capitalists of Dubuque organized the Dubuque Life Insurance Company recently. The details are not yet perfected.

A man named Kelsey was fatally injured at Iowa Falls by being caught in a cog at the bottle works. The engine could not be stopped in time.

The corner stone of the new Hardin county court house, which will cost $75,000, was laid with appropriate ceremony. Hon. G. W. Ball, of Iowa City, will deliver the address.

Charles Blackman, a cattle thief who for five years has eluded officers of the law has been captured and placed in jail at Creston. There are several indictments pending against him for wholesale cattle stealing.

Vac Adamel, is held in bonds of $1,000 at Cedar Rapids to answer to the charge of attempting to rape Mrs. Hosik, a prominent Bohemian lady. Adamel is married, but it is claimed he has another wife living in Prague.

Workmen while digging down a bank in the eastern part of Cedar Rapids, unearthed the skeleton of a man with a broad-brimmed hat on his head, a silk tie around his neck and a part of a vest. There is no clue as to who it is.

William Stackhouse, a German, while engaged in erecting a windmill tower seven miles west of Eldora, was killed. He was at the top of the shaft and fell, killing him almost instantly. He lived at Hubbard, on Chicago & Northwestern railroad.

The federal inspection of beef went into effect at the slaughter house of E. Haskinson & Co., and 50 head of cattle and 260 head of sheep were tagged out. It is expected that pork inspection will begin soon.

It has just been reported at Des Moines that a farmer named Cockerham, living six miles north, has killed his wife by shooting her. The couple have had trouble and were not living together. He had threatened to kill her before. There are no particulars.

Herbert Davy, the 14-year-old son of Geo. Davy, a prominent citizen of Earlville, Delaware county, committed suicide by hanging himself in his father's barn. The boy appeared to be in his right mind and was unusually cheerful.

ALMOST A CURE-ALL.

The Praises of the Humble Onion Sounded by a Devotee.

They are invaluable for soup. They are blood purifiers. A liberal use of them is recommended as a cure for boils, and they tend to make the complexion clear and the face free from pimples. The children of those nationalities who eat them most largely noticeably escape that bane of childhood worm. Their use is beneficial to the digestive organs, they are excellent in diseases of the bladder and kidneys, are of benefit in liver complaints, and their power for good in lung troubles is well known. They are the best cure for insomnia.

A favorite remedy for a cough is a syrup made by alternating slices of raw onion with white sugar. Cut a large onion, horizontally, into thin slices, put one in a dish, sprinkle sugar over it, then add another slice of onion, building it up thus by layers until all are used. Cover the dish. About once in three hours a teaspoonful of syrup will have formed, which should be taken at intervals of about this length, throughout the day.

Hot poultices made of onions and mixed with goose oil, have been used advantageously in croup. Roasted onions are used sometimes bound to the feet and placed upon the chests of the little ones suffering from the effects of a cold. Placed raw upon a cloth, then beaten to a pulp, bandaging with this the throat and well up over the ears, they have given relief in cases of diptheria.—Good Housekeeping.

BROUGHT ITS OWN ANSWER.

Remarkable Coincidence Concerning Two Letters That Went to Sea.

Among the stories of extraordinary coincidences, writes the London correspondent of the Leeds Mercury, not the least curious is the history of a letter, for accuracy of which he can vouch. A short time ago a lady in London wished to write to a friend in America, whose address she did not know. The only means she had of procuring the address was to write to a mutual friend, who also lived in America. This she accordingly did, and the letter was duly dispatched. The ship which carried the letter was wrecked, and the mails for a time lost. They were eventually recovered and brought back to England, the letters now much damaged by sea water, being returned through the dead letter office to the senders.

The letter in question was sent back to the lady, who naturally examined it minutely. To her surprise she found that another letter had become closely stuck to it. Holding up the twofold missive to the light, she deciphered the address on the one which was stuck to her own. It was a letter addressed to the friend to whom she had wished to write, and to discover whose whereabouts her own letter had been dispatched. Her letter thus literally brought back its own answer.

Those Hyperbolical Southerners.

Three pupils of the Marseilles School of Art were chatting together in the Cannebière. Said one of them:—"Look here, my friend, the other day I painted a little deal board in imitation of marble with such accuracy that, on being thrown into the water, it immediately sank to the bottom."

"Faugh!" said another. "Yesterday I hung my thermometer on the easel supporting my view of the Polar Regions. It fell twenty degrees below freezing-point."

"All that is nothing," remarked the third, in conclusion. "My portrait of Marquis Della Camargue is so life-like that it requires to be shaved twice a week."—Le Masque de Fer.

His Eye Was Cold.

"Ah, yes," she murmurs, "you say that you love me. But I find nothing in your eyes but coldness."

"No; you wrong me. What I say I feel—so deeply."

"My dear, you don't look it."

"Tell me, dearest, tell me that you can love a man with a glass eye!"

Then she fainted.

A DUO OF CHANGES

In the Machinery for the Government of the Minnesota Indians.

William P. Dunnington to Succeed Agent Shuler at White Earth.

Washington, Special, April 24.—Senator Davis has recommended Capt. William P. Dunnington of Redwood Falls for Indian agent at White Earth, in place of Capt. Schuler, who is to be removed. Senator Washburn has not recommended anybody, but the impression prevails that he will name a selection. The friends of Capt. H. R. Denny are pushing his claims, but it is now an impossibility for him to be appointed, especially as Senator Davis has made another recommendation. Even if Senator Washburn should make another recommendation, it is scarcely possible for his man to be appointed because of the strained relations between the senator and the administration.

The recommendations of Senator Davis are very apt to go in all matters relating to appointments in Minnesota, but there are reasons why Capt. Dunnington may not be the next agent. In the Minnesota legislature of 1889 it will be remembered something occurred which may be used against Dunnington. The state senate held several executive sessions upon the case and the outcome was finally favorable to the captain, but his opponents and those who are seeking the place will make the most of it before the administration. Commissioner Hall has recommended Denny, and the latter has a number of friends in the interior department who are pushing him.

A PLACE FOR BISHOP M'GOLRICK.

There is also another change in the White Earth Indian commission. Bishop Marty of South Dakota has been a member of the commission since it was organized, although during the last few months he has taken any active part and his term as commissioner has practically ceased. It is understood that another Catholic prelate will be appointed in his place within the next two or three months, and Bishop McGolrick of Duluth has been slated for the place, to begin on July 1, when the appropriation of the present congress will be available. At present the commission has not enough money on hand to warrant this appointment and active work for the removal of the Chippewas to the White Earth reservation, but beginning with July 1 work will be begun in earnest to secure the ends desired by the interior department and which have been authorized by law.

DON'T NEED MONEY.

The statement which was sent out last night that the Leech Lake and Pillager Chippewas in Washington could not get money to return is a mistake. Secretary Noble has already authorized the expenditure of certain moneys belonging to these Indians for their expenses here and for the return trip. The fact is, the commissioner of Indian affairs did not want these Indians to come to Washington, and they asked to come on and pay their own expenses. Since their arrival they have presented a request, signed by 300 of their tribe, authorizing the expenditure of tribe money for their expenses here; and, as they have $127,000 to their credit, there is no trouble about money. The visits of the Indians here have resulted in one desirable object. They have been convinced that they will have to obey the requests of the department and settle at White Earth according to the laws.

VOTES COUNTED.

A Light Vote Polled at Red Wing City Election.

Red Wing, Minn., Special, April 20.—At the election to-day, a light vote was polled. Following is the result:

For constable, John Seastrand (Ind.); for member at large of school board, E. H. Hoard, no opposition; First ward member of school board, F. J. Linn (Rep.); alderman in First ward, H. L. McKinstry (Dem.); Second, E. H. Druel (Rep.); Third, J. P. Patterson (Rep.); N. A. Kenson (Rep.).

The vote on school board proposition carried. The city attorney has decided that while women could vote for members of the school board they could not vote on the school district board proposition which was decided to-day.

Regards the Law Unconstitutional.

Miller, S. D., Special, April 26.—In the circuit court Judge Fuller decided a case of considerable interest throughout the state. The case was one instituted by State's Attorney Gray against County Judge Hughes for not filing an official bond according to a law of 1897. Judge Fuller held that the constitution enumerates causes for removal, but failure to file a bond is not one of them. That under the constitution no law providing for procedure in removing has been enacted. That if the question of constitutionality of the act of 1891 had been raised, requiring county judges to file a bond, he was inclined to hold it unconstitutional so far as it relates to county judges. There is talk of appealing the case to the supreme court.

Afraid of Anarchists.

Paris, April 26.—The trial of Ravachol, the anarchist, will begin to-morrow. A big demand has been made for tickets of admission, but the desire to hear the proceedings has been somewhat dampened by the statement that Ravachol's friends were plotting to prevent sentence from being carried out. Fears are expressed that a bomb might be exploded in court, but this is not very probable. None of the judges are anxious to preside at the trial, as the anarchists have threatened vengeance against the judge who sentences Ravachol.

Retail Tariff Revision.

Washington, April 25.—Senator McPherson to-day introduced an amendment, intended to be proposed to the Springer free wool bill, providing that after Jan. 1, 1893, all sugars, tank bottoms, drainings and sweepings, syrups of cane juice, melada, concentrated melada, concrete and concentrated molasses, glucose and grape sugar shall be admitted free of duty.

Ocean Travel.

Boston—Arrived: Catalonia, Liverpool.
Southampton—Arrived: Elbe, New York.
New York—Arrived: Ems, Bremen; Damestadt from Bremen.
Rotterdam—Arrived: Zaandam, Baltimore.
London—Sighted: Ohio, Baltimore.

To Carry Out the Treaty.

Washington, April 25.—Secretary Blaine estimates that the cost to the United States of carrying out the Bering sea arbitration treaty will be $150,000, and he, through the secretary of the treasury, to-day sent to the house a request for the appropriation of this amount.

FATAL ACCIDENTS.

A Deck Hand and a Brakeman Killed at Ashland.

Ashland, Wis., Special, April 26.—To-day John Fee, a deckhand on a boat loading at the Milwaukee, Lake Shore & Western railway docks, fell into a pocket on the dock and received injuries which proved fatal.

Brakeman Richard Smith, on the Northern Pacific, fell between the cars on a train to-day and had both legs cut off, which resulted in his death.

On Saturday morning the body of a fisherman, lost during the storm last fall, washed ashore at Madeline island. It was picked up Friday and brought to Ashland, where it was identified.

A Patent in Eleven Days.

Washington, Special, April 26.—The Pioneer Press Bureau of Claims has just procured a patent for John J. Wheeler of Duluth, Minn., to the southwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 13, the west half of the northwest quarter and the northwest quarter of the southwest quarter of section 24, in township 154 north, of range 26 west, fifth principal meridian, containing 160 acres of land in Aitkin county and embraced in the St. Cloud land district. In this case Wheeler made a homestead entry of the land described in 1883 and commuted his entry, but unfortunately lost his receiver's final receipt and was thus unable to procure a patent to his homestead. After many unsuccessful efforts he placed the matter in the hands of the Pioneer Press Bureau only a few weeks since. A power of attorney and proper affidavits were secured from him and received by the Bureau on April 9. They were at once filed and the case was pushed so vigorously that the patent was secured on April 20, being a period of only eleven days. This is believed to be the quickest time on record for procuring a patent under such difficult circumstances, and shows unusual facilities afforded by the Pioneer Press Bureau for prosecuting claims before the general land office.

Six Prisoners Escape.

Sioux Falls S. D., Special, April 26.—A jail delivery of six birds occurred here Sunday evening by sawing off the bars of a window. Three of the men have been recaptured, but those still absent are the ones who could be least easily spared. James Devault and James Regan were arrested only a few days ago for stealing an overcoat containing $3,000 in notes, and it has since developed that they are all-round toughs and badly wanted elsewhere. All of the former's left hand fingers have been shot off. The prisoners were doubtless handed a saw by a confederate outside. Of the seven men who did not escape some were too fat to get through the small aperture and some did not care to get out. Those recaptured will be indicted by the grand jury for breaking jail.

The Chairman Unable to Attend to Political Matters.

Washington, Special, April 26.—A telegram was received to-day from Chairman Clarkson by a man who is a candidate for a position in the Republican national convention stating that he was too ill to attend to any political matters. It is inferred from this dispatch that Clarkson will not be able to attend the Republican national convention at Minneapolis, and some doubt exists as to what the committee will do for the chairman during the coming campaign if Clarkson does not recover sufficiently to take charge. Some of the extreme Clarkson worshippers believe the Republican party will have no leader or head if Clarkson cannot be on deck. Why this impression should ever be created cannot be stated. People are willing to credit Clarkson with a fair degree of political intelligence, but the idea that he is the only man who can manage the Republican campaign is too absurd to consider for a moment.

The Drowning Was Accidental.

Crookston, Minn., April 26.—Yesterday the deputy coroner, County Physician Watts and another doctor drove to Gentilly and examined the remains of Octavia Brule, the young lady who was drowned two weeks ago. A jury was impaneled, and, after holding an autopsy, the jury rendered a verdict to the effect that the girl had come to her death from accidental drowning.

A Panic-Stricken Congregation.

Fort Wayne, Ind., April 26.—Decorations in the St. Mary's Catholic church took fire from a lighted taper yesterday while the church was almost filled to suffocation. Children screamed, women fainted and the entire congregation, panic stricken, made a wild rush for the doors. Many were trampled under foot and were more or less injured. The priest and a number of his assistants were quite severely burned.

Three Young Men Drowned.

Beaver Dam, Wis., April 26.—A row boat containing four young men capsized on Beaver lake yesterday and three of the party were drowned. They are Peter House, aged seventeen; John Fishers, aged fourteen, and Hugo Roberg, aged twenty-two. The fourth in the party, Estman Dieckmiller, clung to the boat and was rescued. The three sank instantly, owing to the icy coldness of the water.

Meeting of Fair Commissioners.

Rapid City, S. D., Special, April 26.—Mrs. William Duff Haynie, president of the board of lady commissioners of the world's fair, to-day issued a call for a meeting of the board to be held at Huron May 2. The men commissioners will meet at the same time and place, and a strong effort will be made to provide ways and means for a South Dakota exhibit at the world's fair.

A Large Mining Deal.

Rapid City, S. D., April 26.—An important mining sale is reported here. Messrs. Humphreys & Stenger of this city, who recently bonded the Spokane mine in the Squaw creek district, have sold out to Omaha parties for $151,000, making a fortune in the deal. The Spokane is one of the most promising silver mines in the Black Hills.

Has Millions Left.

Rio de Janeiro, March 27.—Count de Leopoldina (Henry Lowndes), a prominent speculator, has been declared bankrupt. His liabilities are estimated at $18,000,000 and his assets at $30,000,000.

Archbishop Ireland's Mission Successful.

Rome, April 26.—The editor of the Moniteur De Rome is authority for the statement that the mission to Rome of Archbishop Ireland of St. Paul has been a complete success. All the questions upon which his mission had a bearing have been decided in his favor.

Deacon Will Be Tried in May.

Cannes, April 26.—The trial of Edward Parker Deacon for the killing of M. Abeille, who was discovered by Mr. Deacon in the room of Mrs. Deacon at the Hotel Splendide, at Grasse, was fixed to begin May 20. It is said that the family of Abeille will not be present in the capacity of plaintiffs, a right they have under the French law, but that M. Clemenceau will watch the proceedings and possibly speak in their behalf. It is regarded as certain that Mrs. Deacon will not be present at her husband's trial, and it is said that in order to avoid testifying she will produce a medical certificate stating that it will be impossible for her to attend.

Wheat is 64 cents.

Ed Whitley left for St. Paul to-day with a carload of stock.

J. M. Hanson made a business trip to Crookston the first of the week.

If you want to insure your buildings against fire, call at this office.

The weather at present does not seem to meet with the approval of many.

R. A. Wilkinson, the right-of-way agent for the Great Northern is in town to-day.

The village school will reconvene next Monday May 2nd. The term is for two months only.

The boys have been doing considerable fishing lately but have succeeded in catching very few fish.

The roads were drying fast last week but the recent rains have made them almost impassible again.

The price of wheat has been improving slightly the past week and No. 1 hard is now worth 66 cents in this market.

The train is several hours late every day now as they are using it as a construction train to distribute ties along the line.

S. M. Dainard is shipping a carload of cattle that he has been fattening during the winter, to St. Paul to-day. They are fine looking animals and should sell for a fancy price.

Dr. J. M. Pinch, of Minto N. D., arrived here last week. He will locate here permanently and practice his profession. Dr. Pinch comes well recommended and appears to be an intelligent young man. He has had several years practice and will prove, we think, to be a successful physician.

The city of St. Paul will have a city election next Tuesday and times are real lively down there. Col. F. P. The Polk County Journal came to us last week with a new dress and entirely changed in appearance and announces that Editor H. E. Cock has taken a partner in the person of Wm. Hammond of Bismark N. D. Mr. Hammond comes highly recommended and we predict that the Journal will prove a success under the managment of the new firm.

It would be well for the farmers to look very carefully over the seed wheat they intend to sow this spring as those well informed are of the opinion that wheat that was damp last fall and was frozen during the winter was unfit for seed as the germ of the wheat is killed. It will take but a few days to find out if the wheat will sprout and farmers who intend to sow that kind of grain should test it before sowing.

"Any way to escape" said Jim Dainard the other evening as he took a 'header' through the kitchen window of one of the hotels. We have been trying to find out why he made the jump and the only thing we have learned yet is a rumor to the effect that one of the young ladies had been exercising her leap year privilege and Jim considerably embarrassed, made a wild break for liberty.

Fire was discovered in the hall-way of M. Hendrickson's residence last Sunday night about eleven o,clock and but for the timely arrival of help the building would have been consumed. The fire caught from a kettle of coals in the hall and had gained considerable headway when discovered. It is very fortunate that the fire was discovered in time as the family were all asleep and all means of exit cut off by the fire Very little damage was done.

K. Kvande came before Justice Hanson last Friday and swore out a warrant against Victor Carlson charging him with stealing a gold watch and five dollars in cash from his residence in the township of Roxbury. The warrant was given to Constable Williams who left the same day for Crookston where he captured his man. The prisoner was brought before Justice Hanson Monday and he plead guilty to grand larceny. He was bound over to the district court the amount of bail being put at $200 which was not furnished. Constable Williams took the prisoner to the county jail on Monday. The watch that was stolen was recovered but most of the money had been spen

Mr. Griffen, England's statistician estimates that the Briton has something like $1,800,000,000 invested in the United States, from which he draws a nice income. In this fact the far-sighted man may discover why J. Bull is sometimes willing to arbitrate knotty questions with us.—Ex.

A few farmers did some seeding the last of last week and quite a number commenced work last Monday but the rains this week has stopped all work and it will be at least another week before work can be resumed. This will make seeding exceptionally late. Over sixty per cent of the plowing is yet to be done and it is safe to state that not over fifty percent of last year's acreage will be sown this spring.

"English trade is not quite so good as it was last year and the year before," remarks the London Graphic of April 9 "Owing to the depression of English manufactures due to the new American tariff," says Le Moniteur de la Mode, "prices have fallen lower than ever before, and the finer class of goods are selling at the bare cost of manufacture to get them into the American market." These statements by representative English papers seem to answer the question, "Who pays the tariff tax.—New York Press.

Miss Octavie Brule, a young lady of Gentilly, this county, was drowned in the Red Lake River last Sunday under suspicious circumstances. The friends of the girl claim that the drowning was accidental and did not desire an inquest to be held. The spot where she was drowned is only 200 yards from the house and the river is filled with growing willows and it would have been an easy matter for the girl to have been an easy matter for the girl to have clung to the bushes and saved herself if she so desired. She was 10 years old and was a handsome young lady.—Fertile Journal.

Washington April 23.—The huge petition of 4 000 or more business firms of Chicago and other Illinois cities for 1 cent postage, that is on its way to Senator Palmer and Congressman Post has been secured by one Patterson, formerly editor of a postal paper in New York, who has been operating for several months in Chicago and St. Louis. By the most careful estimates, the reduction of postal revenues due to cutting the letter rate in half, would be almost $23,000,000 annually, and that any increase of business that would follow, (which would also necessitate increased accommodations, new post office buildings, carriers, etc., and increased clerks) would not perceptibly reduce that falling off. The demand for 1 cent postage has been noticed to come almost invariably from large business houses, which, of course have larger postal bills, and almost never from the casual letter writers who furnish the bulk of the postal revenue.

Detroit Minn. April 22. The announcement that Commissioner Campbell had been asked to resign and had complied with the request caused some excitement at the reservation. Mr. Campbell has been an active worker among the Indians making his headquarters on the reservation, is thoroughly conversant with the needs of the Indians, and as a consequence enjoys the entire confidence of the reservation people. There is indignation at the agency at the removal and it is openly averred that the commission will be unable to accomplish anything. The Indians will hold a council at White Earth some time next week to protest against this action and it is also understood that they will refuse to accept their allotments of land unless they are given the 160 acres promised them by Mr. Rice. They will also refuse to recognize the terms of the treaty as interpreted and trouble is looked for.

Lawyer Charles H. Reed who was prominent in the defense of Giteau at the trial of the assassin of President Garfield, died last Thursday at Baltimore of progressive paralysis. He hoped to gain notoriety by his association with that event, and succeeded, as did all who were connected with the effort to secure immunity for the murderer, in sinking himself immeasurably, professionally and socially. When he volunteered to join Scoville, Giteau's brother-in-law, he left Chicago never to return. His family became estranged, his wife secured a divorced, and he died in such obscurity that there was no public information until four days after his decease. Something the same fate has attended everyone who had any connection with Giteau and his defense None had any future but that of obloquy —Daily News.

The Hallock papers say that tests have been made by farmers about there with wheat that stood in shock or stack over winter and has been threshed this spring, and it is found worthless for seed. As a rule but a very small percentage will sprout at all. The Grand Forks Plaindealer has this to say on the subject.

President Stockbridge, of the state agricultural college states that the trials at the experimental station showed that it was not safe to sow wheat, threshed in the spring or that which was frosted or bin burnt without thoroughly testing the grain. He said that in most of the grain which had wintered in stack not over 25 per cent would grow, but as much of the wheat bin burnt, which looked fine and nice, the experiments showed that not over 5 per cent would grow. This convinced him that it was necessary to carefully experiment with the grain before it was sowed. The station was always glad to test the grain free and if several samples were sent in would report as to which was the best for seeding purposes.

If any of the farmers about here are expecting to use wheat for seed that stood in the stack over winter it is evident that they should test it carefully. —Marshall County Leader.

Crookston Times: Those who are claiming that Knute Nelson's strength is greatest in the Northern part of the state will discover how badly they were deceived if he is placed in nomination for governor by the Republicans. The assertion that he could catch the scandinavian vote is without the least foundation. The People's Party in the Seventh district is made up principally of Scandinavians and they are so thoroughly wedded to their cause that Nelson or no one else can divorce them from it. Besides they indignantly resent the idea of putting a man to catch their votes on nationality grounds. Among Republicans Nelson is equally unpopular. They do not like his style of republicanism, and the fact that he is backed by Merriam does not help him any in certain quarters. We make the prediction now that if Nelson is nominated he will not poll the vote in the Seventh district that Merriam polled two years ago.

The ebony question has not been a disturbing one in its social phase in Great Britain but a curious test of the colorless disposition of mind is apparently to be had in England. It will involve the seating of a dusky African in the house of lords and the pressure of the lips of the queen upon the cheek of a coal-black woman. These aristocratic parties are reported in dismay over the prospect. During his sojourn in South Africa, some years ago, Lord Stanford, a peer of the realm, married a totally unbleached native according to the nuptial rites of her people which are extremely simple and unlike those of England. But the British law recognizes marriages that are in accordance with the practices of the locality where they take place. Lord Stanford had a son before his death. This semi-Hottentot son is now grown and on his way to England to claim his rights as a peer including a seat in the house of lords. The white relatives will contest and kick but the majesty of English law is against them. Then the mother of the young lord, now dowager Countess of Stanford, comes with him, and must be presented to the queen. The immutable custom is that the occupant of the throne must kiss the cheek of every lady of the peerage on her first presentation. The conundrum is, will the queen kiss this original embodiment of nigritude?—St. Paul Globe.

HAUNTED FOR HIS CRIME.

Terrible Retribution of an Engineer Who Ditched a Rival's Train.

"My God, help! There's Dickson's engine coming again. See his ghost! Oh, she's coming, coming! Help! help!"

The sentence is uttered by ex-Engineer Henry Shantz nearly every day. After being in a frenzy half a minute he falls to the ground in a faint.

Shantz lives with his brother John on a farm between Fenton and Kirkwood on the banks of the Meramec. He is a hopeless maniac and has been so for two years. His history explains it.

Sixteen years ago Henry was an engineer on a Union Pacific locomotive. Among his railway friends was one George Dickson and the latter's fireman, Allison. Dickson and Shantz got into a dispute over a game of cards, and whenever they passed each other after that Dickson and Allison would taunt Shantz and call him a thief and a coward. One day in Denver matters came to a climax. Shantz got into a rage and swore he'd get even with his enemy within twenty-four hours.

He left Denver for the west in charge of an express. He learned that Dickson and Allison would follow him on a lone locomotive within fifteen minutes. About fifteen miles out of Denver, at the Geyer gorge, was a switch that ran a track down a slope, which stopped abruptly at the brink of the gorge. This siding was rarely used and the switch was locked.

Shantz saw his chance to get "even" with his taunters in a terrible way. He slowed up, and with the excuse to the fireman that he would go back to see if the switch was sound, rushed back, broke the lock and turned the lever from right to left, so that Dickson's locomotive would go down the siding and smash down the gorge. He then returned to his engine.

Within twenty minutes there was an unearthly shriek in the valley, a tremendous crash and Dickson's engine had smashed down the gorge and was dashed into a thousand fragments hundreds of feet below.

Pieces of flesh and bones was all that was left of Dickson and Allison.

The affair attracted great attention at the time. Shantz was at once suspected, and the combined facts that Shantz threatened to get "even" and that he stopped at the gorge convicted him. He was sentenced lightly, however, going to the Denver penitentiary for ten years. In 1886 he was released.

No one knew where he was after his release, until one morning, two years ago, he knocked at the door of his brother's house. He was very ill and for two months raved like a madman. He has improved at times, but he is a hopeless maniac.

While wandering about the yard he will suddenly rush into the house, yelling, "That locomotive is coming straight toward me. It is coming; oh, for God's sake, take me away! Dickson is steering it to run directly over me."

After his faint he will describe his phantom engine.

"It had crape all over it," he says. "Dickson, with a white shroud over his shoulders, had his skinny hand on the throttle valve, and he uttered a loud curse on me before he blew off steam. Allison taunted me like he used to do. A demon sat on the cowcatcher with his arms open to grab me."

He will then go into his room and tremblingly go to his bed. At night he walks to and fro, looking out of the window at intervals, and then, drawing back, would shriek: "Oh, that headlight is coming round the bend! It has a monster blaze!" Then he will crawl under his couch and remain there for hours.—St. Louis Chronicle.

Tact Among Married People.

I cannot see why a woman who was given tact as a birthright will ever sell it for that pottage, "plain speaking." "How do I look, father?" I once heard a lovely old lady ask as she stood dressed for church. "Thee always looks well to me," was the answer, "but other folks might like it better were those white threads off thy gown." Show me a lover of twenty years whose delicate tact could do better.

"Excuse me," "please," "thank you," little words and trifles in themselves, but they are stitches in the seam; little trouble to take them, but oh, the difference to the patchwork!—Good Housekeeping.

A Dainty Fan.

A very dainty fan to give to a bride is of white gauze with pearl mounts; the gauze is thickly studded with silver sequins and has, wrought out very delicately, a pattern of marguerites. Of course this present is particularly applicable if the bride's name should be Margaret, Marguerite or Daisy.—Isabel A. Mallon in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Human Ditch.

Each square inch of the skin contains 3,500 sweating tubes, or perspiration pores, each of which may be likened to a little drain tile one-fourth of an inch in length this would make the aggregate length of the pores of the entire surface of the body not less than 201,166 feet, a human tile ditch nearly forty miles long.—Philadelphia Ledger.

This Good Samaritan Was a Woman.

A poor Italian woman with a babe in her arms and two little tots at her heels arrived in Boston one day last week. She could not speak a word of English. She handed a piece of paper to a policeman, who shook his head and turned away. A Boston woman, one of God's women, too, approached the poor immigrant, and taking the paper from her read an Italian name, number so and so Billerica street. Unfortunately the good Samaritan did not know where Billerica street was; so, followed by the Italian and her little ones, she entered a store to find out. Seeing the Italian, the storekeeper exclaimed, "Oh, they've been in here three or four times before; we don't know anything about it!"

"But surely the directory will tell where Billerica street is," said the kind hearted woman, grasping that much thumbed volume. A brief examination resulted in the desired information, and straightway the good Samaritan escorted the mother and her little ones to humble lodgings, where the immigrant's mother welcomed the party with benedictions in sweet Neapolitan. After contributing money to buy mittens for the little ones the good Samaritan went her way. Which would you rather be, the policeman, the storekeeper or the good Samaritan?—Boston Herald.

Strange, but True.

The other afternoon a room sufficiently large was occupied for three hours by a company of about fifty persons. There was talking by several different persons, and about half way through the exercises a song was attempted. The singer accomplished her task with much difficulty, for by that time the air was vitiated and exhausted so that her voice seemed to fall back into her throat. A late comer, who reached the room only a few moments before the company dispersed, recoiled from the air which met her, and a glance showed the dull yet glassy eyes and flushed cheeks which come with choking lungs.

But, says the reader at this point, they must have been a set of children or ignoramuses not to have opened the windows or doors and obtained relief. They were neither. It was a session of one of the brightest women's clubs in the city, and there were half a dozen representative women discussing with zeal and practical knowledge the question of home sanitation!—Her Point of View in New York Times.

She Yelled "Mouse" and Jumped.

A surprisingly strong bit of evidence in proof of a woman's inability to remain calm in the presence of a mouse was that contributed by Bridget Colgan, the servant girl who is now being treated for a broken ankle at the Philadelphia hospital.

Miss Colgan is a fine, strapping young daughter of Erin, who would give most men a hard tussle in a trial of physical strength, and her nerves are usually as strong as her muscles. Yet when Bridget was cleaning the second story windows of the house where she was employed as chambermaid last week and she saw a mouse run out from under the bed, she instantly turned and leaped into the street below, at the same time screaming, "A mouse! a mouse!"

Perhaps no more remarkable instance of this strange fear has ever been recorded, and Miss Bridget's escape with only the injuries mentioned is not the least curious part of her adventure.—Philadelphia Record.

Character in the Face.

"If you want to get at the real strength and character of a person's face study the right side of it—the ugly side, as portrait painters sometimes call it," said an artist. "There you will find the lines bold and harsh, with every defect accentuated. On the left side, however, everything is softened down and the face is at its best.

"Whenever you suspect a man of trickery or deceit, and this rule applies equally to the fair sex, stand on their right and watch the expression closely. There never yet was an actor skillful enough to cover up the marks of his real personality, which are stamped by nature for the man who likes to read, on the right side of the face."—New York Herald.

Too Many Miracles.

Spinulus, a monk of Moyon Moutier, in the Vosges, died in 707. His death was followed by an epidemic of miracles, so that Hildulf, the abbot, fearing his monks might be beguiled from their proper work by the crowds of pilgrims who hastened to the wonderful scene, knelt down at the tomb of Spinulus and charged the deceased monk, by the obedience which he had owed him while alive, to save the brotherhood from the impending danger. Spinulus complied, and the "embarras des miracles" was at an end.—All the Year Round.

Georgia's Champion Eater.

The champion eater in Georgia is in Fort Gaines, and Bill Connolly, colored, is the man. At one sitting he accomplished the following: In 2¼ minutes he ate six dry soda crackers, a one pound onion in one minute, box of sardines in three-quarters of a minute, six more crackers in three minutes and wound up on a half pint of apple vinegar, which he said was mighty funny whisky.—Atlanta Constitution.

A Methodical Man.

Once an old Englishman, James Scott by name, traveled about on business until he was nearly eighty years of age. He became celebrated for his punctuality and his methodical habits. Upon one occasion a gentleman stopped at an inn much frequented by Mr. Scott and saw a fine fowl cooking.

"That is very good," said the hungry guest. "You may serve that for my dinner."

"You cannot have that, sir," replied the landlord. "That is being cooked for Mr. Scott, the traveler."

"I know Mr. Scott very well," said the gentleman. "Is he stopping here?"

"Oh, no, sir," answered the landlord. "But six months ago he ordered a fowl to be ready for him at precisely 2 o'clock today and we are expecting him every minute."

Raised on the Bottle.

A gentleman not long since, in one of his rides in Southern Illinois, sought to make himself interesting to a good-looking mother of a sweet baby occupying the next seat in the car. After duly praising the baby he remarked to the mother:

"He's a real Sucker, I suppose?" (meaning Illinois born.)

"No sir," said the lady blushing; "We had to raise him on the bottle."

The gentleman resumed his reading and has not bragged on any strange babies since.—National Weekly.

No Deduction Authorized.

WASHINGTON, Special—The treasury department has decided, unless a difference between the invoice weight of grain passing from Canada through the frontier port of the United States and the weight actually arriving at the frontier port is found by official weighing at such port, no allowance can be made for the difference, if any, officially ascertained at the final port of entry, there being no provisions of the law to authorize any deduction on account of loss which may have occurred during the transportation within the limits of the United States.

Hotel Guests Severely Burned.

ASHLAND, Wis., Special, Special—To-night fire broke out in a third-class hotel here, and but for the prompt response of the fire department serious trouble would have resulted. Two or three men in the building were severely burned. The hotel is situated in a block of frame buildings, which would have been good fuel for the flames had they not been quickly subdued. The loss will amount to $500 or $600.

By Hood's Sarsaparilla

All parents whose children suffer from Scrofula, Salt Rheum, or other diseases caused by impure blood, should read the following from Mrs. J. W. Tillbrook, wife of the Mayor of McKeesport, Penn.:

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

"My little boy Willie, now six years old, two years ago had a which the doctor said was Scrofula. As it continued to grow he finally lanced it and it discharged for some time. We then began giving him Hood's Sarsaparilla and he improved very rapidly until it healed up. Last winter it broke out again and was followed by

Erysipelas

We again gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla with most excellent results and he has had no further trouble. His cure is due to the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla. He has never been very robust, but now seems healthy and daily growing stronger. The doctor seemed quite pleased at his appearance and said he feared at one time that we should lose him. I have also taken

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER X.—CONTINUED.

Between the right side of the bed and the wall was a square table,—on which stood the lamp,—with the saddle-back chair beside it. On the left-hand side of the bed was a tall, carved black press. A large chimney, with a sculptured mantel and an open hearth, faced the door. A screen shut off the washstand, which stood to the left of the oriel. A broad settle, with a valance, and covered with a stuff similar to the hangings of the bed, ran round the three-sided recess formed by the window,—curtains of the same kind shut off this recess. A corner cabinet, with folding doors in the lower part, fitted the angle of the walls to the right; between this and the door was a deep, wide, and long chest, and above it a large mirror. An escritoire, some high-backed chairs, and a second table, completed the furniture. There was no door but the one opening upon the corridor, and no windows save the oriel.

In the early part of the night, I had described these particulars to Van Hoeck, at his request, and he had made me examine the press, the old chest, the hangings of the bed and settles; everything, in fact, which might afford a hiding-place to Lola or another.

I had even gone down upon my knees, and looked under the bed, to appease his anxiety. And yet, now, a vague uneasiness possessed me as I raised the lamp shade, and looked around the room. The dark oak wainscot, the sombre hangings, the painted ceiling overhead, absorbed the light; there was a black void on the opposite side of the bed, where the light from the lamp was intercepted by the curtains; I could not see even the outline of the great press.

I readjusted the shade, turned the wick higher, and, half-undressed, threw myself upon the bed. I was not afraid,—in strength I was a match for any natural foe, and I did not believe in the existence of any other,—yet I felt myself infected with Van Hoeck's presentiment of impending calamity.

Van Hoeck's theory of Lola's complicity in a plot to steal the diamond, had been upset by the fact that I was watching her asleep at my door at the very time Edith believed she saw the girl looking through her blinds; but this had in no wise shaken his conviction that the mysterious appearance was connected with a scheme to rob us.

"Are a man's convictions to be limited by his senses?" he asked. "You are convinced that a cloud is rising in the horizon because you see it; but am I to deny its existence because I have no sight? Are you justified, then, in declaring that we are not menaced by this disaster which is to overwhelm us because you have not my faculty of prevision? You who can not deny prescience to a bee, the presentiment of coming storm to cattle, tell me that my conviction is nothing. It is only by conviction that we live. What saves us from destruction but the conviction that, by stepping into an abyss, we must fall? I tell you to look about you; we are on the edge of an abyss. There are signs to strike the dullest intelligence. Your turn will come!"

I had hung my watch in the pocket upon the hanging at the head of the bed; its lively ticking sounded strangely out of keeping with the gloom and stillness of the surroundings. The shaded light gave a funeral aspect to the bed hangings; the baldaquin over my head might have been a catafalque for the dead. I wondered how many men had ended their days in this bed since these hangings had been put up. Would Van Hoeck's presentiment be fulfilled? Should I be found there in the morning dead?

It was well suited for a murder, that bed, with its pall-like hangings to conceal the lurking murderer.

Tic-tac, tic-tac, tic-tac, tic-tac, tic-tac.

My ear had become so familiar to the brisk movement of my watch that the slightest sound was audible above it. And a sound slight indeed I heard.

To my mind, dwelling then upon assassins, it sounded like the drawing of a dagger from its sheath.

Turning my head toward the side from which the sound seemed to proceed, I fancied I saw the heavy curtain move; it was between me and the lamp. The movement was as slight as the sound. If it was a fact that I heard one, it was a fact that I saw the other.

I drew myself up gradually, and, leaning forward, I suddenly flung back the curtain with my left hand. There was no resistance to my hand; nothing could be seen beyond but the lamp burning steadily on the table, the saddle-back chair, and the dim outline of the big chimney-piece.

I got upon my knees, and pushed the curtain flat against the wall, to be sure there could by no possibility be any one concealed in the heavy folds,—to assure myself that my suspicion was utterly without foundation.

This end of the room was comparitively light, and the saddleback chair was so placed as to preclude the possibility of any one hiding beyond it.

If the curtain had indeed moved, it must have been by a hand from under the bed. It was easier to believe that I had been mistaken in seeing the slight movement than to suppose that I had over-looked a concealed thief when I looked under the bed, to satisfy Van Hoeck; so I let the curtain fall, and lay down again.

My thoughts still dwelt upon the idea of assassination. Setting aside the idea of an intrigue in which Lola was concerned, there was yet nothing prosperous in Van Hoeck's presentiment. There was eight or ten servants in the house, and undoubtedly ever one of them knew of the marvelous treasure in my keeping. They would tell their friends in the adjacent village, the keepers, the tradespeople,—in a few days the story would be carried about and made known to hundreds; and was there none amongst them whose cupidity might take practical form? It was quite possible that under this very roof there was one with the ingenuity and daring to plan and execute the robbery. A servant intimately acquainted with the arrangement of the rooms and the peculiarities of the building, would probably know of the external means of communication between the bay and oriel windows. Without this knowledge, no one, it seemed to me, would dare to attempt that hazardous passage at night and in the dark; but with that knowledge, and possibly some previous practice, the feat was sufficiently practicable. In that case, Edith might actually have heard and seen what she had since attributed to imagination.

But what end could be served by these repeated attacks upon her sensibility?

A cause is sometimes discovered by examining the effect. Now, what effect had been produced by these attacks? The first had frightened Edith excessively; the second had made a slighter impression,—thus far the effect had been confined to her; but the third—for only to a third fright could I attribute her scream of terror—had brought her father and myself from our rooms. Instantly, something like the truth flashed upon my mind.

To bring me from my room was the very object with which the attack upon Edith had been made.

Unriddling the mystery with this key, I assumed that the thief had watched me close the door upon Van Hoeck and return to my room; that, after allowing me sufficient time to get into bed, but not to fall into sound sleep, he had made the attack upon Edith, opening her door beforehand to provide a speedy means of escape, and to allow her cry to be more distinctly heard; that, having succeeded in terrifying her, he had sped down the stairs in the left block, passed through the library and dining-room, and ascended by the stairs in the right block about the same time that I might be supposed to have reached Edith's room, and that, reckoning upon my keeping the Great Hesper under my pillow, and leaving it there in my alarm upon Edith's account, he had expected to have possessed himself of our treasure. If what I thus assumed was the fact, then indeed this plan might have succeeded but for Van Hoeck's prudent insistance upon my strapping the diamond to my wrist.

As I thus explained what had happened, a more startling reflection occurred to my mind. The thief had been disapointed in not finding the diamond beneath my pillow, but he yet might not have relinquished the hope of getting it.

He might not have left the room. He might be hidden there at that very moment!

What was more easy, being in the room, than to conceal himself in it? The curtain that moved the oriel, the great chest, the settle, the press, were all suggestive of that course. The fellow might be under the very bed I was lying upon.

The movement I had seen in the curtain, the sound similar to the drawing of a blade from its sheath—which might well be caused by the movement of the heavy valance of the bed, strengthened the suspicion. Was he lying there waiting for the sound of my heavy breathing to assure him that I slept?

There was scarcely the necessity to wait for that; for what resistance could I, lying upon my back there, make against a foe springing out of the dark upon me?

I thought of the clasp-knife Van Hoeck had given me, and, stretching out my hand, I felt for it where I had stuck it,—between the mattress and the bedstead. I could not find it.

Pushing the curtain so that the light from the lamp fell upon the edge of the bedstead, I assured myself that it was not where I had left it. It must have slipped through—or been drawn out.

The latter supposition explained the sound and movement I had heard and seen. Yet it might have made that sound in slipping through,—its fall upon the floor deadened by the carpet, or its point sticking in the boards; but I fancied the horn handle was too wide to allow of its slipping through.

To satisfy myself at once upon this point, I leaped out of bed, resolved to strike a match and look under the valance. I stood for a moment stupefied; the box of vestas was gone from the table, where I was certain I had laid them.

They must have been taken whilst I lay screened by the bed curtains.

I glanced over my shoulder.

The folds of the curtain against the bed were not the same as when I pushed them back to the wall; one fold stood out at an angle; and as, slowly turning around, I looked more closely, I saw against the dark oak panel of the wall about the mid-height of a man, and protruding but an inch or so from the edge of the curtain, the bright point of a knife blade.

Now, indeed, there was no longer any doubt. The man who had come to rob was there to murder me. Had I stopped but another moment on the bed, he might have knifed me.

What was I to do? I had him, standing there behind the curtain, at a certain advantage.

Should I spring upon him and strangle him against the wall in the folds of the curtain?

It was not a sure victory for me, and a partial one might, in the end, be fatal. The thick stuff would prevent my getting a firm grip of him, and his right hand, the one that held the knife, was free. My chance was too small, the danger too great, to justify that attack, though the muscles of my arms and fingers were strung up to make the tempting effort.

Keeping my eye upon the curtain, I drew back to the foot of the bed. To get to the door, I must cross the room, and inevitably be seen by the murderous rascal as he stood there on the inner side of the bed curtain; and, arrived at the door, I must turn the key twice, and the handle as well, before he overtook me. On the other hand, to disengage himself from the folds of the curtain, and recover the start I had of him.

The chances were pretty equal, and I determined to save myself by flight rather than risk the fatal result of the unequal encounter.

I made my way noiselessly, in a straight line down the room, until I got opposite the door; then I made a rush for it, across the open space. I got to the door, and, with furious haste, groped about for the key. It was gone!

I grasped the handle, in the hope that I might be able to tear the lock off; the screw had been taken out, and the knob slid off the spindle in my hand. I was lost.

It astonishes me, now, to think with what celerity and adroitness these precautions against my escape had been made.

The man had not rushed after me; there was no desperate pursuit of that kind; he knew I was trapped. Only, as I turned my eyes back to the place where he stood, I perceived that the light was dying out.

There was but a narrow rim of blue flame above the wick; it faded away, and all was dark.

There are degrees of darkness; this seemed to me the last degree. I felt as if I was sunk in a lake of pitch.

If I called for help, it was not certain that the heavy-sleeping Judge would hear me. Possibly Sir Edmund was yet awake, but I thought of Edith; and besides, I knew that before assistance could come, before the door could be burst, all would be over.

Probably my foe was already approaching me; my cry would be the signal for him to spring upon me.

No; my only chance of escape was in maintaining silence, and keeping him in ignorance of my position. If accident brought us into contact, I trusted to my physical strength and good luck to be a match for him and his knife in the subsequent struggle. The diamond, buckled to my wrist, might serve me in the fight; I might stun the fellow with it, if fortune only favored my arm.

It was a duel between us, and, anyway, I would sell my life dearly.

With this resolve, I drew away from the door toward that part of the room where, as I fancied, the carved press stood. I kept my arms free, my body crouched together, and every muscle tense and ready.

I backed a few feet from the door, and then I stopped, as the reflection crossed my mind that I might be backing toward my adversary! Then I regretted that I had left the door, where at least I might have stood safe from a rear attack.

I could hear nothing but the throbbing of the blood in my temples and the quick tic-tac, tic tac, tic-tac, tic-tac, tic-tac of my watch behind me, yet I knew that the murderer must be moving.

He had his work to do, and must have made up his mind how to do it before putting out the light. I could see nothing, and the silence and darkness were horrible, with the possibility of falling upon me from behind. Yet, how was I to guard against that attack, not knowing where he was? Possibly his visual power was stronger than mine.

I knew by the ticking of my watch that the bed was somewhere behind me, and that I ought to be facing the oriel; and, as I strained my eyes to catch any rays of light that might exist, I fancied I detected a dim gray seam in the blackness before me,—possibly the curtain masking the oriel were slightly parted.

As I continued to stare in that direction, I became convinced that this was the fact, and, slight though the assurance was, it gave me some feeling of security; in that direction I might know of my foes approach. And, sure enough, at that very moment the gray seam was blocked out.

He was there, between me and the oriel. My first impulse was to end the terrible suspense, and spring forward upon him; but prudence checked me.

He might be close to me, or he might be close to the oriel,—it was impossible for me to tell merely by the absence of a faint light.

TO BE CONTINUED.

E PLURIBUS DUO.

Doctors Are Easily Fooled, as These Instances Clearly Show.

Doctor Brunton, in an address lately reported in the London Lancet, was cautioning his hearers—the members of a medical society against hastily expressed opinions as to the nature of patients' diseases, and emphasized his warning by two professional anecdotes. He was once present at a clinic, the subject of which was a man evidently suffering from some disease of the heart.

An unnatural murmuring sound could be heard from that organ, and the pupil of one of his eyes was very much dilated. The peculiar appearance of the eye seemed to have some connection with the cardiac affection, but various opinions were expressed by the different students as to what the precise nature of this relation could be.

The discussion was just becoming interesting when the patient remarked that his strange-looking eye was a glass one.

At another clinic the professor in charge was discoursing learnedly about the importance of attending to minor symptoms.

"Now, gentlemen," he said, "in the case of this woman here, certain things could be confidently affirmed from the condition of her teeth."

He was proceeding to particularize, but just then the patient broke in upon him.

"Please, sir," she said, as she took out her teeth, "I will hand them round; the young gentlemen might like to look at them closer."

LETTER WRITING.

A Variation in the Form of Business and Social Notes.

It is preferable, or at least permissible in social "notes" to make a slight difference in the form with a business communication. If you are writing to your lawyer on business, put address and date distinctly at the upper right hand of the page; if you are writing to him to thank him for a basket of flowers or to accept an invitation to drive, omit the date and put "Thursday afternoon" or "Monday" below, and at the left of your signature; and if the paper is not engraved at the top of the page, that may or may not, as you choose, go below the day.

A young woman told recently, with some surprise, that she had received a letter from a gentleman who was managing an investment for her, inclosing some papers and briefly explaining them. By the same mail, under another and very different cover, but of the same date of writing, came a cordial note welcoming her back from her just finished European trip, and announcing his intention of paying his respects in person very shortly, etc. "He is an elderly gentleman of the old school," she further explained, "and delightfully formal in his courtesy."

Such formality is by no means confined to old-school disciples, and such courtesy, it may be added, never offends, even where it surprises.—Exchange.

The Insurance-Man and Chinaman.

A well-known insurance-man walked into a Chinese laundry on Fulton Street the other day and after looking at two Mongolians in the shop addressed the elder of the two.

"Say, John, I'm an insurance man come to look over your house."

"Um?"

"Me insurance, want lookee over house."

"Um?"

"Oh, you know very well what I mean. I'm an insurance man and I want to look over your place to see that it is properly protected against fire."

"Um?"

"I want to go through your place for the insurance company."

"Me no tell."

"Say, don't you understand English?"

"Don't know."

"Don't know?"

"No."

"Me topside up down housee go through all same Hong Kong insulance. Do you understand that?"

"Don't know."

"Don't know, blank you?"

"No."

"Me Melican man, suppose fire burn Chinaman, give money, insulance, see? So we come here to go topside up tlough laundry look and see no fire burn, you no let me go tlough me no gives de money."

"Don't know."

This continued for fifteen minutes and the insurance man worked himself into a frenzy of excitement and talked pigeon English like a Canton merchant. Suddenly he was startled by hearing a voice behind him say.

"What do you want, anyway?"

Turning, he saw that it was the second Chinaman who had addressed him.

"You're a cuckoo!" was all the insurance man had spirit enough to say.

He went though the premises, and as he was going out the Chinaman who didn't understand English asked him:

"Well, how did you come out?"

"You're a cute Chinaman," said the insurance man.

"Me cute enough," said the Celestial, his features expanding into a broad grin.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Clergymen as Business Men.

Says Rev. Dr. Wilson, of St. Louis, in the Globe-Democrat of that city: "The failure in business of a prominent clergyman suggests the fact that very few preachers ever succeed in making money. When they do the religion generally oozes out as the dollars come in, and they end up by giving up ministerial work altogether. Prearchers, particularly Methodist preachers, are almost always poor, and the next to them in the point of poverty are the Baptists. The majority of Methodist preachers in this country receive less than $600 a year, while the constant demands for charity greatly diminish their incomes. Presbyterian clergy are better paid, while the Church of England ministers, both here and in Great Britain, fairly roll in wealth by comparison. The English Bishops have princely incomes, the lowest being $10,000 a year and the use of a mansion connected with the cathedral. The Archbishop of York, who is "Primate of England," has $50,000 a year, and the Archbishop of Canterbury, who is "Primate of all England," receives $75,000 and has two magnificen palaces, Methodist Bishops are poorly paid. Those of the Methodist Church South have $3,600 salary, while those of the Church North have a little more, but salaries. Bishop Warren, of the Church North, is rich, having married the widow of a ranchman in Denver. But Bishop Hendrix, of the Methodist Church South, enjoys the distinction of being the richest Bishop in America, having inherited a fortune, which, by careful management, he has increased until he has the reputation of being especially liberal, benevolent and rich. To schools and colleges he is especially liberal, and Central College, in this State, owes its present prosperity to his generosity. All the other Southern Methodist Bishops are poor."

Horse-Meat Tastes Like Hare.

Physically, horse meat, a writer in the Nineteenth Century says, may be distinguished from beef or mutton by its appearance. It is coarser in the grain than beef. In this respect it resembles bull beef more than any other. It is darker in color, and looks more moist than beef. It has a peculiar smell and a peculiar sweetness of taste. Its flavor is generally considered to be half way between the flavors of beef and game. It is something like the flavor of hare. One reason why horseflesh is, as a rule, darker in color than beef, is that horses which are pole-axed, or which have died from injury, disease or old age, are not properly dressed and bled by the slaughter. It is by the fat that horse flesh is most easily distinguished. The fat of horse flesh is not generally mixed with the lean. It is yellow in color. It looks more moist than the fat of beef. It is rancid. Consequently, unless a rapid sale is effected or the fat removed, an advanced price must be charged in order to secure the butcher from loss on unsold meat.

Lastly, horse flesh can be distinguished from beef by its chemical characteristics, and it is in this way that it may be recognized when mixed with other substances. Who can tell except the chemist what are the component parts of a sausage, polony or saveloy? Or who can tell by taste what these parts are? We do not judge by taste, we judge by flavor, and in this way the making of flavor—to give Sam Weller's phrase—"It's the seasoning as does it."

Pure and Wholesome Quality

Commends to public approval the California liquid laxative remedy, Syrup of Figs. It is pleasant to the taste and by acting gently on the kidneys, liver and bowels to cleanse the system effectually, it promotes the health and comfort of all who use it, and with millions it is the best and only remedy.

Speaking of the coal business, let us keep cool. It is quite easy and much cheaper.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

Boils! Pimples! Blotches,

AND ERUPTIONS ON THE BODY, are indications of Poison in the Blood, and show that nature is making efforts to throw it out. S. S. S. will assist in this good work. It changes the character of the blood, so that the poison bearing germs speedily leave through the pores of the skin, and the poison is also forced out.

C. W. HODKINS, Postmaster at East Lamoine, Me., writes that Mrs. Kelly's son, who had been confined to bed fourteen months with an Abscess, has been cured sound and well by Swift's Specific. The boy is fourteen years old, lives next door to me, and I know the statement to be true.

THE NEWS SUMMARY

The Latest News of the World Condensed and Arranged in Convenient Form.

Washington, Personal, Foreign, Criminal, Casualty and Other Important News.

THE CAPITAL.

CANADIAN sealers expect to evade the Bering sea agreement by sending out their vessels under the flags of other nations.

SECRETARY ELKINS would have the regular army increased to 50,000 men and have a large military post in every state.

THE revenue cutter Rush has been ordered to Port Townsend to await further orders, the sealing instructions, before proceeding to Bering sea.

THE annual fortifications appropriation bill has been practically agreed upon by the fortification sub-committee of the house committee on appropriations. A cut amounting to more than 35 cents has been made from the bill of last year.

THE First Assistant Postmaster-General Whitman, of the committee appointed by Gen. Wanamaker to investigate the postal needs of the city of Chicago with reference to the World's Fair, has returned to Washington. The committee has not yet formulated its report, but it has been decided to ask congress for an appropriation sufficient to meet the increasing service which will be incident to the fair, according to the plan to be adopted and submitted to the commission.

PERSONAL.

Gen. Edwin P. Goodrich, who served on the staff of Gen. Burnside during the war, died in Boston.

Maj. Gen. Sir Lewis Polly, Conservative member of parliament for North Hackney, is dead. He was once minister of Afghanistan affairs.

Nat Goodwin, the actor, and his wife have substantially agreed to articles of separation, and Mrs. Goodwin will secure a divorce.

Joshua Belden, a California pioneer, is dead in New York at the age of seventy-seven years. May 10, 1811, Mr. Belden and companions went to California, arriving there two years before Gen. Fremont reached that country.

CASUALTIES.

A FIRE in Philadelphia causes a loss of about $1,000,000. Fifty persons are hurt in a panic that results.

A RAILWAY accident occurred at Bathurst, N. S. W., by which a passenger train was wrecked. Nine persons were killed and twelve injured.

BERT KELLOGG, sixteen years old, was drowned in the Missoula river near Missoula, Mont. He waded out to get a duck he had shot when the current carried him into deep water and he sank.

A COLLISION of a passenger train and switch engine on the Milwaukee, Lake Shore & Western railroad at Ramsey, Mich., resulted in the death of Fireman Patrick Fowler. Several passengers had narrow escapes.

THE break on the Illinois Central from unprecedented high water at Chattawa, Miss., near the Louisiana state line, is reported thoroughly closed and repaired. Through trains are now running on time.

THE body of the last of the men imprisoned in the Lytle colliery at Pottsville, Pa., was found and brought to the surface. It was that of one of the Italians and was lying at the furthermost point of the gangway where he and his brothers were working when the flood came.

THE WICKED WORLD.

AN unsuccessful attempt was made at Quincy, Ill., to lynch Dr. W. J. Jamison, the murderer of Charles Aaron.

AN India ex-soldier and former pupil at the Carlisle school lapses to barbarism and is arrested at the Rosebud agency for various offenses.

STEPHEN HITE was sentenced to hang on June 3, at Louisville, Ky., for the murder of Albert Bauerman, on Sept, 20, 1861. His defense was insanity.

THE collector of customs at Port Townsend, Wash., has seized the steamer, Michigan, which plies along the coast. Five thousand dollars' worth of contraband opium on the vessel has been seized.

ROBERT MILLS of Kan., fatally injured his wife with a hatchet. The wife accuses him of criminal intimacy with his eleven-year-old stepdaughter, and the latter corroborates her mother's story.

MRS. WALDEN, who has been for several days on trial in New York for killing her husband, James Walden, the horse trainer, has been convicted of murder in the second degree.

IN Cambridgeport, Mass, Wm. E. Cunningham, a harnessmaker who lived in Boston, shot Miss Maggie Williams a domestic, and then shot himself twice. Jealousy was the cause. The Williams girl is dead and Cunningham will die.

FOREIGN.

THE St. Petersburg newspapers announce that the prohibition of the export of corn will be maintained until Sept, 1.

EMPEROR WILLIAM has persuaded the dissatisfied Gen. Von Kaltenborn Stachau, war minister in the Prussian cabinet, to retain his portfolio.

A GERMAN spy named Schurieder has been arrested in Paris. He had in his possession a quantity of documents which were seized.

THE Jebus, acting in concert with the Egbas, have broken the treaty, and their combined forces threaten to attack Lagos and the British settlement on the West African gold coast.

A COMMITTEE has been formed in Hamburg, Germany, to send out an antarctic expedition by way of Cape Horn, to start in July under the command of the zoologist Michaelsen.

THE governor of Simla, India, announces that a number of high civil posts, including the positions of judges and the government under secretaryships, will henceforth be opened to natives.

CONFIRMATION has been received of the defeat by the Brazilian government troops of revolters under Col. Barbosa. As soon as the fight began there were many deserters from Barbosa's ranks.

RUMORS of impending revolution in Hayti are again rife. President Hippolyte is said to be fully aware of the threatening state of affairs and firmly determined to meet and stamp out the first sparks of rebellion that show themselves.

THE Brazilian government has sent dispatches to Brazilian ministers abroad denying the truth of the rumors of the separation of the states of Sao Paolo and Rio Grande Do Sul from the federal government.

AN important deal is being put through looking towards the amalgamation of the big live stock shippers of Montreal to control the trade of the dominion. The idea is to combine and be able to make rates with steamship companies the same as is done in the United States.

POLITICAL ECHOES.

CHAIRMAN CLARKSON of the Republican national committee is too ill to consider political matters.

BLAINE and Harrison are praised by Republicans of Maine, but the delegates to the national convention go uninstructed.

COLORADO Republicans adopt a free coinage plank and defeat a resolution endorsing President Harrison's administration.

INSTRUCTIONS for Harrison are omitted from the Ohio Republican platform in deference to Gov. McKinley's contingent candidacy.

THE RAILROADS.

THE Canadian Pacific-Soo combination is being downed in its conflict with the Western railways.

THE Union Pacific election is held in Boston. Jay Gould, with his Missouri Pacific officers, remain in control. W. H. S. Clarke is elected president.

THE United States Rolling Stock company, so known for twenty years, was reorganized under the name of the United States Car company. David Cornfoot of London is president.

THE latest march stolen by the Big Four route on its competitors for business between Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Chicago consists in the establishment of a World's Fair station at Jackson Park, directly at the gate leading into the Exposition grounds. The Big Four has the credit of being the first railroad to officially announce a World's Fair station and show it in the time cards.

THE TOILERS.

THE first annual convention of the National Brotherhood of Boiler Makers is in session in Indianapolis.

THE report that a strike on the Reading railroad system was imminent is denied by both employes and railroad officials.

Two hundred and fifty saw mill employes strike at La Crosse. They claim to have been blacklisted because they belong to unions or the Knights of Labor.

A NATIONAL convention of shirt makers, shirt cutters and laundry workers, the first of its kind in this country, was held in New York. A national association was formed. It will be called the National Shirt Trade association. The first convention of this new association will be held in Philadelphia on Sept. 4.

SPORTING MATTERS.

THE police of Easton, Pa., forbid bicycle riding on Sunday.

JEM MACE is coming over again. American coin is probably the attraction.

THE trap shooters of the country are going to erect a monument in memory of the late Al Bandle.

ARTHUR J. MELLEY of Cambridge, Mass., champion feather-weight of New England, has turned professional.

THE Irish horse Tasmania in London broke the English jumping record by clearing an obstruction six feet in height.

SID THOMAS broke the amateur fifteen mile running record at Stamford Bridge, Eng., April 9, covering the distance in 1 hour, 22 minutes and 15 4-5 seconds.

JACK WILKES of St. Louis, a welter-weight has issued a challenge to Tommy Ryan to fight to a finish for $500 a side and a $1,200 purse offered by the South Omaha Athletic club.

AT the bicyclist meeting at Brighton, England, Monday, Fowler, an English rider in a half-mile scratch race, beat Arthur A. Zimmerman, of the New York Atheletic club, nine yards.

PATSY CARDIFF of Minneapolis and Billy Keough of Canada fought to a finish before the Pastine club at Portland. Ore., for a purse of $800. Keough won the fight in thirteen rounds.

A TEAM of female base ball players, known as Miss Lillie Arlington's Cincinnati Reds, were to have played against a local male team at College Point, L. I., but owing to the opposition of the women of the village Police Captain Marters prevented the exhibition.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A government agent is now in New York procuring evidence against the cordage combine.

Gen. Grant's body will not be removed to Washington, but remain in Riverside Park, New York.

Joseph Bertrand, a half-breed Indian of the Pottawatomies died, at South Bend, Ind., at the age of 110 years.

The twenty-first annual meeting of the Woman's Presbyterian Board of Missions of the Northwest is held in St. Paul.

During the past week 10,240 immigrants were landed at New York. This is the largest number landed in any one week this year.

The plant of the Keokuk (Iowa) Electric Street railway Power company has been sold to S. B. Townsend of Hartford, Conn., for $21,000.

The corner stone of the Grant monument is laid in New York with imposing ceremonies, President Harrison, Chauncey M. Depew and others speak.

R. G. Guntill a prominent glass manufacturer of Anderson, Ind., claims to have discovered the lost art of casting glass tubes, which is known to have been practiced by the Egyptians.

John Savage, an inmate of the Scott county (Ill.) poor house has fallen heir to an English estate valued at over $5,000,000. Savage is over seventy years of age and has a large family.

George, and Henry Kelly of Salem, Ohio, assert heirship to property in the Lehigh coal region, now operated by the Lehigh Coal and Navigation company, and valued at over $40,000,000.

Coates & Co's. tin plate mill in Baltimore began the manufacture of tin plate, employing 250 men. The output will be from 1,500 to 1,800 boxes a week, or an average of 110 pounds each.

John Good, the millionaire cordage manufacturer of New York, has broken his contract with the National Cordage company. Mr. Good said, "I am not a member of the National company, but have been receiving $200,000 yearly to keep my mills shut down. I have notified the company that I consider the contract no longer binding upon me. I am in a position to make a profit at prices which would not pay the cost of production to the National company."

This is essentially an age of advancement and perhaps in no direction have greater advances been made than in medical science. Diseases that until recently were pronounced by the highest medical authority to be incurable, are now found to yield readily to the discoveries of modern medical skill. This statement is amply borne out by the article appearing elsewhere in this issue under the heading of "The Saratoga Miracle" and would seem to indicate that one of the most perfect medical preparations of modern times is embodied in the remedy known as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People.

FOR FREE TWINE.

The Bill Putting Binding Twine on the Free List Passes the House.

Civil Service Commissioner Roosevelt Expresses Himself Forcibly.

WASHINGTON, Special, May 3.—On motion of Bryan of Nebraska, and with but little debate, the house to-day took up and passed, under suspension of the rules, the free binding twine bill, the vote being 183 to 47. Two Democrats—Coburn of Wisconsin and Covert of New York—voted against the bill, and three Republicans—Broderick of Kansas and Pickler and Jolley of South Dakota—voted for it.

It is understood that had Lind of Minnesota been present, he might have cast his vote in the affirmative. Pickler and Jolley did not care to take chances on voting against the bill for the effect it might have on their constituents. It was rather odd that it should be called up on suspension day and railroaded through, when, as a matter of fact, it was a subject which should have been thoroughly debated. If it had been explained it might have been shown that the bill was really unnecessary at this time. Reference was made in the debate by Payne of New York to the attempt to make binding twine in the Minnesota penitentiary, and Covert of New York also referred to the attempt of Senator Davis to secure free binding twine, and told how the concessions made by the house to the senate on that point in the last tariff bill had proven satisfactory to the Northwestern farmers.

STANDS BY HIS COLORS.

Mr. Roosevelt Insists that the Civil Service Law Should Be Enforced.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The house committee on civil service reform to-day resumed the investigation into the conduct of certain employes in the civil service in Baltimore. Secretary Foster was the first witness. He had heard of the charges made by Commissioner Roosevelt against two men connected with the customs service in Baltimore of collecting money for political purposes. They had been reprimanded by the commissioner, and he was inclined to think this punishment sufficient. He finally said he should very much doubt it it was consistent with the good of the public service to keep such men in office, but he should want to know all the acts in the case before taking action. Commissioner Roosevelt was next examined. He said he had made an examination of the workings of the Baltimore postoffice and custom house and recommended the removal of twenty-one employes for violation of the civil service law, but no action had been taken. It was absolutely impossible to upset his conclusions, for they were based on the confessions of the accused persons made at the very time the events took place. Mr. Roosevelt quoted from the testimony of Mr. Wanamaker when in speaking of the accused men he said:

> When they declare to the postoffice inspectors that they have not made such statements, and they do that under oaths you are bound to take their statements.

"It seems to me," said Mr. Roosevelt, "that if in a private business of large size an investigation into one of its branches should disclose that twenty-one men were cheating, the men being caught red-handed and confessing, it would be very unwise to accept the oaths of these same men six months later that they were incorrect and they had lied when they made their confessions. I honestly fail to see how there can be a particle of question as to these men's guilt, after reading the evidence; and if these men are not guilty then it is absolutely impossible that men ever can be guilty under the civil service law; and if they have not deserved punishment then it is impossible that men can do anything in violation of that law which will deserve punishment. This is not the time to consider whether the law is or is not wise. It is on the statute book, and I am appointed to see that it is enforced; and I have simply done my plain duty in pointing out its violation and in recommending the punishment of the wrongdoers."

Chairman Andrew, of the house committee on reform in the civil service, has received a letter from Kentucky stating that in the second district of that state most flagrant abuse of the law existed. Indictments were found in the United States court of the violation of the civil service law by the deputy collector of internal revenue, a United States storekeeper, two gangers and a temporary storekeeper, the letter says, and notwithstanding the indictments, the persons have been retained in the service and some of them promoted. The letter charges that persons who testified before the grand jury have been dismissed from the service.

KEEPING OUT CHINAMEN.

The Conference Committees Agree Upon a Bill Which Will Pass.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The conferees on the Chinese exclusion bill have reached an agreement on the basis of the bill as it passed the senate, but with certain important additions that were insisted upon by the house conferees. As agreed upon the bill is practically a re-enactment for ten years of the existing law with the following additional provisions: No Chinese person is to be released on bail pending action on a writ of habeas corpus. All Chinese laborers now in the United States are to be compelled to obtain registration certificates, and all persons other than laborers may apply for such certificates, for which no charge is to be made. This feature of the law is to be carried out under the direction of the internal revenue bureau of the treasury department. The forging of certificates will be punishable by imprisonment for five years. All Chinese persons who attempt to come into the country unlawfully are to be imprisoned for one year and then returned to China. This latter provision is much stronger than that on the same subject in the bill as it passed the senate. The senate bill provided for imprisonment for six months on the second attempt to come into this country, after which the prisoners were to be remanded. It is expected that the report will be adopted by both the senate and house to-morrow, and that the bill will go to the president for his signature to-morrow night.

Illinois Republicans.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 3.—Delegates are already beginning to arrive for the Republican convention next Wednesday. Gov. Fifer's renomination is conceded. It is probable that Senator Cullom will head the delegation to Minneapolis, which will no doubt be instructed for Harrison. There will, however, be opposition to instruction for any candidate, and Gov. Fifer's friends will fight Cullom. The Republicans appear to recede from the position of two years ago, and the platform may demand the repeal of the compulsory educational law.

CONGRESS.

Proceedings of the House and Senate.

MONDAY, APRIL 25.

SENATE.

Senator McPherson introduced a proposed amendment to the naval appropriation bill authorizing the construction of three double turret iron or steel harbor defense vessels of the monitor type of at least 7,500 tons displacement and a speed of 15 knots, in place of the single cruiser proposed by the house bill. They are to carry two 13-inch rifled guns, and are to be so heavily armored as to be invulnerable to shot or shell.

HOUSE.

The pending questions, when the house met this morning, was the motion made by Mr. Reed, of Maine, Saturday last, to lay on the table the resolution expunging from the record such portions of the speech of Mr. Walker, of Massachusetts, which were not uttered on the floor and which reflected on his colleagues, Messrs. Williams and Hoar. After considerable parliamentary parleying the house adjourned.

If a bill introduced in the house by Mr. Clark, of Wyoming becomes a law, the right of franchise will be extended to every woman in the country over 31 years of age, to vote for representatives in congress.

TUESDAY, APRIL 26.

SENATE.

After some routine morning business Mr. Coke addressed the senate in favor of the free coinage of silver, basing his remarks on Mr. Morgan's resolution on that subject.

Mr. Daniel spoke on the same subject and on the same side of the question. At the close of Mr. Daniel's speech, the army appropriation bill was taken up. A long debate ensued but no action was taken.

On request of Mr. Morgan the communication was ordered printed and laid on the table for the present.

HOUSE.

After three private bills were passed, the regular order was demanded, and the speaker stated the regular order to be the passage of the Walker expunging resolution.

Mr. Blount of Georgia, asked unanimous consent that the house go into committee of the whole for the consideration of the diplomatic and consular appropriation bills. It was agreed to. Mr. Blount explained the provisions of the measure.

After a long discussion unanimous consent was given that general debate on the bill should close after two hours' debate tomorrow.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 27.

SENATE.

After routine business in the senate the army appropriation bill was taken up, the question being on striking out the house proviso which prohibits payment for transportation of troops and supplies of the army over any of the unbounded lines, owned, controlled or operated by the Union Pacific Railway company (including the lines of the Oregon Short Line or Utah Northern Railroad company), or by the Southern Pacific Railway company in its Pacific system, or lines embraced in its Pacific system. After a long speech by Senator Morgan the house proviso was struck out; yeas, 26, nays, 20. Mr. Morgan was the only Democrat who voted with the majority, and Messrs. Peffer and Pettigrew the only Republicans who voted with the minority. The bill was then passed and the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

Representative Bland introduced a resolution in the house instructing the committee on ways and means to report a bill imposing an income tax sufficient to meet all the expenditures for pensions; and also a bill to repeal all taxes imposed upon currency issued by authority of the states.

The house went into committee of the whole on the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill.

THURSDAY, APRIL, 28.

SENATE.

The old story of government injustice to the Indians was discussed all day in the senate by Mr. Jones, of Arkansas, in connection with the suspended appropriation of nearly $3,000,000 for an area of land variously estimated at from 5,000,000 to 7,000,000 acres, taken from the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations. Mr. Jones contended that great injustice had been done by the president in holding up the appropriation, and the contrary view was taken by Messrs. Allison and Platt. Mr. Teller, of Colorado, and Mr. Perkins, of Kansas, criticised the action of the president in setting aside an appropriation passed by congress and approved by himself. Mr. Jones's resolution, which declared that there was not sufficient ground for withholding the appropriation, was still unacted on when the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

Mr. Otis, of Kansas, introduced in the house a bill to repeal an act to set apart certain tracts of land in California as forest reservations, approved Oct. 1, 1890.

The house today wasted four hours in an attempt to proceed with the diplomatic and consular bill. The reductions made by the committee in the salary of several important missions, notably that of the envoy to Venezuela was not acceptable to the Republicans nor to many Democrats, and the house found itself without a voting quorum, although three calls of the committee disclosed a quorum each time. After repeated votes by tellers with no quorum voting a call of the house was ordered and after two hours wasted in an attempt to secure a voting quorum, the house adjourned until tomorrow.

FRIDAY, APRIL 29.

SENATE.

No business was transacted in the senate to-day.

HOUSE.

Twelve representatives were tried to-day for being absent without leave and were acquitted.

Representative Bailey, of Texas has introduced in the house an amendment to the rules which directs the sergeant-at-arms to withhold at the end of each month the pay of a member until he files with the sergeant-at-arms a written statement that he has not been absent from the house during the preceding month. If a member has been absent, and such absence was not necessary on account of the sickness of himself or some member of his family—the statement to set forth the exact number of days absence—other than the above causes, the sergeant-at-arms is to deduct the salary for the days of absence. Any violation of this rule by the sergeant-at-arms shall make him liable on his bond for all payments made contrary to the provisions of section 40.

SATURDAY, APRIL 30.

SENATE.

Not in session.

HOUSE.

The proposition of the committee on foreign affairs in the diplomatic appropriation bill to consolidate all the Scandinavian ministers into one mission, was opposed by the Republicans and a Republican (Post of Illinois) offered an amendment leaving these missions the same as they have been in the past. After considerable discussion it was carried.

No Restrictions.

Bagley: "I never restrict my wife. She does exactly as she pleases."

Bailey: "And you?"

Bagley: "I do exactly as she pleases too."

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER X.—CONTINUED.

If in springing forward, I fell short of him, it would be all over with me. My force expended in the spring, he would have me at his mercy, and a short death was the only kind of mercy I had to expect. Again, what feeble light there was must fall upon me, as I faced it,—an advantage for him, a terrible peril for me.

I resolved to back toward the wall at the upper end of the room, and, guided still by the ticking of my watch, I drew back with the stealthy caution of a cat.

Suddenly I saw the gray seam of light again. Had he gone to the right or left? I knew not. Quickly I stretched my foot out behind me; I felt something, and for the instant thought I had touched the fellow; but, as turning about I groped my hand forward, I encountered the cold woodwork of the bedstead. It was one of the carved pillars. I drew myself up, and got my back against it. Now, at least, that dreaded stab in the back was less probable.

I am not a coward; yet I own that the terror of the following minutes thrills me now as I look back upon it. The impenetrable darkness, the silence, rendered only more intense by contrast with the perpetual tic-tac, tic-tac, tic-tac, tic-tac, tic-tac of the watch behind me, were made terrific by the awful uncertainty of my position.

I stood there waiting for the attack, until, the suspense growing intolerable, I felt that I must end it by shouting aloud to Brace, and precipitating the final struggle.

"I will wait five minutes longer, and no more," I said to myself, resolving to calculate the space fairly, and with due allowance for false impressions. I calculated that two minutes had passed, when I fancied I heard the bed creak behind me. Was this one of the false impressions I had promised myself to guard against? or was the sound caused by the man mounting upon the bed behind me.

The hair bristled upon my head as I thought I heard the creak repeated; yet I stood there, and counted another minute, with every nerve and fibre prepared to spring away.

"Now, surely, four minutes are up," I thought, and drew my head down into my shoulders; for, as surely as if my eyes had been turned that way, and the full light of the sun shining in the room, I knew that the man was behind me upon the bed.

I drew a deep inspiration, resolved to shout my loudest to Brace; but before the sound had passed my lips a towl was drawn tight upon my face and my head jerked back against the post behind me. A fold of the towl gagged me completely; it was with difficulty I breathed. I struggled, but in vain, to wrench myself away; a quick and sure hand had knotted the towel. I threw up my hands to tear the thing off; in an instant they were enveloped in the thick curtains, and though the fellow had not sufficient strength to tie them down to my side, he at least baffled my attempts to free my head. I threw my feet from the ground, hoping that my weight would drag my head from the towel; I only succeeded in drawing the knots tighter, and half strangling myself.

As I could not release my head, I got my arms down, and tried to sieze the rascal's feet; but he kept them beyond my reach; yet I got something by the attempt, for, in groping about, I laid my hand upon the knife, which he had thrust in the bed, to have free use of his hands, the better to overcome the resistance of my arms. I should have had no hesitation in ham-stringing the rascal if I could have got at his legs; but as I could not do that, I determined, if possible, to keep the knife out of his way.

I felt, by the horn handle, that it was the one Van Hoeck had given me; and, knowing the trick of the blade, I shut it up, and slipped it into my pocket.

"Now," thought I, "if only thews and sinews are concerned, we will see who can get the best of it."

And, with redoubled efforts, I struggled to tear down the bed-curtains that hampered my movements; and, maddened by the difficulty of respiration, I threw such force into my efforts that the pole upon which they hung crunched under the rings, and finally came rattling down about us. Would that the lamp had been near, to be smashed by the falll The noise was too slight to be heard at a distance.

My left hand being free, I felt again for the knot of the towel that bound me to the post. A bony hand grasped my wrist, and dragged it over my shoulder, and the next moment I felt something pressed under my nose, and liquid trickling through my moustache onto my lips. It had a sweet taste, and a strong smell of apples, that mounted at once to my brain. I seemed to be no longer touching the ground, but whirling round and round through space; my arms dropped by my side.

I knew that I was powerless, yet I retained a certain kind of consciousness. I was sensible that the difficulty of breathing no longer troubled me. I knew that the man was binding my arms to the post, and I remember thinking in the bemused manner of a half-intoxicated person, what a fool he must be to bind me when I could no longer make resistance. I was perfectly conscious when he began to tie my feet to the post below, for I had then sufficiently overcome the effect of the opiate to think of resistance. I tried to struggle and to scream, but to no purpose: my will had lost all power over my muscle. And this terrible impotency reminded me of Van Hoeck's half-uttered simile: "Cramped in a coffin, and the clods falling—falling!"

What astonished me was the surprising facility with which the man executed his work in the darkness that then prevailed. He seemed to have no difficulty at all in finding the ends of the sheets with which he bound me, and knotting them securely. And when I was safely pinioned, he unbuckled the strap that bound the Great Hesper to my wrist, without having to seek for the tongue of the strap, as I myself might have to do.

"Well, that's gone I said to myself; "and, now he has the diamond, he will go too."

But he had not yet finished. And, after a brief interval, during which he might have been buckling the Great Hesper upon his own wrist, I heard a sound that I knew only too well.

Click!

It was the spring that locked the long blade of my clasp-knife when it was opened.

CHAPTER XI.

That sound warned me that the end was near. Not content with taking the diamond, the scoundrel intended to have my life,—to remove the possibility, if possibility existed, of being identified as the thief by me.

He set about his work with devilish circumspection. I heard the metal rings clink as he took up the fallen curtain from the floor, and folded it, and the bed creak as he got upon it. As he approached from behind, he steadied himself by setting one hand upon my shoulder. Then he laid the folded curtain over my other shoulder, and his bony knuckles touched my chest as he arranged the stuff over my breast I knew what that meant; it was to prevent the betraying blood from spurting upon his arm.

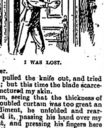
In the pause that followed, I fancied he must be turning up his sleeve, as a butcher does who has a beast to slaughter.

A thousand thoughts whirled through my mind in that brief space; but a great awe came upon me as I felt his hand firmly grasp my left shoulder, for then I realized that I was on the very brink of eternity.

A feeling of regret for the ill use I had made of many days,—for the loss of Edith, and the world which she had filled with joy and hope; a deep and tender wish for her happiness, and the welfare of the companions who had toiled with me to win the Hesper, took the place of terror, and it was with something like resignation that I awaited death.

As he grasped my left shoulder, I felt him lean over my right, and the next moment he stabbed me.

He had not used sufficient force, for the knife point stuck in one of the ribs under my left breast, and went no farther.



I WAS LOST.

He pulled the knife out, and tried again; but this time the blade scarcely punctured my skin.

Then, seeing that the thickness of the doubled curtain was too great an impediment, he unfolded and rearranged it, passing his hand over my breast, and pressing his fingers here and there to ascertain whether he had got it right for his purpose. It was then that, my nature revolting against this barbarous refinement of cruelty, I prayed, like Samson, for strength; and made one more effort to break my bonds.

The twisted sheets and firm knots withstood the strain; but the effort saved my life. The calculating villian knew that I must exhaust my strength in a few minutes, and would not risk breaking his knife or getting smeared with my blood as I writhed.

And presently my force gave out, and, all hope leaving me, I ceased to struggle, and was callous to his touch, when he once more touched my shoulder.

But in that moment of dread silence, when his knife must have been raised to strike the final blow, the door handle turned, and I felt his grasp relax,—nay, his fingers tremble, as they lay on my shoulder.

There was an interval of a minute, and the door handle turned again; then a voice, that I recognized as Lola's spoke in a low tone outside.

"Are you there,—you?" A moment's pause and she added,—"You ain't sick, are you?"

She had come to my door and heard me writhing against the post.

What would the rascal do now? his hand still trembled. It gave me courage, for it showed that he feared discovery, and I knew he would not risk his own neck for the mere pleasure of killing me. I put out my strength again, making the bed-post snap under my strain.

"Shall I sing out?" Lola asked, a little louder, and with an accent of alarm.

The hand slipped from my shoulder and down my arm, as the villain stepped from the bed. His position was getting more perilous. If Lola "sang out," there would be little chance of his making off with the diamond.

I had loosened the towel that bound my head and gagged me. I wriggled about furiously, worked the fold out of my mouth, and got my chin above it, breathing freely for the first time since I had been tied up. At the same moment I heard the key turn in the door, and I knew that the murderer intended to let Lola in and silence her.

"Take care, take care!" I shouted, as loudly as the towel that covered my face would permit.

Another wriggle, and I felt that the upper part of my face was uncovered. Moreover, I distinguished a long gray patch before me. The curtain of the oriel had been drawn back; the light had sensibly increased during the time occupied by the events I have narrated.

I almost fancied I saw the silhoutte of a man's figure against the grayness. It moved, and I was sure that my eyes were not deceived; it disappeared, and almost immediately afterward I heard a fall upon the terrace below. The man had dropped down a distance of fifteen feet from the window,—a drop of not more than six feet for an ordinary man hanging from the ledge.

The feeling of relief, combined with exhaustion caused by my frantic efforts, was too much for me. I was giddy and sick, my eyes closed, the sweat stood cold upon my face, every muscle gave away and quivered, only the bonds upon my body kept me from falling.

"Y'aint hurt, are you, dear?" were the first words I heard. It was Lola's voice, very gentle and tremulous.

"No; you have saved me," said I.

She gave a little moan of delight, and her hands, which had been busily tugging at the knots stopped in their work.

She threw her arms about my neck, and, pressing her face against my breast, sobbed.

CHAPTER XII.

Brace's door was unlocked. He to all appearance was sound asleep with his face to the wall. I shook him, and, as he turned over, I said:

"Get up; the Hesper is lost."

"Lost! as how?" he asked, sitting up.

"Stolen,—taken from me."

"Where's Israel?"

I told him of Van Hoeck's terrible presentiment, and the circumstances under which he had left the house.

"We will find him, pardner," said the Judge, in his slow, sententious manner, which was queerly at variance with his speed in hurrying into his clothes. "We will find him, and see if his presentiments will go so far as to explain what's become of the diamond. Let up what has happened, pardner. Reel it off. I am all awake."

I narrated briefly the events of the night, while he completed dressing. Lola, standing by the window, listened in silence. There was just enough light to reveal the mischievous exultation that sparkled in her eyes.

"Here's a Vigilance Committee job, if ever there was one," said the Judge, hastily lacing his boot. "I ain't lighted on anything so much like Californey since the good old days. Now, sir, if you air ready, we'll hunt up Israel, the prophet. He's got to tell us something more about this than we know on."

It was striking five when we quitted the house. The judge left me to look about the garden and its vicinity for Van Hoeck; he himself struck out for the wood, taking Lola with him. The girl would have stayed with me, but her father had her hand in his, and there was no getting away from that grip.

After exploring the garden, I took the path that led to the lodge, as being the one that Van Hoeck frequently walked in when alone. The lodge-keeper was not up, but, passing through the open wicket into the road, I came upon a laborer, trudging along to his work with a pick upon his shoulder, and a tin flask in his hand.

It then was half-past five, or perhaps a little later.

"Have you passed a blind gentleman on the road?" I asked.

"I ain't passed 'im," he answered; "but as I come by the cross roads I see some 'un, as looked gen'leman like, kind 'er fumbling his way along the road down by Harley bottom."

I knew the cross roads; they were nearly two miles distant: It was incomprehensible to me how Van Hoeck had strayed so far from the Abbey; but the laborer's description left little room for doubt that it was Van Hoek he had seen, and I started at once in the direction indicated.

A DUTCH RELIC.

An Interesting Find in the Old Senate House at Kingston.

In the old-fashioned Dutch fire-place in the old Senate House here, by removing bricks from the chimney, is a large iron back piece which contains four figures of men, with an inscription beneath, says a Kingston, N. Y., special to the Albany Journal. Two of the figures are tall, slim men, supposed to represent soldiers, probably grenadiers. They face each other, each holding a long gun with the butt on the ground, and each carries a sword. The other men are short and fat and are shaking hands. The inscription is as follows: "Den crane tir gestelt er hebt wolans. Dem satel gar manchen brefen helt." A translation made by a school teacher here is: "This represents Grenadier Gesselt, He has defeated a good many heroes."

There are other back pieces in Ulster county similar to the one found at the old Senate house. One was taken from an old stone house which formerly stood in the town of Wawarsing, the walls of which were loop-holed for rifles and muskets. In time of Indian raids during the revolutionary period the people assembled in this house for safety. It was strongly built, and when no longer occupied as a residence was spoken of as the "old fort." It was visited by many people previous to 1854, when its owner, the late Benjamin C. Hornbeck, tore it down to get some well preserved pine beams which were in it for a sawmill he was then engaged in building.

Geo. J, McManus, of Crookston, special agent for the Mutual Life Insurance Co, of New York, is in town this week in the interest of that company.

The social in the M. E. Church last Thursday evening was attended by a fair sized crowd who spent a pleasant evening. About twenty dollars was cleared.

It is claimed now that the lamented George Washington wore red hair. It matters not whether in the life that was his hair was red, pink, sky blue or orange, but no doubt if spirits look down on mundane affairs he has been red-headed more than once at the base uses his good name has been put to since his departure for a better land.

E. M. Hoff comes to the front with the information that the water is decidly chilly at this season of the year. He gained his information by falling in the creek.

The roads through the country are still almost impassible but are slightly improved. A couple of weeks of dry weather would put them in passable shape at least.

George Ralph, of Crookston, was in town last Monday. He informs us that he has recently secured a contract to survey sixteen townships on the Red Lake Reservation. He intends to commence work as it dries up and work a large crew.

Hutchinson Leader: As showing the direct benefit which the people of Minnesota will get from her mineral lands, it is asserted that in a few years these lands will yield enough revenue to pay all state expenses and provide for a large sinking fund.

J. L. Johnson has moved his drug store into the building opposite the post office. The building is being repaired and he will have a snug place. The location is much better than his old one and he will undoubtedly do much more business.

Seeding has been progressing very slowly and it is beyond doubt a fact that not over fifty per cent of last year's acreage will be sown to wheat this spring. A very large amount of plowing is yet to be done and it is getting so late that few farmers will seed very much wheat on spring plowing. A large number of fields are still so wet that the farmers cannot get onto them.

THE LOWEST RATE YET.

Special $60 round trip ticket sold May 9th to 14th, good for 90 days, by Great Northern Railway, from this place to Portland, Oregon, on account of the Presbyterian General Assembly. This very low rate gives choice of various routes returning. For particulars inquire of G. W. Brady, agent,

During the year ending March 31, the commissioner of immigration at New York succeeded in barring out 2,142 immigrants under the new law, who would have become charges on the poor fund to the extent of $173,000 had they been admitted. That is a pretty good showing, and yet how much more money would be saved in prosecutions if we could bar out all the professional criminals and hoodlums who crowd to our shores. This latter drift must be prevented and congress should see that it is done and done thoroughly.—Journal.

Congress is fooling away the time upon the weekest possible do-nothing policy. It seems to have no ambition to do business and up to this time has not performed a single act of moment to the people. The Kansas City Star one of the ablest independent papers of the country makes a criticism which is warranted by the circumstances:

The Democratic house was compelled to adjourn again yesterday on account of no quorum. This has happened so often during the session that the suspicion prevails that it is the policy of the leaders to fritter away the time and adjourn without doing anything. The Fifty-second congress started out well and the people were hopeful of good results, but it promises to pass into history as the most useless the country has ever known.

Fertile Journal: News reaches us from Bear Park just before we go to press of a terrible casualty that occured in that town Tuesday night. Per Back was the victim of the terrible flash from above and now lies cold in death. The casualty as reported to us is as follows; During the night Mr. Back and his wife were detained at the barn by a sick horse, a thunder storm came up suddenly during the night and the lightning was also making its deadly flashes here and there and without the night was a hideous one and the unfortunates within huddled close together. During one of the lightnings appeals a barbed wire fence which was attached to the barn was struck, the lightning followed the fence up to the barn and then to the horses on the inside, three of them being killed together with their owner. Mrs. Back was badly stunned but has since fully recovered.

The marvelous development of the agricultural resources of the northwest could scarcely be more forcibly shown than by the following statement concerning the wheat and flour now in store at Duluth. The statement being taken from a Minneapolis paper can be relied upon as not being overdrawn:

There is now in store in Duluth elevators, more wheat, with one exception than has ever been collected in one market at one time in the history of the American grain trade.

The total is about 15,265,000 bushels all of which but 140,000 bushels is of the finest milling grades. There is also about 200,000 barrels of flour waiting shipment east, which is equivalent to 900,000 bushels of wheat. The amount of flour and wheat now in Duluth would feed 1,000,000 persons three years at full daily rations. It will take nearly four hundred vessels of the larger class to move out this accumulation, and the largest and finest fleet ever seen on Lake Superior is expected to be at Duluth about the first week in May.

Of the total of grain and flour in Duluth elevators and storehouses, all the flour and about five million bushels of the wheat is already contracted for delivery at the east and much, probably most of it is sold at considerably higher figures than wheat is now selling for. A good deal of it is sold for direct export to Liverpool and the continent, and its arrival in markets already full of high priced breadstuff cannot but have an important effect. Of the wheat part is contracted at $1.60 per ton for freight to Buffalo and part is as low as $1 a ton. The freight charges on the flour will probably average $1.60 per ton. In April, 1885, Chicago elevators held 15,881,000 bushels of wheat, which is so far the high-water mark of accumulation. Duluth has never had so much before within 6,000,000 bushels.

Our farmers should be on the watch for young grasshoppers. They will soon make their appearance if the eggs have not been destroyed by the wet weather. That large numbers of eggs were deposited in the ground last summer and fall there is no doubt. This is a matter that requires strict investigation, and prompt action should follow if the hoppers should appear. By turning up the soil with a spade in places where the hoppers were known to be last season, the fact can now be ascertained whether the eggs will hatch. There should be no delay in getting at the facts. We ask our readers who reside in localities infested by the hoppers last season to make the examination at once and report the results to the Register, and we will give any aid in our power toward destroying the pests before they begin their work of destruction. We have strong hopes that the eggs will not hatch, but our hopes may be misplaced.—Warren Register.

County Commissioner Rinehart was found by a Times scribe at the Commercial last evening and upon being asked about reservation matters from which place he had just returned and was on his way to his East Grand Forks home, he replied that work was progressing nicely, but his men had found plenty of water all the time, and the work of appraising the lands on the reserve was naturally being conducted rather slowly. So far but eight townships had been gone over, and Mr. Rhinehart was of the opinion that it would take until fall before the appraisers work was finished. The job was one which could not be gone over hurridly and as there were a great many townships yet to appraise he could not say when the work would be consummated but he thought that settlers would not be able to get on to the lands before next spring. There is plenty of valuable land on the Red Lake Reservation, and some that is not as good, but the rush at the opening will probably be as great as any experianced at any other reserve openings, as the Red River Valley was noted for its fine lands, and its reputation had been heralded far and wide.—Crookston Times.

AN ARTIST'S RANCH.

Searching for Subjects She Bought Seventy Odd Acres in California.

In the south gallery of the Academy of Design two years ago was a large painting of California violets that attracted considerable attention, and was sold quickly. The canvas seemed to exhale the fragrance of the real flowers, according to the imagination of some persons. The artist was Mrs. S. A. Norton, a Long Island woman. She had been a pupil of Gifford and Sartain, and in her search for color and new studies she went to California. After painting grapes of various sizes and colors that almost demoralized her, and finding herself incompetent to transfer to canvas as rapidly and satisfactorily as she desired, she decided to be a land owner, and learning of a vineyard ranch near Santa Cruz she invested.

Buena Vista is the suggestive name of the ranch. Forty of seventy-five acres are used for grape culture. One acre, or a little less, netted $770 for the Royal Isabella grape. On the ranch are two apple orchards and one of prunes, with a hundred new trees which began bearing in 1890. In one week 3½ tons of fruit were drying for market. The house orchard contains, nectarines, apricots, plums, pears, peaches and cherries.

The ranch is shut in by high, thick trees, redwood abounding, and from its situation it has only four hours of sunshine in winter. In the summer the growth of vines is marvelous. A rose vine sent out a shoot that grew twenty feet in a short time. The luxuriance and prodigality of flower life at Buena Vista is intoxicating. Passion vines in full flower of the richest colors straggle over the fences, screening every bit of wood. Mrs. Norton added to her large stock of the choicest roses fifty of the finest from Rochester greenhouses, most of them everblooming. As neither rosebugs or slugs are known there, nothing mars their perfection. The climbers rival the passion vines in producing flower screens. Clematis and a tropical vine of great beauty cover the porch of the house, and the house, which is not pretentious, will be covered soon by roses.

Mrs. Norton finds life in that locality more desirable than home quarters in this fickle and unfriendly climate. In her house at Greenvale farm are the results of Bar Harbor days, studies of the flowers from her Long Island garden, and studies of California fruits and flowers, besides a few portraits of local characters, one being the dusky face of Tom Bray's wife, as celebrated in the country for her cooking as her husband is for his fiddling. It is interesting to note that the ranchwoman and artist has a womanly pride in simple feminine ways, and finds delight in the dainty exquisiteness of her needlework. She proudly proclaims herself "country born and bred."

Mrs. Norton is a member of the California State Floral society, and her description of the exhibits of this society, and her talks with the superintendent of the Golden Gate park green houses, are very interesting. She says that Timothy Hopkins, also a member of the society, is an enthusiast about violet culture, growing acres of them.—New York Sun.

Horace Greeley's Daughter.

In her new home at Westchester, N. Y., Mrs. Greeley Clendenin finds her sphere of usefulness somewhat enlarged, as her husband is rector of the ancient parish of "the Episcopal church of St. Peter," a parish which has any number of guilds and organizations for charitable work, the problem to meet of holding in one beautiful church all classes and conditions of wealth and poverty, and the great city near it is fast coming to its boundaries.

While Mrs. Clendenin enjoys luncheons and dinner parties and all social functions, she is also perfectly happy and satisfied in the quieter duties of her home life. She is fond of reading, although she seldom reads a newspaper, and says that she never takes up a book for more than an hour at a time.—Frances E. Smith in Ladies' Home Journal.

Real Success Means Work.

We ought never to forget in our estimate of success as opposed to failure that there is a higher standard than the merely material one. To succeed financially may be to fail morally, and in our ardent, pushing, commercial country we need constantly to set before our boys and girls the love of work for the work's own sake. The immortal words of Agassiz, when invited to undertake a certain enterprise, with the inducement that so doing would be financially very profitable, cannot be too often repeated—"I have no time to make money."—Harper's Bazar.

Caleb Cushing Was a Linguist.

The late Caleb Cushing excelled as a linguist, and was said to be able to converse with all the foreign ministers at Washington in their own tongue. It is also stated that as our commissioner in China he negotiated the first treaty without the aid of an interpreter.—Green Bag.

Nothing.

Will—What were you saying to that lady you were with as we passed last night?

Bill (in surprise)—It Nothing. That was my wife.—New York Epoch.

WHEN TO FALL IN LOVE.

A Woman Gives Some Common Sense Advice Upon the Subject.

I would venture upon one observation, with which let no youth or maiden be offended. The man who desires to experience the passion of love at its fullest perfection ought not to be too young. Memories, regrets, the experience which furnishes the faculty for making comparisons, do not spring into existence, like mushrooms, in the course of a single night, and yet these, likewise, are necessary ingredients in the composition of true passion.

And so, without going quite so far as that eminent novelist who as his own years advanced added proportionately to those of his heroes, and was probably only saved by death from depicting the loves of the absolutely senile, I should certainly not seek for the constant and devoted heart beneath the striped flannels of an undergraduate, any more than I should look for it within the trim bodice of the raw schoolgirl, whose voracious besoin d'aimer might lead her to fall down and worship the very first man that came across her path.

But what has the passing of the actual years to do with falling in love, when the whole matter lies centered in the inappreciable age of the heart? In order to fall in love vigorously and satisfactorily a man must have arrived at the age of reason. He must have outlived, that is to say, all that went to make him hairbrained, impetuous, or incapable of gauging the strength of his own emotions, while at the same time he must not have entered that barren and desolate region which is strewn with dead illusions and shattered idols.

He must have come to know, of course, that "all is not gold that glitters," while retaining his appreciation of the precious metal when it is pure and unalloyed. The sensation of heart hunger, which comes to most men at some period of their lives, must not have been succeeded by that of either repletion or satiety, and he should still be a believer in true and disinterested affection while admitting and deploring the rarity of the phenomenon.

"Wait till you come to forty!" sings Thackeray in his well known ballad, after which age, if we are to believe the great novelist, a man ceases to care about anything but "dipping his nose in the Gascon wine." I should like to think that all this modern march of intellect, which inculcates temperate habits and improved sanitary conditions (with the result, as I hear, of increasing the average of human longevity), may have somewhat extended the limit of male sensibility.

Be that as it may, however, the period of man's enlightened susceptibility must of necessity be brief; brief as the fleeting months which intervene between seed time and harvest. While, in some matter of fact natures, this time is reduced to what Sterne has designated "only the breadth of a hair."—Violet Fane in Nineteenth Century.

Why They Knelt.

Charles II of England was noted for his good nature, and although he was sometimes called "Unthinking Charles," yet his heedlessness was more an apparent than a real characteristic. The extravagance of his reign went hand in hand with his poverty, and on some occasions even the royal table was but poorly served.

There is a story told of Grammont, who one day dined in state with the king.

Charles bade the count to notice that he was served upon the knee, a mark of respect to guests of the king not common at other courts.

"I thank your majesty for the explanation," answered Grammont. "I thought they were begging pardon for giving you so bad a dinner."—Youth's Companion.

Grace Greenwood's First Journey.

My first journey into the great world beyond our hills was by the Erie canal. There were then no railroads in our part of the country, but a trip on that wondrous watery highway by a fast packet, the horses always on the trot, was, I can tell you, something bewildering and exhilarating in its rapidity, novelty and variety. The "lock passages" were thrilling episodes. We were only five days in going from Syracuse to Buffalo. It reminded me of the "magic carpet" journeys in the "Arabian Nights."—Grace Greenwood in Ladies' Home Journal.

What a "Sea Horse" Looks Like.

The genuine sea horse or hippocampus is a veritable curiosity. It is an osseous or bony fish, with tufted gills like those of the pike family. The average length of specimens found on the east coast of the United States is about five inches, those in the Gulf of Mexico often growing to be eight to ten inches in length. The snout of the creature is rather elongated, and the head highly elevated posteriorly. The ears, which are simply a spiny coronet on the occiput, help to give the little animal's head and neck a striking resemblance to those of a horse. The eyes are very prominent, and can be moved independently of each other and in opposite directions.

This little fish horse suspends itself to seaweed and other marine objects by means of a long, slender, whiplike tail which is without fins. They have but three fins altogether, two pectoral (just behind the ears) and one dorsal. The mouth terminates "suckerlike" and is without teeth. They swim vertically, the tail always ready to wind about any object with which they may come in contact. The dried specimens of this marine oddity convey but a slight idea of the real looks of the creature, its appearance being as graceful and as elegant as one could hope to see in any specimen of the fish family.—St. Louis Republic.

YOU LEARN

Have you written me yet? If you haven't, wisdom and intelligent ambition suggest write to-day. I promise you my special, personal attention. I undertake to briefly teach any fairly intelligent person of either sex, who can read and write, and who, after instruction, will work industriously, how to earn Three Thousand Dollars a year in their own localities, wherever they live. I will also furnish the situation or employment, at which you can earn that amount. I charge nothing and receive nothing unless successful, as above. Nothing difficult to learn, or that requires much time. I desire but one person from each district or county. I have already taught and provided with employment a large number who are making over Three Thousand Dollars a Year, each. All is new, solid, sure. Full particulars free. After you know all, if you conclude to go no further, why, no harm is done. Address, E. C. ALLEN, Box 420, Augusta, Maine.

"August Flower"

"What is August Flower for?" As easily answered as asked. It is for Dyspepsia. It is a special remedy for the Stomach and Liver.—Nothing more than this. We believe August Flower cures Dyspepsia. We know it will. We have reasons for knowing it. To-day it has an honored place in every town and country store, possesses one of the largest manufacturing plants in the country, and sells everywhere. The reason is simple. It does one thing, and does it right. It cures dyspepsia ⊛

His Ill-Behaved Leg.

"A cork leg is no end of a bore," said the man who limped. Just think of it! I was at a dinner party the other night, and it was my happy lot to have a most charming damsel fall to my share at the feast. We conversed most pleasantly through the oyster and the soup, but when the fish came on she became silent, and seemed unaccountably embarrassed. To draw her from this mood I redoubled my efforts to please, but in response she only flushed and looked angry. Finally, interrupting me in the midst of a little mot which I had composed carefully while dressing for dinner, she said, sotto voce:—

"I'll thank you to stop squeezing my foot!"

"Imagine my embarrassment! I had been treading upon her toes with my cork foot—of course, without knowing it. It is an annoying thing to have to explain to a young lady at a social festivity. Nevertheless, I was forced to do so. She accepted my apology, and then proceeded to injure my feelings by giggling."

Matters of Taste.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, North and South Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

Arthur Fretten died at the home of his father, near Skyberg, of whooping cough.

At the election at Morristown, to incorporate carried by a large majority.

Forest fires destroyed considerable timber and some fences west of Little Falls.

E. Young was arrested at Morristown, and fined $50 and costs for running a blind pig.

William Rose was arrested at Stillwater, charged with poisoning a dog belonging to Arthur Lyman.

A Kenyon special says seeding is mostly done. Winter wheat and rye are looking promising, but grass is slow in coming.

The Snake river drives are "hung up" on account of the low stage of water. Grain is badly needed, and unless there is a rise in the water soon, the drivers will be laid off for a time.

Judge Williston, of Stillwater, made an order directing Fred Scott, assignee of Charles Ludwig, to settle all claims pro rata.

A fatal runaway occurred at Belle Plaine, in which the 8-year-old daughter of Carl Schult was thrown out on the depot hill, and died three hours afterward.

Word was received at Buffalo, to the effect that Mrs. Andrew Schuler had suicided by hanging at her home near St. Michaels. Her mind was deranged.

The citizens of the village of Wells have signed a guarantee note of $300 for their share of the world's fair fund for Faribault county.

An adjourned meeting of the Stevens county Alliance was held at Morris. The members resolved themselves into a People's party and appointed a county committee for campaign purposes.

A saw breaking in the Cloquet Lumber company's mills at Cloquet injured two men. Andrew Thomson will loose his right arm and James Lorauger will be crippled for some time.

A man named Menge, a butcher, was arrested at Crookston, for threatening to kill his son-in-law, he died next day at the village jail in great agony. He had been drinking heavily, and it is thought he committed suicide.

The establishment of a creamery at Millersburg, eight miles west of Dundas, by the Cresent Company, of St. Paul, has fallen flat, the farmers failing to guarantee the necessary number of cows.

The charter of the Citizens' National Bank of Mankato has expired, it having lived its score of years of corporate existence. It has been decided to form a new organization, to be composed entirely of Mankato business men.

An unsuccessful attempt to blow open the safe in the Exchange bank, of Farmington, was made. The robbers only secured about $28 in coppers from the vault room. They also stole a pair of white ponies from W. S. Farquhar to make their escape.

A Princeton special says: Seeding is mostly done, but no rain having fallen for three weeks the ground is so dry that the grain has not sprouted. In this vicinity there is a 10 per cent increase in the acreage of wheat and oats, with a corresponding falling off in the acreage of corn and potatoes.

The continued snow and rain has had a tendency to greatly interfere with seeding in the vicinity of Albert Lea, and, as a result, there will be considerable reduction in the acreage of land that would have been seeded to wheat, as past experience has shown that late sown wheat is not a success.

The man Kennedy, who was arrested at Carlton on suspicion but not positively identified by the man who accused him, gave the name of Johnson, turns out to be Tom Conlin, of Glyndon. Both men now are in jail to await the Polk county sheriff. Both have served terms in the penitentiary.

The suit of Lawrence vs. the Chicago & Milwaukee Railroad Company was completed at Mankato, and on motion of defendant's attorney the court instructed the jury to bring a verdict for defendant. The suit of C. Aultman & Co. vs. Samuel Mather is now on trial, last case in term of the United States circuit court. Judge Nelson will preside during the rest of the term.

One of the boldest attempts to rob a house was perpetrated at Mankato at the house of Henry Vogelspohl. His wife and a Miss Hodapp were sleeping on the second floor and about four o'clock in the morning were startled by the entrance of two men. When the women attempted to cry out the villians applied handkerchiefs saturated with chloroform to their faces, but their job was not a good one. The robbers were frightened away.

A. C. Knapp, for many years a well digger in Minnesota and Iowa, has discovered in Fremont township, in Winona county, a vein of lead 14 inches thick about 80 feet beneath the surface. Knapp made the discovery while digging a well a few months ago, and has since then leased an 80-acre tract in which he will sink a shaft during the summer. He will commence operations about May 1.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Shinnes & Greene, of Churches Ferry, assigned for the benefit of creditors. Assets probably $3,000, liabilities less.

President Hector of the Fargo board of trade, has appointed a committee of fifteen to raise funds in Cass County for the state's exhibit at the world's fair. About $6,000 has already been subscribed.

W. H. Garrer, one of the prominent members of Democracy of Ramsey county, died of lung disease. He resides in Dry Lake township.

A Larimore special says: Seeding is going on generally, the ground is in excellent condition but to soft, as yet, to permit threshing as the heavy engines and separators sink deep into the loam when crossing the stubble.

J. W. Bowman, agent of the American Surety company New York, whose bond the Union National bank holds to indemnify the loss sustained by Defaulter Nelson is in Grand Forks and will redeem the bond and assume the prosecution of Nelson.

Leading stockmen of Western North Dakota met at Dickinson and perfected organization, whose objects are similar to the Montana association. It starts with a big membership, comprising the country between the Montana line on the west to the Mississippi river on the east.

Andrew Simpson, one of the oldest settlers of Grand Forks county burned to death at his farm fourteen miles south of this city. He was a widower and lived alone with only a hired man. The man awoke in time to grab his clothes and escape. The portion of the house where Simpson was sleeping was in flames and it was impossible to save him. The body was afterwards recovered, but burned beyond recognition. Simpson leaves several grown up sons. He was highly respected and and seventy-four years of age.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

The state auditor, acting upon a report furnished by Joseph Frendenfeld, has refused to grant a certificate to do business in the state Alliance Hail Association, of Huron.

The Minnesota, a very valuable property near Deadwood, was sold to an Eastern syndicate for $60,000. This makes the eighth large mining deal in this neighborhood in the past two months.

John Winn hired a double rig at Washington recently and started West. So far as any one knows to the contrary he is still going. Numerous creditors are waiting his return.

Col. E. George, an ex-Confederate officer, sixty-five years old, previously bearing a good reputation, was brought to Rapid City from the Rosebud agency by a deputy marshal charged with being a member of a gang of cattle thieves.

At the semi-annual meeting of the Lead City Miners Union, an organization founded for the protection of the miners of the Black Hills, the following officers were elected: Archie Ferguson, president; Sam Jeffrey vice-president; Robert Frazier, secretary; J. G. Lillig, treasurer.

A sensation was created at Sioux Falls by the statement that an attempt would be made to indict Mayor Peck for non-enforcement of the state liquor law. There is no provision in the law by which the mayor can do more towards enforcement than other citizens can do, and it is believed the effort, if made, will amount to nothing.

An important mining sale is reported at Rapid city by Messrs. Humphreys & Stenger, who recently bonded the Spokane mine in the Squaw creek district, have sold out to Omaha parties for $151,000, making a fortune in the deal. The Spokane is one of the most promising silver mines in the Black Hills.

WISCONSIN.

L. Bitterles' saloon was burglarized at Prairie Du Chien and a quantity of liquor stolen.

William Cooper, a brakeman, who lives in Ashland fell from a gravel train near Cumberland and was killed. He leaves a little son motherless.

Dick Smith, a brakeman on the Northern Pacific train No 53, was killed at Maple, near Ashland. He fell from the cars, and both legs were cut off at the thighs. He lived but a few minutes.

Bicycle riders of Beloit, will test in the courts the city ordinance preventing the riding of wheels on the sidewalks. Mr. Toubertian, a banker's son, was arrested to bring a test case.

Chas. Durrs, of Lancaster, and City Marshal C. Linder arrested a man at Prairie Du Chien named Robert Peather, charged with committing a rape on a 13-year-old girl, daughter of his brother.

A row occurred in front of a saloon at Hayward, George Cayo stabbed Ed Lavelle, who lies in the hospital in a critical condition. Cayo has been released from custody on a $600 bond.

A local longshoremen's union has been organized at West Superior with nearly 200 members. They will join the National association and fix a scale of wages and working hours.

A son of Charles Johnson, sixteen years old, was injured at Ellsworth in a planing mill. A piece of a planing knife was thrown through his thigh, mangling the flesh in a fearful manner. He may recover.

The Evening Telegraph has been re-elected official paper of West Superior for the ensuing year, John Simons, appointed and confirmed chief of police; B. J. Van Vleck, city clerk; A. S. Cooper, city engineer; P. H. Perkins was nominated for attorney but was rejected.

The La Crosse Lumbermen's Exchange held a meeting and decided to close down all mills until the labor trouble in this city is settled. Consequently the 11 mills were closed throwing 250 men out of employment.

IOWA.

Horace Orendorf, an old and well known citizen, fell dead upon Second street, Ottumwa, without the slightest warning. Orendorf's aged mother is distracted.

Davidson & Eckerman, of Sibley have just captured a golden eagle, which measures 3½ feet from back to tail and 7 feet four inches from tip to tip.

Scarlet fever has made its appearance to quite an alarming extent at Charles City, and several places have been quarantined. The authorities have taken every precaution to prevent a further spread.

The grand jury of Hancock county is after violators of the prohibitory law. Frank Campbell, of Britt, was fined $500 and six months in jail, and Ed Stombaul, of Goodell, has just been indicted.

Andrew Cooper, of Chicago, engaged in placing an iron roof on the turner building, Dubuque, had his skull crushed by the breaking of a scaffold. He will probably die.

N. W. Harris & Co., of Chicago, bought Ottumwa school bonds to the amount of $15,000, paying a premium of $175.95. The bonds are 5 per cent 10s. There were four bidders.

The Escher faction of the Evangelical church of Iowa, will attempt to gain possession of Zion Evangelical church of Cedar Rapids by bringing suits in the courts. It will be made a test case, and will be watched with interest all over the state.

Ralph, the 8-year-old son of Jas. Nettcott, of Independence, while reaching for a ball under a horse's feet, was kicked in the temple. Four inches of the skull was removed. He died from the injury without regaining consciousness.

The Ft. Dodge council added insult to their action, taxing watches of train men, by passing a resolution setting forth that any one making affidavit that he could not stand a tax of 50 cents upon him, he would be released. Railroaders are greatly incensed at this action, as the question involved was one of law, not money.

A sensational suicide occurred in Cherokee recently. An unknown man arrived on an early train from the East, purchased a revolver at a hardware store and when the 11:30, an east-bound train, came along he secured a ticket for Galena, Ill., and boarded the cars. Just as the train left the depot he drew the revolver and shot himself in the abdomen four times and fell dead.

Peat in America.

Peat beds are commonly supposed to be peculiar to Ireland, and few people know that they are almost as abundant in this country as on the Emerald Isle. There are many large beds in northern New York, while in New England and Pennsylvania they are also common, and are found in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa and Minnesota. Extensive peat tracts exist in Canada, Labrador and Newfoundland, and the island of Anticosti, in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, has the largest peat bed in the world. It is over eighty miles long and from two to seven miles wide, the thickness varying from three to ten feet. The peat is of the best quality, but owing to the cheapness of the coal is very little used.

DEEMING TO DIE.

The Notorious Wife Murderer Found Guilty by a Jury in Melbourne.

He is Roasted by the Judge and Then Sentenced to Be Hanged.

MELBOURNE, May 3.—The trial of Deeming for the murder of his late wife, formerly Miss Mather of Rain Hill, ended to-day with a verdict of guilty, and he was sentenced to be hanged.

Deeming turned white and trembled when the judge turned toward him and passed upon him the sentence of death. The judge said that in all his experience with criminals he had never seen such a consummate wretch as the prisoner. He spoke of Deeming's shameless effrontery during the trial, and remarked that the jury had rightfully ignored the prisoner's clownish attempts to prove himself irresponsible. As the judge pronounced the words, "to be hanged by the neck until dead," Deeming gasped and tottered, but recovered himself enough to nod with assumed indifference. He then sank back in his seat. The audience in the court room applauded the verdict and sentence. Deeming was then taken back to prison.

The crown counsel contended that there was not a particle of evidence of the insanity of the prisoner, and he said that the jury ought to dismiss all such nonsense from their minds. At this point Deeming interrupted the crown counsel. It was not the law, he said, but the press that was trying him. If he could bring himself to believe he had committed murder, he would plead guilty rather than submit to the gaze of the crowd in the court room, the ugliest race he had ever seen. Some of the witnesses against him had deliberately lied. Whatever he could say would be disbelieved. His witnesses had been kept out of the way. People had sworn to seeing him where he had never been in his life. No time had been allowed him to communicate with his witnesses in England and India. For weeks together he had suffered lapses of memory. In his own mind he knew he was not guilty.

Tar and Feathers for Teed.

CHICAGO, May 3.—Dr. Cyrus Teed, the wrecker of many happy homes on the Pacific coast as well as the destroyer of harmony in the once harmonious Economite society in Pennsylvania, and who, it is alleged, left San Francisco with a squad of young women traveling under the cognomen of "Angels," was to arrive here to-day. He did not arrive, or if he did he has managed to make himself invisible to the physical vision. Perhaps it is well for Teed and his proselytes that he has made himself scarce, as the people of Washington heights, where the new Christ has purchased the old Hilliard homestead for the purpose of establishing a "Heaven," had made up their minds that a coat of tar and feathers would justifiably meet the exigencies of the case.

The Road Has the Best of It.

WASHINGTON, Special, May 3.—The Red river valley lands claimed by the Great Northern were under consideration in the senate committee on public lands to-day, but no agreement was reached, there being considerable division of opinion in the committee as to what would be the best method of procedure under the circumstances. Some of the members think the railroad company has got far the best of the situation, and there is also yet some doubt as to whether the company, under the supreme court decision, is entitled to the lands in the northern part of the state, or what is known as the lower Red river valley.

Rates on Salt.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—The interstate commerce commission has decided in the cases brought by Kansas salt companies that any advantage which inures to Michigan salt manufacturers from rates to points in Iowa, Illinois, Missouri and Nebraska are advantages arising from natural situation. It is held further that rates on salt to points south and southwest of Hutchinson, Kan., and St. Louis do constitute undue preference in favor of Michigan as against Kansas salt, and that they should be readjusted.

Mississippi Valley Regatta.

CHICAGO, May 3.—The executive committee of the Mississippi Valley Amateur Rowing association has decided to hold the annual regatta at St. Joseph, Mo., on Lake Contrary. There will be a large entry list this year, including Detroit, Grand Rapids, Toronto, St. Paul, Minneapolis, St. Louis and Chicago, and no doubt entries will be received from New Orleans and Salt Lake. Already the local boat clubs are getting shells in shape for this meeting. At the annual meeting of the Iowa State Amateur Rowing association Spirit Lake was selected as the place to hold this summer's regatta, on July 12 and 13.

Purchased by Boomers.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., Special, May 3.—One-half of the townsite of Conductor, on the west line of the Great Northern railway, has been sold to a syndicate of Kansas capitalists for $7,000 cash. The company will expend $40,000 in improving the property and erecting buildings. The syndicate is also buying land for a colony of Kansas farmers who will arrive about the 15th inst.

Clarkson Will Come.

NEW YORK, May 3.—A. B. Humphrey, secretary of the National Republican league, of which Gen. J. S. Clarkson is president, said to-day that the alarming reports published about Gen. Clarkson's health are greatly exaggerated. Gen. Clarkson will be in New York May 15 and at the Minneapolis convention as the chairman of the Republican national committee.

Cancelled Their Contracts.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa, May 3.—Iowa trunk lines, the Rock Island, the Burlington and the Milwaukee, have cancelled their freight transfer contracts with the Union Pacific, having decided that it will be advantageous to transfer their own freight instead of turning it over to the latter road. The Northwestern and Wabash will continue under the present arrangement.

Chicago Roads Hesitate.

CHICAGO, May 3.—A meeting of the Chicago freight committee of the Central Traffic association was held to-day, to decide whether the rate on sixth-class freight should be reduced to the rate of 20 cents per 100 pounds from Chicago to New York, to meet the action of the St. Louis lines. After some discussion it was decided to defer action until to-morrow. In the meantime advices from Peoria state that the reduced rates were put into effect from that point to-day by the Pennsylvania road in connection with the Toledo, Peoria & Western. It is now practically settled that the Chicago lines will be authorized to adopt the new basis to-morrow.

Branded as a Traitor.

CHEYENNE, Special—Citizens of Johnson county, assembled at Buffalo, adopted resolutions denouncing the late cattlemen's raid. Among other things they declare that they view with suspicion any citizen who supports the Cheyenne Sun or the Tribune. They brand Gov. Barber as a traitor to his people by preventing the use of the militia by the sheriff.

Stabbed by a Cook.

GREAT FALLS, Mont., Special.—Adolph Pieper, a waiter, and James Moran, a cook, both working in the Model restaurant, got into an altercation to-day when Moran stabbed Pieper with a butcher knife, the blade penetrating the left lobe of the liver. He will probably die. Moran was arrested.

The Bite of the Cobra.

So many deaths are caused by the bite of the cobra di capello, especially in British India, that a communication just made to the French Academy of Medicine by M. Rochard is invested with particular interest for English people. Dr. Calmettes, who is residing at Saigon, in Cochin China, has devoted much attention of late to this subject, and as the result of his investigation and researches, he has informed M. Rochard that the subcutaneous injection of chloride of gold before apoplectic symptoms supervene is a sure and infallible remedy against the venom of the bite of this deadly serpent. Dr. Calmettes has made a number of experiments for the purpose of testing his discovery and all the results have been of the most satisfactory character.

A Mad Dog Scare.

QUINCY, Minn., Special.—A few days ago a dog owned by Fred Penz showed symptoms of rabies, and before it was killed considerable stock and a number of dogs were bitten, which were killed when rabid symptoms were exhibited. A farm hand received a slight scratch on his hand. His hand and arm are now badly swollen, but it is hoped that hydrophobic symptoms will not follow.

A feeling of dullness, languor, and depression means that your liver isn't doing its part. That means impure blood, to begin with, and all kinds of ailments in the end.

But you can stop them in advance. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery invigorates the liver, purifies and enriches the blood, and rouses every organ into healthy action. It prevents and cures all diseases arising from a torpid liver or from impure blood. Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Scrofulous, Skin and Scalp Diseases—even Consumption (or Lung-scrofula), in its earlier stages, all yield to it.

The makers of the "Discovery" claim for it only what it will do. They guarantee that it will do it. If it fails to benefit or cure, in any case, they'll return the money. Nothing else that claims to purify the blood is sold in this way; which proves, no matter what dealers may offer, that nothing else can be "just as good." Therefore, don't accept a substitute.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Queer God-parents.

During the last century, and even at the beginning of the present one, a strange custom existed at the baptism of the infant scions of fashionable Roman families. Instead of inviting princes, dukes, and other noble lords and ladies to serve as god parents, a monk, beggar, or some male or female pilgrim was requested to act, and the infant was held in the arms of his humble godfather or godmother. On the 20th of June, 1782, the little daughter of the Princess Colonna was held, tenuta, at the baptismal font by a poor female pilgrim. Soon after a beggar woman, whose "station" was at the Church of San Marcello, became the godmother of the infant daughter of Princess Barberini; in the year 1785 a beggar "held" the son of Prince Rospoli, and was lavishly rewarded, for he received as a guerdon free maintenance to the end of his life. The Carmelite monk Fra Elia was often invited to act as godfather, in turn for which his monastery obtained large gifts, and crowds of people flocked to witness the ceremony whenever this mendicant friar discharged this duty amid dukes and princes.

The Pastor Issues a Notice.

The pastor of a Congregational church of Somerville, Mass., distributes a neat printed sheet containing the church notices, in the pews, in lieu of reading them. This was one of the recent notices: "It may not be inappropriate to call attention of the audience to the bad habit they have fallen into of watching people who come in late, especially those who have new clothes. These late comers are modest people, and it must be a serious annoyance to have their raiment a subject of remark. They wear it unconsciously, and prefer that you would not notice them. The Sunday services are at 10:30, and at 7:30, for the benefit of all who desire to spend an hour in worship; but for all those who have recently visited the tailor and milliner and dressmaker, the morning service begins anywhere from 10:30 to 11, and the evening service 7:50. For the benefit of the very tardy ones the announcement is hereby made that the benediction will be the only portion of the service in which they are respectfully invited to participate."—New York Tribune.

OF GENERAL INTEREST.

Q. What is Gypsine?
A. Gypsine is an everlasting wall finish, entirely different from all Kalsomine preparations.
Q. How is it more durable than Kalsomine?
A. It is made from a cement base and grows hard on the wall with age.
Q. How about Kalsomines?
A. They are but temporary, softening after a short time, and have to be washed and scraped off in fact spoil any walls to which they are applied as they rub and scale.
Q. Will not Gypsine rub and scale off?
A. No; when originally applied to a clean wall, it is everlasting and can be recoated to change tints, or when necessary.
Q. Is Gypsine injurious to health?
A. Unlike all poisonous wall paper held on with vegetable paste, or whiting and glue kalsomines, it is recommended by the leading physicians and sanitarians everywhere.
Q. Is it a fact that the goods are in themselves a disinfectant?
A. It is. A package should always be kept in the house as it is a great deodorizer and disinfectant.
Q. How can it be used as a deodorizer?
A. Throw a few spoonfuls of the dry powder in your slop jars, vaults, sinks, etc., it is cheap and effective.
Q. Can anything but plain wall tinting be done with Gypsine?
A. Any kind of frescoing or relief decorating can be done with it.
Q. Where can I purchase it.
A. From your local dealer.
Q. How can I learn more about Gypsine?
A. Write Diamond Wall Finish Co., Grand Rapids, Michigan for copy of Gypsine Advocate and sample circular.
Remember the name GYPSINE and get the goods you ask for, not something claimed as the same thing, or just as good. You can follow directions and do the work yourself.

STATE CONVENTION.

Minnesota Republicans Hold Their State Convention at St. Paul.

Hon. C. K. Davis Being Elected Chairman Delivers an Eloquent Address.

St. Paul Minn., Special.—Joel P. Heatwhole, chairman of the Republican state central committee, called the convention to order, and in a few words he welcomed the delegates and predicted a glorious victory in the fall. The call was then read, and the convention proceeded to temporarily organize. D. W. Bruckart of Stearns nominated the Hon. C. K. Davis for temporary chairman and paid a glowing tribute to the senator. The nomination was made unanimous, and amid loud and continued applause Senator Davis mounted the platform and grasped the gavel. He made no speech, but promised to address the convention later. Andrew C. Dunn of Faribault was chosen temporary secretary and George Lamb of Ramsey assistant secretary.

The following resolution was then offered by E. E. Corliss of Otter Tail and adopted:

Resolved, That the chairman of this convention appoint the following committees to be composed of nine (9) members each, two from the state at large and one from each congressional district:

First—A committee on credentials.
Second—A committee on permanent organization.
Third—A committee on resolutions.

The chair accordingly appointed the committees as follows:

On Credentials—At large: E. E. Corliss, Otter Tail; M. M. Leland, Faribault; Nate Kingsley, Mower; D. C. Hill, Goodhue; W. L. Ames, Ramsey; Henry Brown, Hennepin, and C. J. Gunderson, Douglas; J. Manchester, Lincoln.

On Resolutions—At large: D. Sinclair, Winona; D. W. Bruckhart, Stearns; First district, L. French, Mower; Second district, C. L. Ross, Brown; Third district, A. H. Reed; Fourth district, F. C. Stevens; Fifth district, John Goodnow; Sixth district, C. A. Towne; Seventh district, H. W. Donaldson.

On Permanent Organization—At large: C. H. Bennett, Pipestone; A. T. Koener, Meeker. First district, J. R. Nelson, Fillmore; Second district, H. J. Miller, Rock; Third district, Hudson Wilson, Rice; Fourth district, E. L. Hospers, Washington; Fifth district, Robert Russell, Hennepin; Sixth district, H. C. Kendall, St. Louis; Seventh district, F. E. Kenaston, Big Stone.

On the motion of F. G. Ingersoll of Ramsey the convention then took a recess until 1:30.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Senator Davis, on coming forward to address the convention, was received with loud and long continued applause. He spoke in effect as follows:

Fellow Citizen of the Republican Convention: The grand council of the Republican party for the State of Minnesota meets to-day under the most favorable auspices. There is a swelling tide of sentiment and conviction rising throughout the land which infallibly presages the wafting of the great old party to victory at the next election. [Cheers.] Ever since that campaign of panic and disaster of two years ago, of misunderstanding and misapprehension, wherever public opinion has had a chance to express itself, the actions and the record of the Republican party have received full vindication. [Cheers.] In the State of Ohio William McKinley (loud applause), whose name is ineffaceably inscribed upon the bill that was made the test of the last election, with the leading features, and, indeed, all of the features of that measure directly at issue, was elected by a most triumphant majority. [Cheers.] At the same time the faithful adherence of the Republican party to the honest dollar of 100 cents

WAS ALSO AN ISSUE

[cheers] and under the true guidance of glorious John Sherman that issue, so far as that party is concerned, is settled. [Cheers.] In the elections in the State of New York held last spring the Republican gains were such as to inspire the greatest hopes in our friends and to carry terror to the hearts of our enemies. In the stronghold of Democracy—Jersey City—their hosts were overthrown the other day, and here in St. Paul [uproarious applause] the day before yesterday for the first time in twenty years the Republican party, aided by the element of good order and good citizenship, arose in its might and shook off the incubus which has rested upon our prosperity for a quarter of a century. [Cheers.] And the electric thrill of this victory has gone through the State of Minnesota; it has inspired new hope, it will incite fresh endeavor. This representative audience assures me that its members will go back to their homes reinvigorated with Republican principles and spread the TRUTHS OF REPUBLICANISM.

Fellow citizens, the Fifty-first congress was the first time with one exception that the Republican party had been in possession of all the departments of this government for many years. There have either been a Democratic senate or a Democratic house or the four years' calamity of a Democratic president [cheers], so that strive as it might to redeem the enormous debt, to which the Republican party was pledged to the public, nothing could be done. How well the Republican party, under the present administration, has redeemed the pledge is a matter of history. The Republican party has stifled the corrupt repression of parliamentary procedure under the athletic and muscular ruling of Thomas Reed [cheers], whereby a man was counted as present, when, in fact, he physically was. [Laughter]

And so measure after measure with the slow, steady procession of a planetary body moving under law to its destiny in its orbit, the Republican party proceeded to redeem the pledges which it had made to the nation to enact and pass legislation conducive to the public good in the

REDEMPTION OF ITS PLEDGES.

Let us see: It provided for the quadracentennial that most magnificent pageant this world has ever seen. [Cheers]. It passed a bill for the administration of the customs and lifted that department from the rank corruption in which it had sweltered; it passed a bill making trusts and monopolies criminal offenses, so far as the proprietors are concerned, so that if one of them is detected in Minnesota to-day it can be indicted in the United States court. Under its influence the Standard oil trust has disappeared and gone into liquidation. It was not unmindful of the rights of the Northwest; it laid the magic hand of development upon that phenomenon of nature at the Soo [cheers]. The circulation of the great West was impeded; it provided means to construct a canal for vessels of 21 feet draft and 5,000 tons burden. It thereby lowered the freight rates and added so much value to the acre of every farm in Minnesota [cheers]. It admitted the states of Idaho and Wyoming—two more stars added to the Republican galaxy. It passed a bill for the coinage of silver which was sufficient for any honest demand, for it took up the entire American product [cheers]. Germany, France and England had excluded American beef and pork and mutton from their markets, but the American grazier and farmer was protected by the passage of a bill which authorized the president when the necessity should appear to him to so warrant to discriminate in like manner against the products of those countries. Yet some one will tell you that nothing was done in the INTERESTS OF THE AMERICAN FARMER.

It redeemed the promises of the Republican party of the nation to the 2,250,000 men who nearly thirty years ago marched down to the valley of the shadow of death; it passed a bill which conferred infinite benefactions upon thousands of homes. [Cheers.] There were vast grants of land held by railroads where roads had not been constructed according to agreement. Those grants were thrown open to settlement. It passed the McKinley bill, of which I shall speak a little more. [Cheers.] When the war broke out a direct tax was levied upon all the states in the North up to $17,000,000. The Southern states, of course, never paid a cent. That congress gave back that money to the states, and of that amount Minnesota received as her share $108,000. It established a circuit court of the United States and additional circuit judges for the due, orderly and rapid administration of justice. It made binding and stringent laws against the criminal and pauper immigration from Europe for the benefit of the American workingman, relieving him from undue competition. [Cheers.]

AS TO OUR FOREIGN RELATIONS

the record is us the same. When we came into power we were quarrelling with Germany about the Samoan question. That matter has been settled. We were disputing with Great Britain in regard to the fisheries on the northeastern coast; that quarrel is in abeyance. American rights were questioned by Great Britain in Bering sea. By a wise provision, which I hope to heaven the nations will imitate, it has been referred to a tribunal to arbitrate. And all this has been brought to pass by the greatest administration that this country has ever seen in time of peace. [Cheers.] Tell me one single man if you can; let him rise in his place—what act has this administration done to which any Republican can look with a questioning eye? [Cheers and cries of "not one."] Has anything wrong been done? [Cries of "no, no."] Has not everything that is right been attempted and most that is right been done? One thing remains, and it is not the fault of this administration if the time has not been reached when every man, no matter what his condition, no matter what his color, can walk up to any ballot box in the land and have his vote count. [Cheers.] I am proud of the record of the Republican party for the last three years; I am proud of the administration; I am

PROUD OF BENJAMIN HARRISON

[Cheers.] Quiet, learned, patriotic, self-contained, indomitable, honest, what American interest has suffered at his hands or under his consideration? In what quarter of the seas has not the majesty of the American flag been asserted or American honor upheld? What unrepublican or self-seeking act has been charged to him. He deserves and he will receive, when the time comes, ample demonstrations of the confidence the American people have in his great administration of her highest trust. [Loud cheers.]

Beside him stands another figure peerless in American history, a man with large discernments, looking before and after; a man whose heart has burned with patriotic fire, whose brain has glowed with patriotic thought, ever since most of us were boys; his eyes upon the destinies of the country, shaping them to that great end to which God has destined her—I mean

JAMES G. BLAINE.

[Enthusiastic and long continued applause.] Then there is that lawer sitting quietly in his New York office administering his great trust with marvelous apprehension and great patriotism and bringing forward the navy of this country to a stage where within two years it will be able to compete with any navy in the world—I refer to Mr. Tracy. [Cheers.] The department of agriculture has been recently created for the benefit of the farming community. You no doubt better than I can appreciate the benefits which have resulted therefrom. At its head moving it into shape, disseminating information and making it useful in every respect is plain, able, strong, honest Jeremiah Rusk. [Cheers.]

I might go through all of these departments, were it necessary to add anything in confirmation of the truth of the remark with which I started this branch of my subject—namely, that the affairs of the country viewed from whatever standpoint, whether of party, political or moral, have been administered by the Republican party in the most unexceptional manner. [Cheers.] The Democratic party for the past fifty years has been the party of stolen goods and false pretenses. [Laughter.] It is now executing before the American people in the hope of alluring and deceiving them. [Cheers] It stole into power in 1844 on the cry of Polk and the tariff of '42. It violated that pledge. It stole into power, so far as the house of representatives is concerned, two years ago by the most indiscriminate and encyclopedic lying that this country has ever had. [Laughter.] Their leaders promised if they were given the power that they would lift, or would attempt to lift, this iniquitous McKinley bill from the necks of the people. This is what Mr. Castle, Mr. Harries and the rest elected from this state said. "We will show you," said they, "we will bring about a better order of things, and the political millenium will come and last 1,000 years."

WHAT HAVE THEY DONE?

The first thing they did was to send to his everlasting sleep so far as his hope of the speakership was concerned, the apostle of their creed, Mr. Mills [laughter] the man who had done more to lead them to their transient and evanescent victory than any other ten men in their party. But he was served that way in the house of his friends. [Cries of "serve him right.] Nearly six months have rolled by since that congress met and that party, notwithstanding all its protestations of what it proposed to do, has not introduced a single general bill to modify the McKinley act. It has not dared to reimpose the duties upon sugar. It has not dared to persist in its policy as to iron and steel or as to the forty-two articles of production upon which the farmer is protected; it has confined itself to that ancient Democratic trick of going across a road to kick a sheep, make wool free to the direct detriment of the farmer and the ranchmen, one of the most vital agricultural interests in this country. Why have they not attempted to redeem their pledge in this respect, if what they said two years ago is true? They know that it is not true. Every man that runs can read that that bill is of experience. Hundreds of millions of dollars have gone into new industrial enterprise in consequence of that bill.

There are in the coming campaign, which the American people will be called upon to discuss and pass upon, just two questions: The first is the business of this country between man and man between the citizens of different states and between this country and other nations. The second is the currency by which that interest and that intercourse are carried on. These questions involve questions of the higher morality of proper action, personal, party, national and international.

The first principle upon which Republicanism is based and the disregard of which would entail the dissolution of that great organization is the protection of American industry and American labor by tariff laws. It is upon that basis and asserting and proving that it is right that I hope the Republican party in this state

WILL MAKE THEIR NEXT ATTACK.

It has led us to victory always when we have adhered to it; disaster has never overtaken our banner except when we altered it in that respect. It is consistent Republicanism; it has been cardinal and axiomatic in the party ever since 1862. I assert and claim that it benefits every man in the community, the farmer, the wage earner, the fixed salary, man and all. Upon what principle does it rest? Upon the principle of self-preservation. A principle which is sanctioned to individuals as well as to nations.

Discussing this question, Senator Davis referred to the protection accorded the workingman from the Chinese eruption and from the hordes of pauper and criminal immigration from the old world, and asked why the same principle should not be extended to every branch of industry requiring it. He compared the condition of the laboring class in this country with that of the corresponding classes in England, where there were two men looking for one position, instead of an employer looking for men. There were those who could remember when in this country, under the influence of a cry such as was now being raised by the Democratic party, an era of free trade was introduced and continued for a few years, when return was made to protection to redress the disasters experienced under free trade.

"THIS PRINCIPLE OF PROTECTION,"

continued the speaker, "declares to less advanced states and communities or to more powerful states and communities where in their power they have rotted into a corrupt social system or corrupt industrial system that you shall not bring your corruption into contact with our purity and hope to taint it. The free trader proposes to lay his country open to every attack because the foreign merchant will sell goods cheap to whoever happens to have money to pay for them. He forgets in doing this that he takes numberless sources of employment from his neighbor, from the man who does not produce the crude raw material. In the last analysis of this question protection is in self-defence of every man in the community. It is all the difference between civilization and barbarism. Wherever compensation is high—I use the term in the large sense—the state of civilization of that nation is high. Wherever the rate of compensation or wages—using this term in the large sense—is low the lower it goes and the nearer approach to barbarism that nation makes.

Referring to the effect of protection in the North the speaker referred to St. Paul and Minneapolis and the benefits they had recently reaped in the shape of which had located in their midst, such as the Wood Harvester works. Duluth was also developing, and all classes were receiving the benefit of this prosperity. It had given rise to a large number of intermediate employments. This was all the outcome of protection. It gives the farmer a home market; it gives employment to thousands of men who would otherwise have to seek it in vain. What was the effect upon human nature? A better manhood and a better womanhood. He contrasted the condition of the laboring classes here with that of those in England and other countries in the old world where the woman had to toil at the most manual of labor in order to earn a scanty living for themselves and their families. Its effect was felt in the home. Under the advantages of a protective government the home influences were refined and elevated, and that was the court of last resort to which all strings of empire run. Regarding the question of protection from a standpoint not quite so sentimental, and the arguments in favor of it would, if possible, be stronger. How much saving has been effected under this system in transportation? The great tax of modern times was getting products from place to place. The railroad tariffs of this country were of ten times more importance than all the taxes levied by the taxing power. If the farmer had only to carry his wheat fifty miles was it not far better than that he should have to carry it 5,000 miles. This would be the result of the growth of manufacturing towns in regions hitherto given over to one employment, for each such town would bring a market so much nearer to the home of the farmer. This was

THE RESULT OF PROTECTION.

"I want," said Mr. Davis, "to put the case to the Minnesota farmer who wants to buy so many yards of woolen cloth. He has got so many bushels of wheat—two or three, say, to pay for so many yards of cloth. Under the free trade policy the wheat is in Minnesota; the fleece is in Australia. The wheat travels 5,000 miles to Liverpool and pays the tax of transportation. The Australia fleece travels 17,000 miles to Liverpool and also pays the tax of transportation. It is there made into cloth and it is brought 5,000 miles to Minnesota to the farmer, who has to pay all that transportation. Now, would it not be better, my farmer friends, if your two or three bushels of wheat could find that fleece in Minneapolis or Redwood Falls? Would it not be better that the railroad companies instead of the steamship company had received the benefit of a much shorter transportation? Would it not be far better to have several enterprises settle right in the state and develop its resources than to have it given over to agriculture and have the farmers importing all the manufactured articles that they might want? I would tax luxuries, of course, but I would tax them for another reason than is commonly assigned. I would tax them in order that they might be produced right in our midst. There is no class of manufacture that pays so highly in wages as that of luxuries. It would give diversified employment and that always tends to the advancement of the community. For years we have been the greatest agricultural country in the world. We want to be the greatest manufacturing country as well. The marvelous advancement which we have made—I am firmly persuaded and, in fact, I am prepared to stake my political existence upon it—is the policy of the Republican party.

IN REGARD TO THE CURRENCY.

The Minnesota farmer has been producing a surplus for a great many years. "America has produced a surplus for a great many years, so that the currency of this country to-day in coin is $1,200,000,000 in about equal proportions of gold and silver. When some fellow comes around and asks you whether you do not want a baser metal, which will drive out gold, tell him that you are a producer, that you are selling your surplus and that you want the best money that the surplus will bring. If you are going down hill and are insolvent and are a general financial wreck, and never expect to benefit your position, then you want to depreciate currency to pay off the man you owe. But as Minnesota produces a surplus of wheat and barley, why of course Minnesota producers, farmers and manufacturers and wage earners, want the best currency that the world can give."

Concluding Mr. Davis urged upon the members of the convention to go home and think the subject over. "Do your own thinking and settle in your own minds that this policy is the best for the country and place the matter before the people in your respective localities, so that the people of the state can fully understand the issues and their bearing upon the prosperity of this country and be prepared to act during the coming contest."

DECLARATION OF PRINCIPLES.

It was 3:30 o'clock when D. W. Bruckart of St. Cloud reported on behalf of the committee on resolutions, and read this ringing declaration of Republican principles:

The Republicans of the State of Minnesota in convention assembled renew their declaration of belief in the principles of the Republican party.

We declare our belief in the principle of protection to American labor, American industries and American homes.

We believe in such reciprocal trade with the nations of the world as will enlarge the markets for the products of our farms and factories without increasing the competition which tends to destroy our home markets and degrade our labor.

We believe in an honest dollar, worth a hundred cents wherever the sun shines; in an abundant currency based on gold and silver, and in such legislation as will make towards an international agreement to fix a staple ratio between the money metals.

We reaffirm our devotion to the supreme and inalienable right of every American citizen in every state in the Union to cast one free ballot in any election and to have that ballot counted as cast. Continued denial of such right should result in decreased representation in congress and in the electoral college.

The soldiers and sailors who saved the Union deserve, and shall continue to receive, just recognition at the hands of the Republican party.

Our Republican senators and the Republican representative from Minnesota deserve and have the hearty appreciation of all citizens of the Northwest for their labors in behalf of the improvement of the waterways to the sea, bringing our fields nearer the markets of the world; and for their efforts to secure such legislation as will protect our farm products from the operations of the systems whereby food values are at the mercy of gamblers.

We heartily endorse the wise and statesmanlike administration of Benjamin Harrison. It has faithfully fulfilled every pledge of the party. It has courageously upheld the nation's honor and dignity at home and abroad. It has promoted peace and prosperity in every section of the Union. It has maintained our credit. It has widened the influence of our ideas and institutions. It has been broadly patriotic—a government for the whole people. During this administration every American citizen, however humble, has been protected wherever he may have been by the flag of America upheld by the strong arms of Benjamin Harrison and James G. Blaine.

DELEGATES AND ELECTORS.

The convention next proceeded to elect four delegates at large to the national convention. J. A. Tawney nominated the Hon. Stanford Newel of Ramsey, and Col. King nominated John S. Pillsbury of Hennepin, both eulogizing the gentlemen named. These two nominations were made by acclamation.

J. Q. Adams nominated F. L. McGhee "on behalf of 7,000 Afro-Americans in the State of Minnesota."

Mr. Towne of St. Couis nominated F. P. Daugherty of Duluth.

John Lind nominated Frank A. Day of Martin county.

A viva-voce vote was taken and Daugherty and Day were elected by acclamation.

The following were elected alternates: Dr. Kee Wakefield, of McCloud; E. R. Cornwell, of Wabasha; J. N. Stacey, of Wright and F. L. McGhee, of Ramsey. Mr. McGhee declined the honor and E. E. Corliss was elected in his place.

The next business was the nomination of presidential electors, two at large and one from each congressional district. F. L. McGhee of Ramsey county and Patrick Fox of Chisago were chosen as electors at large, and the districts nominated as follows:

First—A. D. Gray, Fillmre.
Second—E. C. Huntington, Cottonwood.
Third—S. P. Jennison, Goodhue.
Fourth—E. L. Hospes, Washington.
Fifth—H. F. Brown, Hennepin.
Sixth—W. A. Culkin, Wright.
Seventh—H. W. Donaldson, Kittson.

R. G. EVANS RE-ELECTED.

This over, H. W. Philips of Duluth moved that as an expression of gratitude for the valuable services rendered the party by Robert G. Evans of Hennepin he be re-elected national committeeman.

D. F. Reese submitted the name of Stanford Newel, but after John Lind had decared for R. G. Evans he withdrew the nomination and Mr. Evans was elected by acclamation. In thanking the covention for the honor done him Mr. Evans predicted a glorious victory in the fall.

Before leaving the platform Mr. Evans said:

SENATOR DAVIS ENDORSED.

"I have another resolution to offer, and it is not the result of premeditation that offer it. I move that it is the sense of this convention that the Hon. Cushman K. Davis succeed himself as United States senator."

Instantly there was such an outburst of cheering that the hall shook, and it subsided only to be renewed when the governor rose and said:

"I don't belong to this convention, but I belong to the Republican party of Minnesota, and I second the motion. [Cheers.] Every one join in the cheers for Senator Davis."

Three cheers did not suffice. It was an ovation to which Senator Davis could scarcely find words to reply.

"My friends," said he, "this is one of the moments in a man's life which beggar expression. Such a testimonial, so spontaneous and so undeserved and yet so earnestly worked for by its recipient, touches my heart. I can do no more than confess my inability to respond, but assure you that I shall carry the memory of this moment to the end of life."

A speech from W. H. Eustis and the passage of a resolution instructing the state central committee to fill any vacancy which may occur either among the delegates or electors brought the convention to a close.

TROUBLE EXPECTED.

The Trouble With Miners at Wallace, Idaho, Nearing a Crisis.

Spokane, Wash., Special, May 10—Word was received here to-day from Wallace, Idaho, that the troubles which have existed between the mine owners' association and the miners' union at Cœur d'Alene for the past four months are rapidly nearing a crisis. The mine owners have secured an injunction through the United States district court at Boise City restraining the members of the miners' union and their sympathizers from the East in any way interfering with the hundred non-union miners who will be shipped in from the East during the next few days. In order to carry out this programme the mine owners have secured Joe Warren, the Spokane detective, to deputize a sufficient force of special officers to serve the injunction. Warren is said to have been in Lewiston, Genesee and Moscow recruiting men for the guard service. He will arrive in Wallace Tuesday or Wednesday with at least fifty deputies, some of whom are said to have been recruited across the Idaho line. The injunction when served will practically proclaim martial law, and any one interfering with non-union men will be arrested for contempt of court and tried before the United States district court at Boise. The central executive committee of the miners' union will employ counsel at once and endeavor to raise the injunction, which, they claim, was secured through a misrepresentation of facts. The sheriff of Spokane county is said to have it in his power to deputize the entire community to arrest all invaders interfering with the process of civil law. This course may be pursued. The miners are determined not to be beaten in their fight if possible. The outlook is decidedly ominous, and trouble of a serious nature is expected to occur at almost any moment. Great excitement prevails at Wallace and crowds of people can be seen on the streets earnestly discussing the situation.

SCRIBES ON A VACATION.

Many Editors on Their Way to the National Convention.

Chicago, May 10.—Several hundred of the delegates to the eighth annual convention of the National Editorial association, which convenes in San Francisco May 24, were in Chicago to-day. The bulk of the delegates representing the Eastern, Central and Northwestern states reached here last night in special trains and are quartered at the Auditorium and Victoria hotels. The delegates swarmed the rotundas of the two hotels this morning and the editors speedily became acquainted. The states represented were Illinois, Indiana, North Dakota, Iowa, Ohio, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, all the New England states, New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Nebraska and Rhode Island. This afternoon two sections of a special train left for Kansas City and there the party will be joined by the delegates from the South and start from St. Louis to-day. Wednesday the editors will reach Colorado Springs, where two days will be spent, and on the second day the delegates will attend the dedication exercises of the Childs-Drexel Home for Indigent Printers. The convention meets at San Francisco May 24-26, and the delegates will travel by easy stages, going via New Mexico, Arizona and Lower California.

INFRINGEMENT OF PATENTS

An Important Suit Won by the National Cash Registry Company.

Philadelphia, Special, May 10.—In the United States circuit court here decrees were entered in the cases of the National Cash Registry Compny of Dayton, Ohio, against Henry Nuss, Jr., John C. Hare and William Stonebach, users of the American cash register. Defendants were enjoined from using the American cash register, which was declared an infringement of the National Cash Register company's patents. An accounting was ordered upon which damages will be assessed against Henry Nuss, Jr., John C. Hare and William Stonebach and in favor of the National company.

MANY CATHOLICS PRESENT.

The Coronation of St. Joseph at Depere, Wis.

Depere, Wis., May 10—This city was yesterday the scene of a most imposing and a unique ceremony—the coronation of St. Joseph. This solemn event was a special favor granted by Pope Leo XII. to the arch fraternity of St. Joseph, established in St. Joseph's church, and can take place only once in the United States. Bishop Messmer sang pontifical high mass. Thousands of Catholics were present from all parts of the United States. The crowns are made of pure gold, studded with precious stones, all gifts of members of the arch confraternity, and their value is placed at $6,000.

Catholics and Elks.

Cincinnati, May 10.—At a recent burial of a member of the Order of Elks, who was a Catholic, a request was made to Archbishop Elder, of the Roman Catholic church, to allow the reading of the Elks' ritual at the burial service. The archbishop being absent, Chancellor Moeller wrote to the secretary of the Elks lodge that the reading would not be allowed. Archbishop Elder has returned and says the letter of the chancellor was dictated by himself; that the Catholic church recognizes no religion or religious service but its own and therefore does not permit in any of its cemeteries the reading of any so-called religious ritual or ceremony. Even the ritual of the G. A. R. is forbidden. There is no possibility of the order of Chancellor Moeller being countermanded by the archbishop.

Prayer and Self-Denial.

New York, May 10.—For one week, beginning to-day, the members of the Salvation Army, wherever the association has a branch, will deny themselves of some article of food or clothing and send the money saved to this city for the work of the society. "The universal week of prayer and self-denial" is the name of this annual session.

Drowned in the High Water.

Marshalltown, Iowa, Special, May 10.—While attempting to cross a bayou of the Iowa river on horseback this evening to rescue some cattle imperiled by high water, George Dumbleton, proprietor of the largest dairy in this section, was drowned. He leaves a family.

At Salt Lake City, Utah, while Mrs. Ensenberger and a friend, the wife of a wealthy wool grower, were sitting in their room three masked men entered the apartment with revolvers in hand and robbed them of $6,000 in jewelry and $175.

Republican Congressmen.

Washington, May 10.—The Republican congressional committee held a meeting tonight. Hon. Joseph Walker of Mississippi was elected temporary chairman. The following persons were constituted a committee to report at a future meeting a plan of organization and a list of permanent officers:

J. H. Walker, Massachusetts. Middle states—J. H. Ketcham, New York. Western states—Bishop Perkins, Kansas. Northwestern states—W. F. Sanders, Montana. Border States—J. H. Wilson, Kentucky. Southern states—John C. Houk, Tennessee. Pacific states—Binger Herman, Oregon.

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER XII.—Continued.

I could not see Van Hoeck from the cross-roads, but, on turning the angle of the lane at the foot of the hill, I perceived him feeling the way with painful slowness, and on the side of the hedgerow, a hundred yards in advance. Hearing my step he turned, and, recognizing it, came to meet me. He seemed to forget the danger of making a false step, and advanced with eager quickness,—his whole body partaking the expression of anxiety imprinted on his features.

"Is it you, Thorne?" he called.

"Yes," I replied.

"What has happened?"

I waited until I got up to him, then putting my hand on his shoulder, I said,—

"I have bad news for you, Van Hoeck."

He trembled violently under my hand, and opened his lips to speak, but no sound came; his condition was pitiable, and to keep him no longer in suspense, I said,—

"I have lost it. It has been taken from me."

"Who has taken it?" he asked, in a thick, husky voice.

"I can not say. I could not see the man who robbed me."

He was silent for a time, and then his feelings found expression at first in execration, then in incoherent sentences, broken up with words of Dutch where the English tongue failed to give sufficient force to his anger and mortification. He assailed me with every kind of invective, accused me of cowardice, of complicity in robbing him, of I know not what baseness and heartlessness,—indeed, it seemed as though the blow had deprived him of reason for the moment. At length, when his passion was somewhat exhausted, he said,—

"And what is your defense?"

I took his arm, and, as I led him up the hill toward the cross-roads, I went over the story once more. When I was telling him how Lola had come to my rescue, he stopped me.

"That is a lie!" he said; for she has been with me.

"Impossible!" I exclaimed.

"Impossible according to your story, but it is the truth for all that. I got off the path, and could not find my way back. She led me to a road—God knows where!—and left me."

"When?"

"How can I tell? The night has been an age."

"Granting she led you for an hour—and you would scarcely suffer her to lead you longer,—that would allow her to return to the Abbey, and come to my rescue at the time I speak of."

"Have it as you will; it makes no difference now. She got me out of the way, and that was her object in being there. Go on."

I came to the end of my narrative, and then suggested that the theft might be traced to one of the servants.

"Anything to shield Brace," he said bitterly; and then, stamping his foot, he added, "You know he took it!"

It was useless reasoning with him in his present condition.

"You stand convicted by your own statement," he continued: "what ordinary thief would be fool enough, having obtained the diamond, to wait there, risking discovery, and jeopardize his own life—for the sake of butchering you? If Brace was the thief, such a thing is possible; for he must kill both you and me to profit by the possession of the diamond. Where is he now?"

"With Lola, in the woods looking for you!"

"What already!" he exclaimed, in alarm, "He is losing no time. Where are the woods?"

"We are in them now," I replied, for we had passed the cross-roads.

He stopped short. Shaking off my hand, he muttered, in a tone of dread,—

"Are you three hunting together."

"Be reasonable, Van Hoeck," I said.

"I am," he replied; "leave me here."

I made no reply; and we stood there in the middle of the road, he quaking with fear, and turning his head from side to side to catch the sound that might confirm his fears. He looked like a hunted beast, that knows not which way to escape the hounds.

"What's that!" he asked under his breath quickly. "There's some one on the road. It's his step. If you have any mercy, save me from him."

While I was turning to look up the road, to see if his fears were justified, he groped about until he caught hold of my arm.

I had heard no sound, but his finer sense was not at fault. On the brow of the hill—which we were now descending—stood the guant figure of Brace. The light of the rising sun shone upon him; but we stood in the shadow of the wood, where the mist still hung over the trodden earth.

"I do not hear him; where is he now?" Van Hoeck whispered.

"He is standing on the hill, a couple of hundred yards behind us. He does not see us."

"If we could but get to the Abbey! Forget what I said, Thorne. Have pity on me," he murmured.

"What do you want me to do?"

"Lead me back to the Abbey. If I escape from that man now, I may protect myself after."

I saw no possible reason for refusing compliance with this request, and, taking his arm, I led him along that side of the road where the shade was deeper. But before we had gone a dozen yards, a shrill whoop rang through the echoing woods to our right, and Van Hoeck again stopped. I looked in vain over the brake for Lola, whose cry I recognized; but, glancing up the road, I perceived that the Judge had heard the signal, and was coming after us. At the same moment Van Hoeck, starting forward cried:

"Quick, quick!—he sees us—he is coming down upon us!" and then, after another dozen yards, "Do you want him to overtake us that you stick to this cursed road?"

"I am looking for a path; we can not push through the brake." I replied.

Glancing over my shoulder, I saw the Judge, his shoulders bent forward, his arms swinging from side to side, bearing down upon us with long strides, and rapidly diminishing the distance between us.

"He is gaining upon us. How far are we from the Abbey?" asked Van Hoeck.

"Nearly two miles; we will run for it, if you like."

We ran for some distance. Again looking back, I saw the Judge still plodding on, with the same rhythmic swing of his long arms. Running had given us no sensible advantage; Van Hoeck's ear told him this. Drops of moisture stood on his livid face, the result of terror rather than exertion.

"There is no one in sight,—no one we can call to for help?" he asked.

"No one. I see a footpath through the wood, if you think that will be safer."

"Yes, yes—anything is better than this open road."

We took the path I had caught sight of. It was a good sound bridle way, covered with short turf; we ran along noiselessly. The angle we made shut off the view from the road. Brace could not cut off the corner without getting entangled in the undergrowth of briars, interwoven with the tall brake.

He must follow in our steps to overtake us. The danger lay in the straightness of the path, which kept the view open from the road. Our escape depended upon our finding a by-path that might deceive him as to the course we had taken. I explained this to Van Hoeck as we ran on.

"It is time we found one now, if we are to escape," he answered.

The next step brought us to a footpath that cut the bridle way at right angles.

Looking down the green ally toward the road, as we turned off from it, I could see nothing of the Judge. I thought we had beaten him.

But we advanced now with great difficulty. There was room only for one in the path, yet I had to keep hold of Van Hoeck's hand and guide him, for the brake met before us; the trailing brambles that crossed the path caught his feet; at every step he stumbled. It was hopeless to continue. Already I fancied I caught a glimpse, through the trees, of the Judge, swinging along the bridle way.

"Your only chance is to get amongst the brake, and throw yourself down while I go on," I said. "I can go quicker alone, and, coming behind, he may imagine that you are still before me."

"Show me where to go."

I opened a way through the brake, led him behind a thicket, and bade him lie down. As he carried out this instruction, I got back into the footpath, and was then enabled to trot along at a brisk pace.

It was only just in time, for, looking back a couple of minutes later, I perceived the Judge plowing his way through brake and bramble, which came well up to the level of his breast, with as little difficulty as though it had been meadow grass, and with the steady swing of his bent shoulders. He had caught sight of me from the bridle way, and struck out at once into the thick of the undergrowth.

I did not, in the slightest degree, participate in Van Hoeck's suspicions and fears, and, having, as I hoped, succeeded in diverting from him the object of his dread, I was indifferent as to whether the Judge overtook me or not. Had I been in the humor to enjoy a joke, I think I should have enjoyed giving him a long chase for nothing; but circumstances were too grave for that. I pursued the path until it dipped down into a hollow, and there, finding a fallen tree across the path, I sat down and waited for the Judge to come up. In a few minutes he stood before me with his arms folded on his chest, his feet planted apart, and a particularly stern look on his gaunt, weather-beaten face.

"He has given me the slip; has he given it to you likewise?" he asked.

"No," I replied; "I gave it to him. I helped him to escape."

"Stand up, Gentleman Thorne, and let us look each other in the face," he said.

I stood up. He held out his hand, and I gave him mine.

"Now, standin' here hand in hand and face to face, say, air we the noblest works of natur'? or air we not?"

I could not go so far as to admit that his appearance realized my highest ideal of nobility, but I understood his allusion, and replied:

"I believe you are an honest man, if that is what you mean, Brace."

"It is; and that is my opinion of you likewise. Let us sit down and hold a committee. Now, pardner, will you tell me why you left Israel get?"

"Because the poor wretch is half distracted with the loss of the diamond and his fear of you."

"Why do he fear me?"

"He believes that you took the diamond, and intend to have his life, in order to get the reversionary share, or something of that kind. And now, tell me why you pursued him when you saw he wished to avoid you!"

"Because he did so wish for one thing," and, he added, with emphasis, "because he's got to speak," he repeated, with still greater decision. "A man what has presentiments as a thing is going to be took so accurate as hisn, must nat'rally have presentiments what's gone of it when it's took."

"And suppose he can not tell you?"

"Well, then, he's got to try till he do. As a Judge, I've had to try a pretty considerable number of bad lots, but a more durned onprepossessing lot than Israel I never yet sentenced to a well-airned gallus. End 'mark this, pardner; ef Israel was charged with this crime, and it was my duty to direc' the jury as to the verdic' they should well and truly find, I should direc' them to bring him in guilty, or I'd lock 'em up till they did."

"You are as unreasonable in your suspicions as Van Hoeck is in his; but you have not his excuse,—you are not under the influence of fear."

"Because I hev nothing to be afeer'd on, Gentleman Thorne."

"Tell me how on earth it is possible for a man in Van Hoeck's condition—a man absolutely helpless, as we know him to be—to accomplish a feat of this kind?"

"I don't say he did it, pardner,—I don't say he took the Great Hesper; on the other hand, I don't say he didn't. But I am free to maintain that he knows all about it. If you ask me how he knows it, I'd tell you as I don't know, but that's no reason why we should try fur to find out. We ain't so everlasting clever that there's nothing more to be larnt out of this almighty universe, take my word for it. And though we hev drawed a pretty good lot of truth out of the well, we ain't yet come to the last bucketfull,—not by a long way. One of the things we hev got to larn, concerns Israel's presentiments, and," he added emphatically, "I'm goin to larn it."

"We must get back to the house. The police must be sent for."

"I don't see what harm they can do, and it's the reg'lar thing, so they ought to be called in," he said, rising from the trunk on which he had been holding this discussion; "I am going for Israel. So long!"

I hesitated to separate from the Judge.

"You must promise me, Brace, not to commit violence on Van Hoeck."

"If you mean by violence taking his life away, I will give you my word not to be violent with him. Ther's my hand on it."

On this understanding, we shook hands and parted. He plunged again into the wood; I returned to the Abbey. That was between seven and eight o'clock.

At two o'clock, I went once more into the wood. Lola was wanted.

The police officer from Southampton, on hearing my story, declared at once that the theft had been committed by a servant, and that Lola must be found at once, to know if she had seen the thief as he escaped by the window, and could identify him.

To find Lola, however was not my sole object.

The protracted absence of Brace and Van Hoeck excited my misgivings, and, despite the Judge's promise, I already reproached myself with having abandoned my blind partner. The Judge's notions of justice were peculiar, and based upon the rough usage of Californian miners in the days when they made and executed their own laws. I believed him capable of applying torture, only stopping short of actual murder, to wring from Van Hoeck the secret which he believed him to hold with respect to the lost diamond.

I retraced my steps to the spot where I had helped to conceal Van Hoeck. The broken brake marked a distinct trail, and in a pit less than a hundred yards from that point, the undergrowth was beaten down, as if a struggle had taken place.

Was it not possible that Brace had gone father than he intended, and killed Van Hoeck? Had he concealed the body, and fled with his daughter to escape the consequence of his act?

Asking myself these questions, I followed a track from the pit that brought me into the bridle way. Looking for further traces of a passage through the brake, I made my way down toward the road.

TO BE CONTINUED.

PATES DE FOIE GRAS.

They Are Easily Made and Don't Cost Much.

Anybody can make paté de foi gras out of good fat goose liver which may be had from any farmer. This is the way:

Cut six of them in halves. Then remove the yellow part containing the gall. Wash them thoroughly in milk—they must not be touched with water. Lard eight of the halves with truffles, cut into strips. The remaining four are thinly sliced and pounded. Stirred into this mixture are two tablespoons of finely chopped shallot or small onion browned in butter, two tablespons of truffles treated in the same way, salt, thyme, white pepper and nutmeg. Two pounds of fresh paunch fat which has been previously boiled for an hour and cooled is then cut up and added to the above. The mixture is then thoroughly pounded and run through a sieve, says the New York Sun.

It is necessary to have ready some little earthenware dishes. Very pretty and suitable colored wares can be found at the Oriental shops and in Moorish potteries. Line these throughout with thin slices of bacon. Then put in a layer of paste and a layer of larded liver, alternating until the dish is full. The paste should be the last layer. Cover with a layer of bacon. Put the cover on and hermetically seal it with a strip of gummed paper and bake in a slow oven for two hours. It should be on an old plate, as some of the melted fat is likely to run out. The amount of the receipt given here would cost at least $3 if imported.

No Restrictions.

Bagley: "I never restrict my wife. She does exactly as she pleases."

Bailey: "And you?"

Bagley: "I do exactly as she pleases too."

BREVITIES.

Wheat is 64 cents.

Traveling men were numerous in town to-day.

Andrew Hall went down to Crookston to-day on business.

Rev. James Moody left to-day for Crookston on business.

This spring is at least one month later than last spring.

If you want to insure your buildings against fire, call at this office.

James O'Brien, of Red Lake Falls, was in town a short time to-day.

M. E. Bjerk made a business trip to Crookston the first of the week.

W. W. Emmons, of Minneapolis, was doing business in town yesterday.

Atty. I. C. Richardson, of Thief River Falls, was in town last Monday on his way to Warren.

T. Onstad came over from Grafton N. D, last Monday and is making his friends here a visit.

Look over the advertisement of E. T. Spafford & Co. which appears for the first time in this issue.

Leonard Holmes left last week for his old home in Goodhue County and will be absent several weeks,

Joseph Hock, of Crookston, was in town the first of the week buying cattle for a Crookston firm.

Fred Eikhoff made a short trip to Thief River Falls yesterday. He says that the roads are almost impassible.

Business has been very slack the past week as it is almost impossible for the farmers to get into town with a team

The stage between here and Crookson has not been able to run the past week on account of the impassible roads,

Mrs. J. C. Dahl returned last Friday from the southern part of the state, where she has been visiting friends for a couple of weeks,

To-day is the first clear day we have had in a long time. It is to be hoped that we have seen the last of wet weather for a while at least.

S. M. Dainard left last Monday for a short visit to his parents in Picton, Canada. He has not been back for several years and will undoubtedly enjoy his visit,

Messrs. Webster and Munson, who have been here a couple of weeks with a Norman stallion, have about concluded the sale of the horse to a company of farmers east of here.

J. L. Johnson is now nicely situated with his drugstore in the building opposite the post office. He has fixed things up in attractive shape and will undoubtedly do considerable more business,

The city election at St. Paul last week resulted in the overwhelming defeat of the Democrats, Col. Wright and the entire independant Republican ticket were elected by over four thousand majority.

We learn that the Red Lake Falls band are thinking of coming up here and giving a dance in Hoff's Hall on the evening of May 17th. Come up boys and we will try and make it interesting.

George Ralph with a surveying crew of fifteen men passed through here today enroute for the High Landing where he will Commence on his contract to survey sixteen townships. He expects to be gone about three months

We understand that they are charging one dollar per hundred to carry freight from here to Thief River Falls. The roads are said to be in worse condition than ever before and five hundred pounds is a good load for a four horse team,

As candidates are being brought out for different county offices, we can think of no more capable man for County Attorney than Ira C. Richardson of this place. He has had two terms experiance in Marshall County, besides an urgent offer for the coming term if he would locate in that county, and besides being a very able and efficient lawyer, he is endowed with good, sound business judgement and an abundance of that kind of push and energy that is so necessary in a prosperous and growing country.—Thief River Falls Press.

The Mormons who are moving to Mexico under a guarantee from the Mexican government that their peculiar institution will not be interfered with, are perhaps oblivious of the fact that Spanish-American promises are made only to be broken whenever it is conveniant or profitable to do so. Still the average Mormon is an adept in the Punic faith business.—Pioneer Press.

Henry K. Ytterhous, who has been teaching a Norwegian shool here, met with a serious accident this morning. He was trying to shoot a Winchester rifle and in some way discharged a cartridge before it was in the gun. The powder was blown into his face and eyes making a very serious wound. He went down to Crookston to-day to consult a doctor.

The business of the U. S. Land Office during the past quarter at Crookston shows a marked improvement over that of last year. During the quarter ending March 31st. the officials inform us that there were 178 homestead entries made embracing 23,924.67 acres of land. This is an increase of 85 per cent over the corresponding period of last year.—Crookston Times.

Work was commenced last week at Red Lake Falls on the Great Northern grade. The village has settled with the company in the right-of-way matter and the work is being pushed by a large crew of men. We understand that the company intends to finish the line as soon as possible from here to the Fosston line and they may conclude to connect at Park Rapids this year giving us a direct line south.

Never hire a person and set him to work, nor hire and go to work, without first having the price fixed upon. Many lawsuits have arisen from such neglect. Never sign a paper no matter how simple a matter it may appear to relate to without first carefully reading it, and if you do not thoroughly understand it, have it explained before you sign it. These are simple rules, but they are the only safe ones to avoid misunderstanding.—Ex.

The weather the past week has been simply villianous. It has rained every day with one exception during the week. Farmers have been unable to do any work and the prospects for a harvest never looked worse. Not over five per cent of the seeding has been done and it is safe to say that not over twenty-five per cent of last years acreage will be sown to wheat this spring. There is no use of disguising the fact that farmers will have the poorest season in the last ten years.

The pleasantries of war are now being illustrated in Venezuela where President Palaceo has captured the son of the leading revolutionary general and apprised the parent that he will shoot the lad should the rebel forces come within a league of Caracas. The father has informed Palacio that, should he carry out the threat, he will in turn be burned at the stake by the bereaved parent. A perceptible degree of earnest hostility is revealed by this correspondance which cannot fail to be discouraging to those who believe the world is getting better with great rapidity.—Pioneer Press.

They say that Cleveland can't carry New York and Indiana, and that Harrison can't carry the four silver states—Colorado, Montana, Idaho and Nevada In the Colorado Republican convention a resolution indorsing President Harrison received but two votes out of a total of 625, and in the midwinter New York convention Cleveland's name wasn't even mentioned. State Auditor Poe, of Ohio, didn't miss it very far when he declared the distribution of Federal patronage has become so fruitful a source of party weakness that neither of the two so evenly divided parties can afford to nominate a president for reelection.—Louisville Times.

Judge Mills will be here on Saturday and hold an adjourned term of court to hear several court cases, motions, etc. The last term of court will be one of about forty days duration but the session of Saturday will thoroughly clean up the calendar. The spring term also commences this month but there is nothing of importance yet upon the calendar except the suit brought by the heirs of Ludvig Olson, the man who burned to death in the Fosston jail, against the village of Fosston to recover $5,000 damages for the loss of life. A. A. Miller is attorney for plaintiffs and W. H. Averill assisted by H. Steenerson for defendant.—Crookston Times.

Chicago May 4th.—If the story of Andrew Rudman is to be believed Chicago has a full-fledged suicide society, two members of which attempted to take their own lives during the night. One, Joseph Kraker, went quietly to Douglas park, put a bullet through his brain and dropped dead. The other, Rudman himself, tried to add a little sensation to his taking off and is still alive and uninjured. He began by stealing $30 with which he purchased a revolver. He then called on his sweetheart, Eva Dresslar, shot at her without effect, chased her father around the block, firing as he ran, sent a couple of bullets through the front door as the disappearing parent reached the house, shot a small boy, shot at his own head and missed and finally wound up by sending a ball through the coat of a policeman who arrested him. Now he confesses he belonged to a suicide club of which Kraker was also a member.

A shocking accident occured at the farm of Nup Christianson in this town on Sunday afternoon. Lewis Lewiston's and Mr. Christianson's children were playing in the barn with a revolver and supposing it was not loaded were pointing it at the wall of the barn, and snapping the hammer. One of Mr. Christianson's girls who had not been playing with the other children, went up the stairs to join them in the upper story of the barn. As her head appeared above the landing one of Lewis Lewiston's boys pointed the revolver at her and fired, the revolver having a cartridge in one of the chambers. The ball struck the child just above the eye and penetrated backward. Dr. McEachran was called but could not extract it. Although she is alive at present, no hopes are entertained of her recovery. —McIntosh News.

The democratic house has passed at least one bill that we should like to see become a law, namely the one putting binding twine on the free list. The manufacture of binding twine is controlled by a gigantic trust, the National Cordage Company, which for years has bled the farmers putting up prices, on an article of necessity for every wheat raiser, to suit their own greed. This hoggish concern is not entitled to even the small protection of seven-tenths cents per pound which it enjoys under the McKinley bill. Let binding twine be placed on the free list. Whenever it is found that manufacturers in this country combine for the purpose of controlling the price on any article by limiting production or otherwise they should be considered to have forfeited their right to production and such article or articles should be admitted free of duty.—Warren Sheaf.

Marshall County Leader. The Leader is done with prophesying the price of wheat. It has not been conspicuously successful in hitting it every time just right and we shall never try to induce the farmers to hold their wheat or let it go upon our judgement. But we wish to say right here that unless people all all over the world quit eating wheat wheat will be valuable property during the next year. We will wager the printing office and the dog (all we expect to own if this weather keeps on a few weeks longer) that wheat will not go begging again for a year as it has during the last six months.

The Indian crop is harvested and is much below that of last year. The acreage according to the government report was considerably reduced. The famine in Russia has caused frightful mortality to the horses and other farm stock and the wheat acreage will be very light. The winter grain there is also in very bad condition. France is in good condition, England bad, Germany bad, Hungary bad, and the condition of wheat in the United States alarming. Our last government crop report made the average condition of winter wheat about 77, a very low condition by comparison with former years and one that will undoubtedly be lowered in the next report which is due Tuesday.

The spring wheat prospects of the United States is perhaps the most serious thing of all and has hardly been glanced at by the Chicago bears, who seem to regard the actual value of whea to be equal to so much dirt. North Dakota and Northern Minnesota produce one-half the spring wheat grown in this country. These two sections will grow not to exceed 40 per cen. of their usual acreage, and that under conditions not at all favorable to a large yield.

SEPARATION.

Ah! we were very near tonight
The simple word for which we longed,
And there were moments when I thought
Our impulses could not be wronged!

Why was it, when you changed your place
And passed on close behind my chair,
That all the life within me thrilled
With pleasure that was half despair?

Why was it that I felt your gaze
Still fixed upon me as I read,
Yet, with a strange, defiant fear,
Refused too well to turn my head?

How came it that we lingered on
As one by one the rest withdrew,
Till, without seeing, I was sure
That I was left alone with you?

Could you not hear my pages fast
Turned over with a restless hand?
Did they not whisper all your wish
In words not hard to understand?

A word had done it! With a flash
Of heaven's own light from heart to heart,
Resistless love had rent the pride
That kept our pent up lives apart!

But ere it came a sudden breath,
The rising wind of common life,
Blew cool upon us; and we sighed
And turned us to our lonely strife.
—S. W. Scadding in Toronto Truth.

Mr. William Goat.

On board a man-of-war there are usually several pets. Their presence is not frowned upon by the authorities, for the life of a sailor is monotonous, and a harmless diversion is welcome to both officers and men. Some one of these pets is usually a favorite, and is recognized by all, from the captain to the apprentice boy, as the ship's mascot. The cruiser Baltimore has for her mascot a goat.

When she was put in commission he was duly entered on the ship's papers as "William Goat." He is an old salt, having been brought up in Uncle Sam's navy from a kid. The first cutter is the only boat in which he will allow himself to be taken ashore. He listens to the service every Sunday morning in an exemplary manner.—New York News.

How He Knew Him.

An actor in one of the Broadway theaters not long ago gave the name of one of Dr. Houghton's curates as reference in a business transaction. The merchant made haste to the Little Church Around the Corner and preferred his request for particulars concerning the financial standing and reliability of his proposed customer. "Indeed," said the reverend gentleman hastily, "I can give you no guaranty, my good sir; I have merely a desultory acquaintance with the gentleman, as he is not a member of our church." "Why, that's very strange," said the merchant, perplexedly; "he told me that he came here regularly." "He does," returned the curate, with a reminiscent smile; "he always gets me to marry him.—New York Press.

Hunting on Treacherous Soil.

Snipe shooting on an Irish bog is an excellent test of a gunner's skill and enthusiasm.

An experienced bog shooter, if he finds himself going down, throws himself flat on his side or back and at the same time throws his gun to his attendant, generally an unshod "gossoon," who rarely fails to catch it.

The sensation of being bogged is very unpleasant, but if a man throws himself on his side or back there is strength enough in the peat to support his body.—"Forty-five Years of Sport."

Particles in the Air.

In the air there is dust that has risen from the ground and been transplanted from afar by the winds; there is powdery matter that has been ejected from the interior of the earth by volcanoes: there are minute particles of meteoritic matter that come floating down out of interstellar space, and there is a great variety of living germs and organisms, some of which produce disease and death.—Youth's Companion.

A Monster Temple.

The largest heathen temple in the world is in Seringham, and it comprises a square, each side being one mile in length, inside of which are six other squares. The walls are twenty-five feet high and five feet thick, and the hall where pilgrims congregate is supported by a thousand pillars, each cut from a single block of stone.—Boston Globe.

Beet Sugar Bounties.

Beet sugar growers in Washington should be encouraged to increase their acreage by the fact that the government has paid claims for beet sugar bounties amounting to $215,404, distributed as follows: Nebraska, $52,974; California, $139,534, and Utah, $21,898.—Seattle Telegraph.

A Marion county (Ia.) physician is the owner of a remarkable human monstrosity—a male child sixteen inches long, weighing 9¼ pounds, its head the perfect counterpart of that of some gigantic serpent.

The oldest newspaper in the world is said to be The King-pan or capital sheet, which is published at Peking, China. It first appeared in 911 and since 1312 has not missed a single weekly issue.

Chardin saw a ruby in Persia which had the head and name of Sheik Sephi engraved upon one side and the figure of a serpent on the other.

DAKOTA'S HISTORIC GROUND.

The Pullman Car Speeds by the Spots Where Crook and Custer Fought.

The Northern Pacific spans the river just four miles north of what is known as Custer's Crossing, and I could see from the windows of the Pullman car the tops of the amphitheater of hills amid which General Crook's brigade encamped in the dreary fall of 1876, tentless, rationless and under a pelting rain which converted the whole country around into a veritable quagmire. The contrast between my wretched, muddy bivouac of that time and the comforts of civilization on wheels as now experienced made me feel as if sixty instead of sixteen years had passed since that unpleasant yet stirring period.

"Are we out of Dakota yet?" inquired a stout man, one of a party of four engaged in playing whist across the aisle in the sleeper.

"Pretty nearly," I answered, as I saw the well remembered crests of Sentinel buttes—the outlying pickets of the mighty battle line of the Little Missouri bluffs—rising only a short distance away on our right. Crook's scouts had a skirmish there with a body of Indians in the memorable Slim buttes campaign. On our left I could see distinctly the two razor backed bluffs through which the brigade, all bedraggled and disgusted, had defiled toward the Little Missouri in 1876, and the remembrance of many a brave comrade now no more caused a feeling of sadness to steal over me. We had camped on Andrew's creek and on Beaver creek, called also the Indian Fork of the Little Missouri, at the period to which I had referred. Crook's soldiers were mustered in the valley of the latter stream, according to the bimonthly custom.

I wondered how many of those brave and stalwart men would now respond to roll call on this side of eternity. But, though the old campaigners have mostly passed away, the valleys remain, and they are among the most fertile to be found in the great cattle ranges of eastern Montana. Night had fallen as we passed rapidly—for the train goes fast on that section of the road—Glendive, O'Fallon, Blatchford, Powder River Crossing and Miles City—all famous in Indian history, the latter being on the site of General Miles' cantonment in 1876-7, when he inflicted such heavy blows upon the hostiles of that region.

A number of soldiers of the Twenty-second infantry, a regiment long and gloriously associated with the frontier, got on the cars at Miles bound for their post at Fort Keogh, only three miles westward. We stopped at the fort depot to let them off and heard the challenge of the sentinels and the rattle of arms as, one by one, they passed in. A short, compactly built officer came upon the platform as we were leaving, and I thought I recognized in him my old friend Major W. H. Powell, distinguished in warfare against the savages. The last station I heard called out was Rosebud. Sixty or more miles north, near the headwaters of the stream, Crook fought his big battle with the combined Sioux and Cheyenne tribes on June 17, 1876, and up through that dark and winding canyon General Custer marched at the head of the Seventh cavalry less than a week later to the point where he turned off to the Little Big Horn, where he forfeited his life for his daring in the midst of a roaring flood of angry hostiles the 25th of that "month of battles."

It is a strange outcome that the northern Cheyennes, who fought against our troops more desperately than any of the other tribes, have their reservation established on the Rosebud near the field where Crook fought and within sight of the Custer battlefield. They are a brave and spirited tribe—the Spartans of the Indian race—and are held in more respect by their white neighbors than any other breed of savages. Poor fellows! Pinched with hunger as they have been, they have refrained from breaking the law, and many a generous ranchman has given them an occasional beef to "make their hearts feel good" during the hard times which seem ever to remain with this proud, gallant and justly renowned tribe of native Americans. Under favorable conditions the Cheyennes would sustain the pen pictures of Fenimore Cooper. They are the Mohicans of the west.—Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Labor Saving Devices.

Mamma—I wish you would go to Madam Modestte's and tell her that dress is too tight, and I want it altered.

Small Son (complainingly)—Madam Modestte's so far off, and I'm tired playin ball. Mayn't I go to a nearer dressmaker?

Mamma—Any other dressmaker won't do.

Small Son (after reflection)—Well, mayn't I go to the drug store around th' corner an get you a bottle of anti-fat?—Good News.

Good Looks Not a Disadvantage.

At a meeting of the board of education on Wednesday among the recommendations of the committee on finance was the appointment of Miss Rose A. Redgate, of Brooklyn, as a stenographer in the office of the clerk of the board. Before the vote was taken Commissioner O'Brien moved to substitute the name of Miss Hattie L. McCarthy for that of Miss Redgate. "Gentlemen," he said, "would you know why Miss McCarthy was not recommended for the place by our committee on finance? The objection to her was that she is good looking. Gentlemen, that is the first time since I have been a member of this board that I have known of a committee objecting to the handiwork of the Almighty. I do not profess to be an humanitarian, but I do not fear a beautiful woman." When the vote was taken Miss McCarthy was elected by a handsome majority.—New York Tribune.

TWEAKED A DUKE'S NOSE.

The Dwarf, Jeffrey Hudson and His Adventure in the King's Pie.

A magnificent feast had been prepared at Burleigh in honor of the king and Queen, and it was arranged that the little dwarf should step from a huge venison pastry into her majesty's service, says a writer in St. Nicholas. This mode of appearance was not new even then. A pie with a dwarf inside was thought a "dainty dish to set before a king,"—and a gift of that kind was often a road to the sovereign's favor.

On the day of the dinner Jeffrey found himself imprisoned in a large dish, surrounded by a high wall of standing crust. Of course a way had been found to give him air, but he afterward said he felt buried alive. To add to his discomfort, Buckingham slyly ordered the pie to be warmed, saying, "It were better eaten warm than cold."

Young Jeffery remained quiet and said never a word as the dish was carried to the kitchen; but he was far from happy, and thought of Nebuchadnezzar and the fiery furnace until he grew "warm with apprehension." The cook however understood the joke, and the dwarf-pie was placed in safety on the royal table. At last came the fateful time—the crowning moment of Jeffrey's life. The pie was opened, the trumpet sounded and forth sprang the dwarf. He was clad in a full suit of armor and skipped about the table, shaking his little sword at some of the guests; and, remembering the scorching the duke had threatened for him, he gave a vicious little tweak at his grace's nose. Buckingham drew back in time to save his handsome face and threatened to cudgel the young knave with a chicken bone, but the king laughed and said Buckingham was served quite right.

By this time Jeffrey was nearly deafened with applause and half drowned in the perfumes the ladies sprinkled upon him, so he hastened to end the scene by prostrating himself before the queen's plate and entreating to be taken into her service.

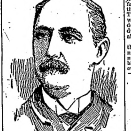
THE GREAT WORDS OF GREAT MEN

A Most Remarkable Array of Outspoken Statements From Men of Mark in Both Continents.

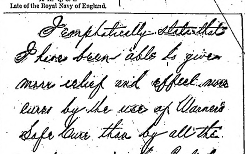
INTERESTING FACTS AND FACES.

The orator before the Senate called this "an age of progress." He was wrong. "Progress" does not half express it; it is an age of revolution. Revolutions carried on, not by armies but by discoveries, inventors and brain-workers. It is a marvelous age, an age when the ordinary will not be accepted, when the best is demanded. Our grandfathers were content to travel in stage coaches, to live in cabins and receive a mail once a week. We demand palace cars, tasteful homes and daily communication with the world. It is the rapid-transit age; the age of the telegraph and the telephone. A man speaks to-day and the entire world reads his words tomorrow morning. There are but twenty-four hours in the day, but forty-eight hours are crowded into it.

We all know how we have advanced materially. Do we realize how we have advanced scientifically? More than in any other manner. Indeed, it has been the advancement in science which has caused the advancement in material things. The discovery of steam permitted the railroad and the steamboat. The development of electricity made possible the telegraph and the telephone, so that the development of the sciences has been the real cause of all modern advancement.



WILLIAM EDWARD ROBESON, M. R. C. S. I., L. K. Q. C. I.
Late of the Royal Navy of England.



I emphatically state that I have been able to give more relief and effect more cures by the use of Warner's Safe Cure than by all the medicines in the British Pharmacoepoeia

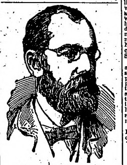
Wm Edwd Robson

We will take, for example, one department of science but the most important department. One which affects our very lives and happiness. Formerly the treatment of human ills was made a matter of superstition, of incantation, the same as it is by the medicine men of the Indians today. Gradually emerging from such blindness, it was still a matter of bigotry, of folly. What people must have suffered in those days can scarcely be imagined. They were bled, they were cupped, they were leeched, they were subjected to every device whereby their vitality could be reduced and their lives endangered. It is almost a wonder that the race survived.

There has been an absolute revolution in the practice of medicine and in the treatment of human ills. Instead of undermining the vital forces by cupping and bleeding, the vitality is now sustained in every possible manner. Instead of tearing down we seek to build up. Instead of increasing misery we seek to create happiness.

But the greatest advancement in medical science has been made by discovery. Harvey could afford to endure the ridicule of the world for revealing to it the grand discovery of the circulation of the blood. Jenner might be ostracised, but millions have benefited by his discovery of vaccination. Pasteur lived in a more enlightened age and escaped ridicule, while the world received the benefit which his discoveries have brought. Koch although forced to reveal his discovery before its perfection, will be revered by future generations.

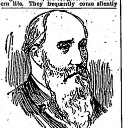
The discoveries of these great men have been of untold benefit to the world, and yet they were not in the line of the world's greatest need. Mankind has been suffering, enduring, dying from a cause far greater than small-pox, more terrible than hydrophobia and more subtle than consumption. The habits of modern life, the very inventions which have made civilization so great, have drained the vital forces of life and undermined the organs that sustain life. Ten years ago this great truth was realized by a gentleman whose own life was in sore jeopardy, and the discovery which he has given to the world has done and is doing more to-day to strengthen the vitality, lessen suffering, preserve the health and lengthen life than any of the discoveries of the other great men above mentioned. The discovery referred to was made by Mr. H. H. Warner, of Rochester, N. Y., and is known in Europe, in America, and throughout the world as Warner's Safe Cure.



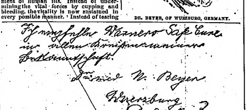
PROF. DR. KOCH, BERLIN.

It may Perhaps be thought that the above assertion is an extravagant one, and so it would be were not the unquestionable proofs present to verify it. Within the past few years the claims made more than ten years ago have been admitted by the highest scientific authorities, both in Europe and America, and it is with pleasure that we present herewith some remarkable reproduced statements, together with the faces of the men who made them.

Kidney troubles resulting far too often in Bright's disease, are the great evil of modern life. They frequently come silently and unannounced. Their presence far too often is not realized until their treacherous fangs have been fixed upon the vital portion of life. Nothing can be more deceptive, for their symptoms are varied in nearly every instance. Thousands of persons have been their victims without realizing or knowing what it is that afflicted them. Thousands are suffering to-day who do not know the cause.



DR. BEYER, OF WURZBURG, GERMANY.



Ich empfehle Warners Safe Cure in allen Nierenkranken meiner Bekanntschaft.

Dr. med. M. Beyer
Würzburg
Deutschland

The discovery made by Mr. H. H. Warner has been acknowledged throughout both hemispheres to be the only discovery for this great modern evil now known to the world. Like all great discoveries, it has had its enemies and met with opposition, but its marvelous popularity with the public has been phenomenal and its complete acknowledgement by scientists and the professions has been deserved. It stands, as it deserves to stand, upon a plane of its own, pre-eminent among all prominent discoveries for the relief of humanity and the promotion of happiness.

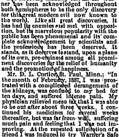
Mr. D. L. Curtice, St. Paul, Minn.: "In the month of February, 1887, I was prostrated with a complicated derangement of the kidneys, was confined to my bed for ten days, and suffered intense pain. My physician relieved me so far that I was able to be out after about three weeks. I continued his medicines for several weeks thereafter, but was far from well, suffering much pain and feeling that I was not improving. At the repeated solicitation of a friend I was induced to try Warner's Safe Cure, in which I had not the slightest faith. I commenced with the Safe Cure, experiencing immediate relief, and with its continuance for several weeks, taking I think about 20 bottles, was not only improved in health, but entirely cured."

Mrs. H. L. Moss, 239 South Exchange Street, St. Paul, Minn. "I was afflicted with kidney and rheumatic troubles for six years. I have tried all kinds of medicine my husband bought twelve bottles of Warner's Safe Cure. I used the dozen. I can say it has helped me, and it is with pleasure I can say, in my case, it has given me good health.

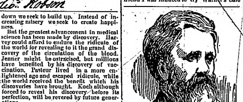
Mr. A. J. Earl, Quita, Ia.: "Several months ago I was taken with severe pains in my back and I felt run down and worn out generally. I was advised to try your Safe Cure, which I did. After taking two bottles I felt like a new man. I never have taken much medicine of any kind, but your Safe Cure works like a charm."

Mr. Charles Root, Lawrence, Kans.: "While in the army I contracted kidney disease, and have been troubled with it ever since, until I took five bottles of Warner's Safe Cure, and it helped me wonderfully from the start."

Mr. Francis A. Roe, Hot Springs, So. Dak.: "I suffered for over 20 years with pains in my back just below the shoulders. The doctors said the nerve was diseased, and I never would get over it. One bottle of Warner's safe cure removed it, and I have been troubled but very little since."



DR. DIO LEWIS.



If I found myself the victim of a serious Kidney trouble I should at once use Warner's Safe Cure

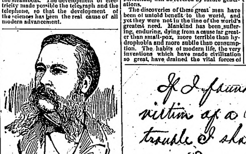
DR. R. A. GUNN,
Dean of the United States Medical College, New York, and Editor of the Medical Tribune.



I prescribe and use Warner's Safe Cure in both acute and Chronic Bright's disease and am willing to acknowledge and recommend it most heartily

PRAYED FOR A SHORT TONGUE.

Reinhold Spitz's Curious Prayer in a Whitestone, L. I. Church.

"O Lord, I pray that you will cut off an inch and a half of my wife's tongue. Once I was rich; once I was a trustee of this village. Now I am ruined and a drunkard, all by her tongue. O Lord, cut it off."

This was the prayer that Reinhold I. Spitz made in the Epworth Methodist Chapel at Whitestone, L. I., the other night, to the great delight of the sons of Belial in the back seat and the scandal of the good people up in the amen corner says the New York World. Mrs. Spitz got up and ran out of the church, leaving her boy with his father, who seized him and another boy by the ear and led them up to the mourners' bench, where he raised such a disturbance that he had to be put out. From there he went to a saloon on Eighteenth street, where he got his eye blacked in a fight.

It was liquor that caused Spitz's hard luck, not his wife's tongue. He is an excise commissioner of the town of Flushing. Several years ago he started a manufactory of piano strikers and made a lot of money. Politics and whisky hurt his business. A few days ago his brother-in-law foreclosed a mortgage on his house. That's what made him go to church and talk so. He was intoxicated at the time.

The New Hampshire supreme court judges have found Almy guilty of murder in the first degree and he was sentenced to be hanged in May, 1893.

HATS ON AT FUNERALS.

The Bared Head, For Hygenic Reasons, Becoming a Custom of the Past.

The bared head at funerals in the West is, for hygenic reasons, becoming a custom of the past. An agitation against it was started by Capt. George A. Raabe, a member of many benevolent societies in San Francisco, and as a result of his labors nearly every society of the Pacific Coast has adopted resolutions to the effect that the members shall keep their hats at the graves of their departed comrades. Grand Army Posts in California have followed suit. Societies in Milwaukee are discussing the same question. Health Commissioner Wingate of that city recently made these sensible remarks on the subject of the exaction of the modern funeral: "Death comes at a time very often in a family when an overworked and nearly broken down mother or sister or wife, or perhaps a husband, is nearly if not completely, prostrated, and whose health is in a most precarious condition. Physicians can testify, as no other class in the community can to the often serious results of a funeral as it is conducted now-adays. A delicate member of the family, who, perhaps, has not been out of the house for weeks, worn down and prostrated by the care and grief incident to the loss of a dear relative, is subjected to a long, slow ride on a cold inclement day. Custom has had its way; the victim following the custom, thinking it a duty, returns to her home, not to go out again until she is followed over the same road to the last resting place by perhaps others who fall victims after her; I am a comparatively young man, and yet I have not fingers enough on which to count cases of this kind that have come under my observation and in my own experience as a physician, and I have resolved to raise my voice against this custom whenever and wherever I may have the opportunity.—N. Y Evening Post.

ETIQUET OF SCANDAL.

One of the Gentler Sex Discusses the Woman in the Case.

"A woman" writes thus to the New York Sun: "Just at this moment, when so many women seem to have determined to be a law unto themselves in things matrimonial, will you allow one woman to enter a word of protest against the atrocity of separating a mother from her children just because she is suspected or even proved guilty of preferring some other man to her husband? A child belongs by every law of nature to the mother. It is not in obedience to the laws of man that she brings it into the world in anguish inconceivable to those who have not suffered it, and no law of man, God, or nature can alter the relation. Because she proves a "bad wife,' whatever that may mean, she may all the more be a good mother, and better able to do her duty by her child if her surroundings are harmonious. For, if a woman be in a state of revolt and hatred against the father, who suffers from it so much as the child? And one word as to this idea of ownership in a wife, for fancied interference with which some men shoot other men. Is it not a mistake? Since slavery was abolished, if indeed, it be abolished, no human being can own another. A woman, is, to my thinking born free and equal to man in all respects, and owns herself. Men talk about stealing a wife from her husband, as though she were some sort of a prize animal, bought and paid for. A woman belongs to herself no matter under what social conditions she may be living, and the children she bears as well. There seems something short-sighted in the law that gives an illegal mother the right to her child that the wife does not possess." The expression by women of such opinions tends to give pause to young men who are about to marry.

HIS DIGNITY LOST.

Chief Justice Chase Loses His Imposing Regalia of Office.

Unlike judges in most lower courts, the Supreme Court Justices, as is well known, wear black gowns that are much like the cassocks of church choristers. Arrayed in these sombre black gowns, the Justices, a row of seven or eight very large and very learned men, present an appearance of official dignity that is most striking.

The Supreme Count Convenes at 12 o'clock. One day Chief Justice Chase was unable to find his robe. He searched every part of the robing room, and even lighted a match to go deeper into his closet than usual in search of the missing gown, because the day was a dark and rainy one.

It wanted but a minute or two of 12, when the Chief Justice, almost beside himself with long searching, appealed to Ben Wade, the famous rough-and-ready Senator from Ohio, who chanced to enter the room, to help him find the lost gown.

Wade had just come in from out-of-doors, and so, thrusting his umbrella under one of the setees to see if the missing garment was there, he fortunately fished it out. Holding it at arm's length on the end of his dripping umbrella, he shouted: "Here, Chase—here's your old shirt."

The learned Chief Justice reached his seat in the middle of the row just as the clock struck the last stroke of 12, but the spectator from the front would never have guessed that the gown which clothed so much dignity had been, ten seconds before, dangling at the end of a very wet umbrella.—Harper's Young People.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers, that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address,

In the Spring

Nearly everybody needs a good medicine. The impurities which have accumulated in the blood during the cold months must be expelled, or when the mild days come, and the effect of bracing air is lost, the body is liable to be overcome by debility or some serious disease. The remarkable success of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and the universal praise it has received, make it worthy your confidence. It is the "Ideal Spring Medicine."

"We have used Hood's Sarsaparilla in our family for years and find it fully equal to all that is claimed for it." REV. S. LANE, Groesbeck, O.

Obstinate Blood Humor.

I HAD TERRIBLE ECZEMA FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS—WAS in bed six months at a time—body and limbs swollen and scaly like a dead fish. The itching was terrible, and finally LOST MY SIGHT. After treatment by five physicians, and other remedies without relief, I took S. S. S. AND IT CURED ME. My skin is soft and smooth, and the terrible trouble is all gone.—R. N. MITCHELL, Macon, Ga.

I know the above statement to be true.—S. S. HARMON, Macon, Ga.

I was for some time troubled with an obstinate RASH OR HUMOR, that spread over my face and breast. I consulted physicians, and used many remedies without a cure. At the suggestion of a friend I used Swift's Specific, which completely cured me. This was two years ago, and I have had no return of the trouble.—E. H. WELLS, Chesterfield, Va.

S. S. S. is the safest and best remedy for all troubles of the Blood and Skin. It cures by removing the cause, and at the same time builds up the general health.

"German Syrup"

I am a farmer at Edom, Texas. I have used German Syrup for six years successfully for Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Pains in Chest and Lungs and Spitting-up of Blood. I have tried many kinds of Cough Syrups in my time, but let me say to anyone wanting such a medicine—German Syrup is the best. We are subject to so many sudden changes from cold to hot, damp weather here, but in families where German Syrup is used there is little trouble from colds. John F. Jones.

The county commissioners are preparing plans for a bridge over the Red river north of Fargo, which will bring much trade from Minnesota farmers that now goes to Moorhead. The merchants of the latter town talk of appealing to the war department to prevent the constructing of the bridge, on account of the Red river being a navigable stream.

William Larabee was arrested at Fargo, charged with keeping a blind pig. He waived examination and was bound over bail was given. When the place was searched no liquor was found, and the only contraband article was a pack of cards. Affidavits are on file, however, wherein the affiants swear they secured liquor of him.

Gov. Burke said recently he would probably call and extra session within a few days to meet at Bismarck May 31. He finds no authority in the constitution by which a session can be limited to the consideration of the subjects named in the call, but will trust to the good sense of the members to get through as soon as possible. He thinks one week will be plenty of time to transact business regarding presidential electors and the world's fair.

John Clause, a farmer living fifteen miles up the river from Minot, has just finished threshing wheat which he stacked last fall. The yield was forty-two bushels to the acre of No. 1 hard. He got 112 bushels of oats to the acre. Farmers are finishing up their threshing, and the yield in all cases is over thirty bushels of wheat to the acre. Wilhelm Snyder, a farmer of this county had a yield of thirty-four bushels to the acre. This speaks well for the Mouse river valley.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

The Afton postoffice and contents were totaly destroyed by fire.

All arrangements are now completed, contract signed, and money raised for an artificial rain trial to be given by the Interstate Rain company of Goodland, Kan., at Doland, May 20. Special trains will be run for accommodation of the public who desire to witness the tests. Reduced rates will be made.

Charges have been preferred by the Farmers Alliance against State Land Commissioner Ruth. Crooked transactions in the sale of school land is alleged and the county commissioners have been petitioned to begin a legal action to restrain him from selling any more land pending an investigation.

President Kingsbury, of the state board of control, says that if the money is not on deposit before June 14 there will be no tournament at Watertown. In that event Yankton is ready to put up the money, and the Yankton fire department announces that it will give $500 in prizes if Watertown fails to perform her obligation, that the state tournament will be held at Yankton in July.

A Mitchell advice says: Farmers in this section complain of the scarcity of farm help. Higher wages now being paid than ever before on account of the big demand for farm hands, a result of the big acreage being put in and the evident anxiety to get in grain in a hurry, which has been delayed on account of the great amount of rainfall. Twenty-five dollars a month and board is now being offered where last year $18 a month and board was hard to obtain.

The Baptist people of South Dakota will hold a series of meetings during, May, June and July, conducted by Rev. S. K. Mitchell, a well known evangelist of Boston. Mr. Mitchell, comes to the state under the direction of the American Baptist Home Missionary society, and will spend but ten days in any one place. The towns in which the meetings will be held will be the larger ones and those most conveniently reached by railroads. Wonderful results are anticipated from these evangelistic meetings.

It is reliably reported that a strike of a large body of $11 gold ore has been made on the 600 foot level of the Caledona and the 400-foot level of the Monitor mines, where prospecting has been done with a diamond drill, thus proving the ore body of great extent. Explorations with the diamond drill also show that the ore body crosses Deadwood and Sawpit gulches and extends to the Minerva mine, recently purchased by the Homestake Mining company. Facts concerning the strike have just been made public and are creating a good deal of excitement.

The violin bears the inscription "Strandivarius, 1721." An offer of $3,000 for the violin has been refused.

Joseph Higbee, a well to do farmer, living near Marion, mysteriously disappeared from his home on the morning of April 26, and all endeavors to find any trace of him since have proved unavailing. He is 65 years old and there was no reason for his suiciding and his relations have come to the conclusion he has been foully dealt with.

The Executive Staff.

Old friend, happening in.—How are you, Fenley? You've got a pretty fine office here. How are you prospering?

Fenley—I'm at the top of the heap, old fellow. I'm the Vice-President of this mining exchange.

"You do a large business, I presume?"

"Immense. The responsibility of it weighs on me pretty heavily, but I've got to shoulder it. Can't get around that, you know."

"The man at that elegant desk is one of the officers of the company, I suppose?"

"Yes. He's the Secretary. And the men at the two other elegant desks near him are his assistants. He has a wonderful amount of work to do. Absolutely astonishing! But he's a first-class man. We pay him a big salary."

"The man behind the rosewood railing is another official, is he not?"

"Yes. That's the Treasurer. He's another first-class man. We pay him big money. But we make him give heavy bonds. Got to do it, you see. We handle too much money to run any risks."

"And who is that little dried-up old man at the pine desk in the corner?"

"That's old Scadds. He—h'm—signs the checks, you know."

He Lost Her.

He had asked her to marry him and was waiting impatiently for her answer.

"Will you expect me to keep house?" she finally asked.

"No, indeed, my love; the servants will attend to all that."

"You won't ask me to make the bread, or broil beefsteaks?"

"Certainly not, my angel, we will have a cook."

"And I will not be compelled to pound the washboard?"

"How can you ask such a question? No, no, no."

"Then I cannot marry you. I have been brought up to do all these things, and I could not be happy in a life of idleness."

When he realized what a treasure he had lost, he went sadly to his luxurious home, and vowed to remain a bachelor forever.

His Choice.

Hungry Higgins—Which would you druther be—deaf an' dumb, or blind?

Weary Watkins—If it's all the same to you, I druther git paralyzed.

BUT FEW ESCAPED

The Fertile Turkey Valley in Texas Swept by a Terrific Cyclone.

Buildings Unroofed and Demolished and Five Persons Reported Killed.

Gainesville, Tex., May 17.—News has reached here of a terrible cyclone in the Turkey Valley in Greece county. It swept from one end of that fertile spot to the other, literally demolishing everything in its path. Even dugouts were unroofed and people lifted out of them and hauled along the ground for incredible distances. The extent of the loss of life cannot yet be ascertained. Five, however, are known to have been killed and it is probable many are fatally hurt. Hardly a person in the valley escaped with injury of some kind. Coffins are being hauled from the nearest towns.

BURIED ALIVE.

Efforts to Rescue an Imprisoned Miner at Butte.

Butte, Mont., Special, May 17.—Since the occurrence of the catastrophe at the Anaconda mine on Saturday no work has been done in the mine save endeavoring to recover the bodies still buried in the cave. This has proved to be less expensive than at first reported.

Yesterday it was discovered that one of the entomed victims is alive wedged in between thimbers that have fallen about so as to prevent his being smothered. He was nearly twenty-four hours there before the rescuers could reach him, but by careful drilling through entervening timbers, they were able to get a hose to him by which he was supplied with water and liquid food the heat is very great at this level and at first he was apparently crazy, now he is rational.

RIVERS FALLING.

The Situation at St. Louis More Encouraging.

St. Louis, Mo., May 17.—The Missouri river has reached its height at Kansas City and is now falling. By to-morrow it is expected the river will begin to fall at this point.

BONNET CARR LEVEE BROKEN.

New Orleans, May 17.—The break at Bonnet Carr is not in the Bonnet Carr levee proper, but just below it. The water will overflow a large section of cultivated land below the break before it reaches Lake Ponchitrain.

Two Bad Accidents.

Chippewa Falls, Wis., Special, May 15.—Oswald Pine of this city was killed on the Chippewa River & Menomonie railway at Vernona Junction yesterday by falling off an engine while switching. The body was brought here to-day for burial. For the purpose of cleaning an old paint brush, Mrs. George Slokar of this city, put the brush in about a quart of kerosene and put it onto the stove. When attempting to take it off the contents exploded enveloping her in flames and burning her very severely.

Drowning of a Farmer.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Special, May 17.—Yesterday Bert and Charles Weeden, young farmers living near Coggan, took a team and went down to Buffalo creek. The water in the creek is several feet above its banks. Their object was the rescue of stock which was in danger of being drowned. The last trip they drove off into the current. Charles was caught under the upturned wagon box and drowned. Bert attempted to rescue him, and when nearly exhausted caught on to some driftwood, where he remained two hours before he was rescued.

The Sixth Victim.

Cincinnati, May 17.—Holton Terrell of Lawrenceburg, Ind., a passenger on the Aurora accommodation on the Big Four road, which collided yesterday near Cleves with a fast freight, died to-day, making the sixth death from the disaster. The others injured are doing well. It has been ascertained beyond all doubt by the removal of the wreck that there are no bodies buried under it.

Killed by an Electric Car.

Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Special, May 17.—Robert T. Soutter, eighteen-year-old son of C. B. Soutter, of T. M. Sinclair & Co., was instantly killed to-day by an electric car by his horse suddenly becoming unmanageable and jumping directly in front of the rapidly moving car. Both were borne to the ground and young Souter was mangled horribly. No blame is attached to the motorman.

Powder Explosion.

Ottumwa, Iowa, May 17.—Two young boys, Thomas Bainbridge and James Robinson, were horribly burned by a powder explosion last night. They were playing with a lighted lamp in the Diamond Block mine in a room where a keg of powder was stored. Bainbridge cannot live. Robinson may recover.

Barn and Contents Destroyed.

Cando, S. D., Special, May 17.—J. J. McCanna's barn burned Saturday with contents including hay, grain and five head of horse. Loss, $2,000; insured in St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance company.

They Make a Kick.

Washington, May 17.—A delegation of Montana men, headed by Capt. Savage of that state, appeared before the house committee on public lands to-day in opposition to the bill granting the Montana Central right of way through the Yellowstone National Park.

An Unknown Body Found.

Little Falls, Minn., Special, May 17.—Considerable excitement prevails here over the finding by Harry Logan of Randall of the remains of a man in that town. A revolver and a knife were also found near the body.

Under Ancient Laws.

Pittsburg, May 17.—Informations were made to-day against the proprietors of the Dispatch, Leader and Press by Robert McClure, agent of the Law and Order society, for pursuing worldly employment on Sunday. The defendants will give bail for court. For several months the Law and Order society has been arresting newsdealers, newsboys and carriers for selling papers on Sunday, and the war, which has been quite unpopular, has now been transferred to the proprietors. The informations are made under the blue laws of 1794.

CONGRESS

Proceedings of the House and Senate.

Monday, May 9.

SENATE.

After the routine morning business in the senate today, Mr. Frye, from the committee on commerce, reported back the house bill to encourage American ship building. He said that the report was unanimous and that he had been instructed to move its present consideration. He made that motion and it was agreed to.

After some discussion the bill was passed, yeas, 51; nays, 10.

HOUSE.

In the house, Mr. Holman (Indiana) moved to recommit the river and harbor bill, with instructions to the committee to report it back with an amendment striking out the contract provisions. Mr. Outhwaite (Ohio) moved to amend the instructions by requiring the committee to strike out all appropriations which are for new works or for the further extension of works now under construction, so the bills shall include only appropriations for the continuance or completion of works now in progress.

Tuesday, May 10.

SENATE.

The river and harbor bill was received from the house and was referred to the committee on commerce. The conference report on the urgent deficiency bill was presented and agreed to.

Senate bill to establish the boundaries of the Yellowstone National Park was then taken up and gave rise to considerable discussion.

HOUSE.

The sundry civil bill created quite a stir in the house in committee of the whole. It has been explained that the appropriation carried by the bill is $13,000,000 less than that carried by the existing law.

The committee then rose. Mr. Kendall, of Kentucky, was appointed as a member of the banking and currency and claims committee. Adjourned.

Wednesday, May, 11.

SENATE.

In the senate Mr. Sherman from the committee on foreign relations, reported two amendments to be offered to the consular and diplomatic appropriation bill—one being to increase from $25,000 the item for the national bureau of American republics and the other to insert an item of $65,000 for payment of the United States' share of the expense of the preliminary survey for a continental railway, recommended by the international American conference.

The following bills were passed by the senate today:

Senate bill authorizing the secretary of war to cause a survey to be made for a ship canal, connecting Lake Erie and the Ohio river from Conneaut harbor, or from Erie to Pittsburg, and appropriating $10,000; for the establishment of fish hatcheries in Montana, Texas and on the gulf coast, appropriating $15,000 each for the first two and $10,000 for the last; appropriating $100,000 for a public building at Pierre, S. D.

HOUSE.

Mr. Sayers, of Texas, presented the conference report on the urgent deficiency appropriation bill, explaining that the bill as agreed to appropriated about $250,000 more than it carried when it passed the house. The report was agreed to.

The house went into committee of the whole (Mr. Lester, of Georgia, in the chair) on the sundry civil appropriation bill. Mr. Holman moved to strike out the appropriation for $620,000 for the purchase of a site and the commencement of a building for a new mint at Philadelphia.

Considerable discussion ensued. Mr. Bland offered an amendment to the bill which contained his free coinage ideas, it was ruled out of order.

Thursday, May 12.

SENATE.

Among the bills introduced in the senate today and referred were the following.

By Mr. Dawes—Authorizing the president to proclaim a general holiday commemorating the 40th anniversary of the discovery of America on Oct. 12 1892.

By Mr. Hiscock—To encourage American ship building, extending to the steamship China the same privileges as have been extended to the City of Paris and the City of New York. The China is a steamship of 5,000 tons, built in Glasgow in 1889. She plies between San Francisco and China on the Pacific Mail Line, but flies the British flag.

Mr. Calf introduced a resolution, which was referred to the committee on foreign relations, requesting Spain to consent to the formation of an independent government on the Island of Cuba.

HOUSE.

Mr. Oates offered a resolution directing the committe on judiciary to investigate the Pinkerton detective service which was carried.

The house went into committee of the whole on the sundry civil bill. A proposition by Mr. Reed to increase the lighthouse appropriation from $370,000 to $408,000 was rejected.

On motion of Mr. Sayers, of Texas the appropriation for life saving service was increased $21,000.

Friday, May 13.

SENATE.

In the senate today the river and harbor bill was reported back from the committee on commerce with amendments.

The consideration of the naval bill was resumed.

Mr. McPherson offered an amendment appropriating $250,000 towards the construction of a dry dock at Algiers, La.

Mr. Cockrell and Mr. Sherman opposed the amendment and it was rejected.

Mr. McPherson, from the naval committee, offered an amendment to the senate amendment, providing for three harbor defense double turent ships of the monitor type, instead of one ship. After a long discussion Mr. McPherson modified his amendment so as to strike out the house amendment for one armored cruiser and the senate provision for one sea going coast line battleship and for one harbor defense double turrent ship of the monitor type.

After a further debate and without action on Mr. McPherson's amendment the senate adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE.

The entire day in the house was spent in filibustering against a private bill, which came over as unfinished business from last Friday and were therefore entitled to consideration. It was a bill for the relief of the heirs of H. H. and Charlotte K. Sibley, and has occupied the attention of the house for several successive Fridays. H. H. Sibley was patentee of what is known as the Sibley tent, and it is alleged that under a contract made in 1858 between him and the government of the United States, there is due to the heirs a large sum of money. The provisions of the bill, as finally agreed on direct the court of claims to investigate the matter and render judgment for any amount found to be due, not exceeding $37,500, with the right of appeal by either party to the supreme court.

We had several days exceptionally fine weather the past week, and it looked for a few days as if dry weather and spring had come at last. Appearances however, are deceitful as yesterday brought us the hardest rainstorm we have had this spring. It has rained steadily for the past twenty-four hours and it will take at least a week, if not more to dry the ground so that the farmers can resume seeding. To say the least crop prospects for this season are not encouraging.

One of our exchanges gives the following advise: Every man should paste this in his hat or put it where he will stumble over it about six times a day "Drink nothing without seeing it: sign nothing without reading it; and make sure that it means nothing more than it says. Don't go to law unless you are forced to and have nothing to lose. In any business do not wade in where you cannot see the bottom. Put no dependance in the label of a dog, and count money before you receive it. See the sack before you buy what's in it, for he who buys in the dark asks to be cheated."

The St. Paul Daily News, under the management of Mr. C. E. Sherin is foremost in the ranks of Northwestern journalism. The News is an eight page paper with a full telegraph news franchise and the best staff of news gatherers in the twin cities, It is independent fearless and straightforward in the defense of American institutions and the exposure of corruption in politics. It has taken advanced grounds and from now on will lead where others follow. For the next thirty day only, the News announces that it will take subscribers at the unparalelled low subscription price of $3.00 per year in advance. This is the most liberal offer ever made by a first class daily news. paper and the approach of a warm political campaign, in which the News will take an active independent part, makes the offer all the more liberal. The News has an able staff of political writers, who hew to the line and take no notice of the falling chips. It is an excellent paper and should have a tremendous circulation throughout the state.

Otis Staples, surveyor general of logs, was at the Commercial to-day on his way to Fosston. where he will strike into the reservation and be crusing until the latter part of the month. In conversation with Mr. Staples he stated that he did not think the work of appraising the timber on the Red Lake reservation would be completed in time for its disposal this season, but he was inclined to the belief that on the White Earth reservation the timber would be disposed of in 1892. The backward spring and high water has been a great hinderance to the work of appraising but Mr Staples did not experiance any further trouble from that direction. In speaking of weather and logging operations Mr. Staples said that trees and foliage of all kinds was further advanced in the vicinity of his home than here, and as to logging matters the Stillwater lumbermen had met with a set back in the shape of an immense log jam on the Kittle River Rapids where about 75,000,000 logs had been piled up so that the river had been diverted from its regular channel and was wending its way through a swamp. Large crews of drivers were at work trying to break the jam but their efforts thus far had proved futile.—Crookston Times.

As an illustration of the rapidity with which the work of erecting the Exposition buildings is being pushed at Jackson park it may be stated that on March 1 sketches were made of a building to serve as permanent accomodations for the Construction Bureau, the Columbian guards, emergency hospital, central fire alarm service, etc. The contract was let on April 2, and on April 30, the building was finished and occupied. The structure measures 200 by 300 is covered and ornamented with staff and is substantially put up. The scene which the exposition grounds now afford with most of the buildings nearing completion and the construction being pushed forward by 6,000 workmen, is accounted so interesting and wonderful that from 1,000 to 5,000 visitors a day willingly pay the admission fee of 25 cents to witness it. Before the abolition of the free pass system the visitors often numbered as high as 15,000 or 20,000. The work of construction was interfered with, so that it was thought best to charge an admission and thus diminish the crowd of sightseers and at the same time add to the financial resources of the exposition.

Rev. Hick's predictions for the remaining portion of this month.

The next storm period is central on the 16th bringing its culminating stages especially in eastern parts of the country, exactly on the 28th—the central day of a Venus disturbance. Remember that Venus brings rapid and extreme alternations of heat and cold, cloudbursts, hail storms and startling manifestations of lightning and thunder. Be on the watch for such results at this time. The period runs from the 11th to the 19th. A series of heavy storms recurring in cycle of 24 hours—say each afternoon and evening—will most likely result for several days about this time. The wind, falling obstinately back to the south after passage of storm proxysms will repeat itself about, or a little in advance of the same hour on the succeeding. A cold steady wind from the west and north will indicate the cessation of storms. Heavy frosts will be heard from to the northward between the 16th and the 21st. On and about the 22nd look for a return of very warm days, with reactional storms greatly intensified by the Venus equinox Keep your eye on the indications. Cool winds holding strongly from the west, will be proof that the storm center has passed east of you.

The last storm period of the month is from the 25th to the 30th,—a period calling for constance and careful watchfulness, in the event of hot days, south winds and formation of active storm clouds. On the 25th falls the new moon equinox of Mercury on the 29th, Venus still in full force—all combine with a regular "Vulcan" period, central on the 27th, Putting all these causes together and adding the fact that we are fully within the Saturnian period, we may almost surely expect disturbances of great violence. Make note of the days indicated in the calender as central danger days and be prepared as best you can for whatever may come.

Notice is hereby given that a convention of the Peoples party of Polk County Minnesota, will be held at McKinnon's hall in the city of Crookston, on the 24th day of May A. D., 1892 at 10 o'clock a. m. for the purpose of electing ten delegates to the Peoples party state convention to be held in the city of Minneapolis, Minnesota, which convention is to nominate candidates for the several state offices—also to elect delegates to the congressional district convention of the Peoples party hereafter to be called, which convention will elect delegates to the National Convention of the peoples party to be held at Omaha Nebraska, on the 4th day of July 1892, for the purpose of nominating a president and vice-president of the United States;—also to elect delegates to the peoples party judicial convention of the 14th judicial district, to be held for the purpose of nominating a judge of the district court and to elect delegates to the congressional convention of the peoples party to be held in and for the 7th congressional district of Minnesota to nominate a candidate for member of congress: provided no delegate to the said judicial convention or congressional convention will be elected by said county convention unless hereafter directed to do so by the peoples party judicial and congressional committees of said districts. The basis of represen tation to said county convention is;

Each township and voting precinct will be entitled to one delegate to be elected at a caucus to be called by the several township and ward committees of the peoples party, each farmers alliance and labor organization in good standing on the 16th day of March 1892 will be entitled to three delegates to be elected by the said several sub-alliances and labor organizations of said county at meetings held for that purpose, The representation to said county convention is fixed as directed by the state committee of the peoples party of Minnesota

All voters who believe in the principles of the peoples party as set forth in the platform of the peoples party adopted at St. Louis Mo. on the 22nd of Feb, 1892, and who pledge themselves to support the candidates of the peoples party in the coming campaign are requested to participate in the election of deleates to said county convention.

Dated May 6th 1892.
By order of Committee.
E, E. Lommen, Chairman.
John Locken, Secretary.

The Old Farmer's Gold Pieces.

"One day when I was receiving teller of a bank," said Otis Hadley, president of the Kansas City Carriage and Omnibus company, "an old farmer came in with about $5,000 in gold pieces in a sack. They were all black, like an old copper, and looked as if they had been soaked in tea grounds or acid. I asked the man where he got them.

"'Well,' he said. 'I had that money when the war started. I never had no faith in these here banks in them days, and was afeard if the war went the wrong way, they'd all go up the spout. So I buried the money just a hundred paces from my well. I never had no use for it since, but always watched the stone on the ground there to see that it wasn't moved. The other day I got to dickering with the man that owns the section 'joining mine, and if we swap I'll want this 'ere gold, I reckon. I thought I'd fetch it up here so I could draw it. I got mighty ashamed of leaving it in the ground. The farmers in your parts makes what they call deposits with you fellers.'

"I assured him that the money would be carefully kept, and gave him a deposit book and he went out smiling.

"In about three weeks he returned. I'd forgotten his face, but he said he 'reckoned I was the feller what took his money,' and he produced the book. I remembered him then, and he said he'd made the deal with his neighbor and wanted his money. I showed him how to draw a check, and sent him to the paying teller. The check was cashed in bright and shining gold.

"'That ain't my money,' he exclaimed in a forlorn sort of way. 'What have you done with my money?' and a look of anxiety and fear was on his face. The teller told him it certainly was his money. He began to examine the coins and found some old pieces in the lot, and then he smiled and said: 'B'gosh, you fellers must 'a' had a fine time rubbing all them pieces up in this way. I reckoned you all had something else to do.'"—Kansas City Star.

The London Postman.

No whistles are used by the carriers in London. Instead, they use the postman's double knock, which is made by giving two distinct raps on the door. Every door is provided with a knocker and the doors are always locked; even the dwellings of the very poorest of London's population are provided with their knocker and kept closed. There are perhaps a few that have four stories, but they are very few. Of course this refers to dwellings only. They have large office buildings such as are found in any city in this country.

The postman in England is looked upon as an integrate part of the government, and as such is treated with the greatest of consideration and respect. Such a thing as a carrier having to wait in the hallway of a house for two, three, or sometimes five minutes before he gets an answer, as we have to do, and to be unable to deliver a letter and to have to mark it "no answer" is something unheard of.

When a carrier starts at the head of a street to deliver his mail he gives his double knock on the first and second house, and the entire street almost is awake to the fact that the postman is coming. The result is they are waiting for him. In an ordinary city block it would not be necessary to knock more than two or three times, once or twice at the head of the street and again in the middle. The carrier never has to wait, and this enables him to make better time.—Postal Record.

Fires in New York City.

Do you know at what time fires usually break out? Is it during the busy, hustling hours of the day or during the still, silent hours of the night? The report of the fire commissioners answers the query. The average number of fire alarms in a year in New York city is a little more than 4,000, which is at the rate of more than ten alarms a day. Less than one-quarter of the fires start between 11 p. m. and 7 a. m., while about three-quarters start between 7 a. m. and 11 p. m. Oddly, the alarms are rarest between 6 and 7 a. m., when fires for household and business purposes are kindled generally. The busiest time for firemen is between 8 and 9 p. m., about the time that fires for household purposes go out. There is no particular difference in days regarding the frequency of fires, except that they are materially fewer on Fridays than on any other day of the week.—New York Sun.

Chinese Ginger Jars.

The ginger jars of hawthorn and other decorations which are so highly prized by collectors of Chinese porcelain, are so called because they are made at the Imperial Porcelain works under special orders from the palace and sent to Canton, where they are filled with preserved ginger and similar sweetmeats by the viceroy and returned to the emperor at Peking.—Philadelphia Ledger.

The First Idea of the Telescope.

The telescope we owe to some children of a spectacle maker placing two or more pairs of spectacles before each other, and looking through them at the distant sky. Their idea was followed up by older heads.—Harper's Young People.

HOSPITALITY AMONG WOODSMEN.

Where the Stranger Is Taken in and Made to Feel at Home.

Among the genuine woodsmen in eastern America great hospitality to strangers is the most distinguishing trait. By woodsmen is meant those who make their living by chopping and hauling logs, and who live all winter in log camps, half buried up in the snows of a vigorous northern climate, far away from the outer world. Among these people there is no law against tramps. The solitary hunter or the lonely traveler whom night has overtaken in his journey always receives a cordial welcome, not from one, but from all of the crew.

As soon as the stranger's head is inside of the low door by which the hut is entered, the cook calls out to him to walk in, for it is this functionary who does the honors of the camp. He is then invited to take a place on the "deacon seat," that he may be better able to warm his feet before the fire. The question is then put, "Have you had your supper?" and the wanderer is asked to step up and have a bite; even if he has already supped he will be almost forced to take a piece of sweet cake and to drink a cup of tea.

The teakettle always sits beside the fire, and on the stranger's arrival the cook gives this "a good boil," for woodsmen want their tea boiled. Some fat pork is cut and put into the pan and is soon simmering over a cheery fire. While the stranger is taking off his moccasins and putting on a dry pair of socks, with which the cook is always ready to furnish him, the cook is plying him with questions as to what is going on out in the settlement.

So soon as the "boss" or owner of the camp and crew come in at night, their day's work over, the stranger is cordially greeted by all; in fact he becomes one of themselves and is expected to walk up to the bean pot or the frying pan and to help himself to anything that suits his palate without asking anybody. He not only becomes as one of the crew, but the best place in the berth is reserved for him, some one turning out of it and sleeping on the deacon seat (the hewn plank on which the crew sit when eating their meals). Sometimes the deacon seat is preferable to the berth.

Many years since, late one stormy winter night, I arrived at Mr. W. Richard's logging camp at the "Otter Slide," on the Nashwalk river, New Brunswick. The crew had retired. When I entered the camp Mr. R. raised his head from the fir boughs on which he was lying and said to me, "Come, take this place." I caught at the moment a glimpse of a bed of snow beneath the green boughs. "No, thank you, I prefer the deacon seat." On this I gladly stretched my weary limbs with my boots for a pillow and coat thrown over my shoulders for covering; and yet, after all, my sleep was sounder and more refreshing than that of one amid all the luxuries of the town.—Forest and Stream.

A Substitute for Canal Locks.

H. G. Ketchum, engineer of the Chignecto ship railway, is credited as the author of a scheme by which vessels drawing upward of twenty feet of water can be pushed through the present St. Lawrence canals from Port Arthur to Quebec, and through the Soo canal now being excavated, without deepening the canals or enlarging the locks, thus obviating the expenditure of millions of dollars upon canal deepening.

Mr. Ketchum proposes that large vessels be placed upon steel rafts or pontoons, and thus floated through the canals and over river shallows, the vessels to be placed upon the pontoons by means of hydraulic lifts established at the entrance of each canal. He says $500,000 would provide pontoons and lifts for all the existing canals; but these lifts could be used as graving docks; but little time would be lost in placing the vessels upon the floats, and the plan has been successful elsewhere.—New York Telegram.

The Doctor's Retort.

One of the brightest physicians of Portland and one of the ablest theologians of Bath were in the physiological room at Bowdoin Medical school not long ago examining, in company with others, microscopic slides, slowing certain peculiar glands of the intestines. The physician at once launched out into a brilliant discussion of the glands and their relation to various diseases.

The theologian grew tired after a time, and finally said: "You doctors know so much about the uncertainties of this world that I should think you would not want to live." "You theologians," came the quick reply, "tell us so much about the certainties of the next that we don't want to die."—Lewiston Journal.

Sharing His Bed.

A Grub street friend of Johnson's was Derrick, of whom he wrote, "I honor Derrick for his strength of mind." One night when Floyd, another poor author, was wandering about the streets he found Derrick asleep upon a bulk. Upon being suddenly awakened Derrick started up. "My dear Floyd," said he, "I am sorry to see you in this destitute state. Will you go home with me to my lodgings?" And they turned in on the bulk together like the good fellows they were.—Collector.

How to Relieve Night Sweats.

Night sweats may be arrested by sponging the body at night with very hot water. It is a great help also toward toning up the skin to rub the body briskly in the morning with a bathing towel wrung out of salt water. The salt enters the pores and stimulates the skin to healthy action.—New York Journal.

"There's something behind it." That's what you think, perhaps, when you read that the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy offer $500 reward for an incurable case of Catarrh. Rather unusual, you think, to find the makers of a medicine trying to prove that they believe in it. "There must be something back of it!"

But it's a plain, square offer, made in good faith. The only thing that's back of it is the Remedy. It cures Catarrh in the Head. To its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, the worst cases yield, no matter how bad or of how long standing. It has a record that goes back for 25 years. It doesn't simply relieve—it perfectly and permanently cures. With a Remedy like this, the proprietors can make such an offer and mean it. To be sure there's risk in it, but it's so very small that they are willing to take it.

You've "never heard of anything like this offer?" True enough. But then you've never heard of anything like Dr. Sage's Remedy.

Soap and Potatoes.

Like all primitive peoples, the Maories are very inquisitive, and, in the manner of children, are inclined to bring everything to their mouths to test its qualities. In the early days a party of Maories came across some bars of soap which had been washed ashore from a wreck. Finding that the stuff was too sticky to be eaten raw, they resolved to cook it. Accordingly they cut it up into small peices, and sprinkled these pieces over the sweet potatoes and fish which formed their evening meal. Finally they covered the whole mass over with fern leaves and mats, and, putting earth on the top, left every thing to bake quietly in the ovens till the evening. The scene at the evening meal must have been very funny. Not only did the tribe have to go supperless to bed, but the whole set of ovens was spoilt, and new ones had to be constructed before any further cooking could be done.—"All the Year Round,"

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria

It transpires that the recent sword duel at Buda Pesth between Herr Horvarth and Lieut. Ovary resulted more seriously than the first report indicated. Horvarth was wounded, although the first account of the duel had it that a slight scalp wound inflicted on Ovary was the worst injury received by either combatant.

Theodore F. Hunter, president of the Farmers' and Mechanics' National Bank of Knoxville, Pa., was given a hearing before United States Commissioner Bell on the charge of making false reports to the comptroller of the currency as to the condition of the bank, and held in $10,000 bail.

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER XII.—Continued.

Again I perceived broken brake, and, following the line, I threaded my way between the trees upon the slope of the hill until I emerged from the wood upon the high bank that edged the Abbey road at that part. It was as nearly as possible the point where Van Hoeck had stopped me in the morning, upon hearing Brace in our rear. Looking up the road, I saw the finger-post at the cross-roads; looking down, I saw that which took my breath away with amazement,—Brace was trudging along the road toward the Abbey, with Van Hoeck holding his arm on one side, and Lola his hand on the other,—an incomprehensible picture of unity, friendly assistance, and reliance.

It was true that, without assistance, Van Hoeck could not have found his way along the road, and very possibly that, without the restraint of her father's hand, Lola would not have walked by his side; but all doubt as to the existence of a friendly understanding between the two men was dispelled from my mind by what followed. Arrived opposite the bridle path leading up into the wood, they stopped, and consultation ensued between the two men. I could not hear their voices at that distance, but I saw by their gesticulations that they were discussing some point; it ended by Brace going to the side of the road, and craning his neck to see if any one were in sight. I crouched down beside the thicket, which partly concealed me.

When I cautiously raised my head and looked again, Brace, still standing opposite the bridleway, was drawing his arm out of the sandy bank that there skirted the road.

I ducked my head, as once more he peered to the right and left. They were gone, all three, when I looked again.

When I thought it safe to venture, I went to the spot where Brace had stood. There was a rabbit-hole in the sandy cutting, partly hidden by the training growth from the overhanging edge. I took off my coat, turned back my sleeve, thrust in my arm, and drew out—the leather case in which the diamond had been taken from my wrist. It was empty.

I again thrust my arm in and explored the hole, thinking—though it was little likely—that the diamond had slipped out of the case, or been put in separately. It was a kind of cul-de-sac,—the earth had fallen in from above, and blocked the passage at less than the length of my arm from the entrance; but I did not give up the search until I was absolutely certain that the Great Hesper was not there. It was not probable they would place the diamond in such an open place; the leather case was different. It was unsafe to keep that, but it was of little consequence where they abandoned it. But why had they taken the diamond from the case? and what had they done with it?

A clue to this mystery also, I discovered before long.

When I got back to the Abbey, Brace, Van Hoeck and Lola were in the library with the police officer, Sir Edmund, Mr. Wray,—his lawyer,—and a couple of friends, justices of the peace, who had been brought there by the rumors which were already widely spread.

Lola was still under examination. She was stubbornly silent. It was with the greatest difficulty that any response to the questions put could be drawn from her. But she admitted seeing the main drop from the oriel; and, asked if it was one of the servants, she replied firmly, "No." But more than this could not be got out of her on this point.

To the inquiry how she had discovered the means of getting from the bay into the oriel, for it was by that way she had come to my assistance, she replied that she "had seen it done before," but she would not say whom she had seen.

The police officer asked me to go into the adjoining dining-room with him.

"May I ask," he said, "If you have any reason to suspect that you have been robbed by your friends,—your partners in the diamond? Because they profess to have been in the woods all the morning, whereas I have good cause to believe that they have been in the town of Southampton part of the time."

"Are you sure of that?"

"I will take my oath that I saw the little savage in the red petticoat in the High Street as I started to come here."

CHAPTER XIII.

"I advise you, sir," said the officer, "to take the advice of Sir Edmund's solicitor, Mr. Wray."

I agreed, and he called in the lawyer. I told him, without reserve, all that had happened, showing him the leather case I had taken from the hole were Brace had placed it.

"A couple of cunning scoundrels!" he exclaimed; "their pretended suspicion of each other was, of course, intended to blind you to their complicity, while each, by implicating the other, diverted suspicion from himself."

"I was never in my life so completely deceived," I said. "Brace seemed to me the embodiment of rough honesty. I liked the man, and it was a painful shock to me when I found him unfaithful, and a thief."

"He is worse than that, Mr. Thorne; he is a murderer at heart; for there can be no doubt it was he who attempted your life; it was a sheer impossibility for the other man to do it. We have heard the story of the robbery from Sir Edmund. The intelligence that planned the attack was doubtless Van Hoeck's. He looks like a man of subtle intellect. I do not see what other part he could have played in this affair."

"Sir Edmund told me, sir," said the officer,, "that, on your return from the left wing, you heard snoring in Brace's room?"

"I certainly did."

"That could very well have been Van Hoeck, who had taken Brace's place while he slipped off into your room,—another proof that the two were cating together."

"Precisely," said Mr. Wray; and then, with an air of business,—"Well, now, what is to be done? that is the first question. The evidence is insufficient to charge either of the men even with being concerned in the robbery. The leather case proves nothing. They might declare they found it empty, and have concealed it through fear of accusation, or they might all three swear your statement to be false, and absolutely accuse you of being yourself the thief. And, until we can substantiate the charge by positive proof, we must be careful to conceal our suspicions from them. If they think they are likely to be brought to justice they will quit the country by the first steamer that leaves Southampton,—and we can not stop them. The thing that must be done at once is to search for the diamond. That is your affair," he said, addressing the officer; "undoubtedly they have placed it somewhere in Southampton, in readiness to take if flight becomes necessary."

"I'll have all the kens searched before the morning."

"That is part of your business, 'of course. At the same time, I would suggest that it is of far more importance to watch the men themselves. Van Hoeck would not trust the diamond to the keeping of ordinary thieves' receivers: it would be safer merely laid under a plant in the gardens down by the dock. You may be sure he has the ingenuity to suggest a safe place for its keeping."

"I'll have some plain-clothes men on the first thing to-morrow morning, and I'd better go and telegraph to Scotland Yard at once."

"As soon as possible. But not to alarm the men, you had better make a pretense of continuing your investigations, and avail yourself of some plausible pretext for returning to Southampton. Everything at this moment depends upon keeping Van Hoeck and Brace in ignorance of our suspicion. And with that view, he added, turning to me, "I counsel you, Mr. Thorne, to conceal your real feelings. Not one of these three ought to see any change in your demeanor toward them."

This was sound advice, and I recognized the importance of conforming with it; but I am the worst actor in the world where my feelings are concerned, and my very soul revolted against the men who had plotted together to take my life from the mere insensate greed of gain. I felt more bitterly toward Brace than toward his accomplice, not because I thought Van Hoeck less guilty, but because I had felt more kindly toward the Judge, to whom I seemed linked by the brotherhood of labor.

I kept out of his way when we returned to the library, and avoided looking at him, lest he should perceive that I was no longer his friend. But I knew he had his keen eyes upon me, and was reading the signs of my newly born aversion, and this made my acting worse.

When the officer had completed his investigation, he said sagaciously, as he closed his notebook:

"I have sufficient information for my present purpose. I may not be able to discover the perpetrators of this outrage and robbery immediately, but I think I shall be in a position to tell you something about the lost diamond within twenty-four hours."

Sir Edmund accompanied him to the door. When he returned and took the seat he had occupied at the head of the long table, Brace rose, and, placing himself at the opposite end, inclined his head first to the Baronet, then to the right, and to the left.

"Squire and gen'lemen of this committee," he said, "I don't want to speak disrespec'ful of the police; but the intelligent officer who has jest left us, as if he'd got hold of the tail end of a rocket, and meant follerin' it right up, and holdin' tight on till it bust, ain't goin' to do any good for hisself or any one else in this business. The big diamond's lost, end he ain't goin' to find it in twenty-four hours, nor in twenty-four years. Ef it was a haystack, I don't say but what, with the help of Providence—and a good lot of it—he might be up to the job he's ondertook. But it ain't a haystack. End ef he was to grind up the whole of this country end every blessed thing upon it small, buddled it in a clean flume, and sifted the tailin' careful, he wouldn't find it. End these bein' my views, it stands to reason that I ain't goin' to hang about here lookin' at the place where I've come to grief, like an old female what's slipped off the side walk on a bit of orange peel. With your permission, Squire, I'm going away right off."

"I can not stop you, Brace, even if I wished to," replied Sir Edmund, who, be it observed knew nothing of the suspicion against the Judge. "I am inclined to think that you will be happier in seeking a new fortune than in lingering about with the faint hope of recovering the old. If the diamond is found, you will hear of it whereever you may be. Are you going to look for another diamond?"

"No, Squire; I'm goin' to find that, please God," Brace, replied; then, after a moment's pause, he said, "There's a matter of business to finish up before I go, sir: all the money I have in my pocket belongs to you."

"It is a loan; keep it, Brace,—keep it until you are in a position to pay me; and I hope, for your sake, that time may not be far hence."

"You're grit, Squire,—real grit! I won't refuse your kindness. I shall need a bit to start with. But I'll ask you, sir, to hold this till I claim it."

He went round to Sir Edmund.

"What is it, Brace?" asked the Baronet, taking the paper Brace drew from his pocket. He found it was the Judge's copy of agreement. "Oh, I do not need this, my good fellow," he protested; "I have your I O U, and that is as good now as ever it was."

"If you won't keep it for your own security, Squire, I'll ask you to keep it for my own. It's a kinder ce'tif'cate, and if any one hes got any thin' to say agen me when I'm not here to defend myelf, I'll ask you to let that up. Good-bye, Squire."

He held out his hand, and said, as Sir Edmund shook it cordially, "Thank you, sir, thank you! You are grit!"

He strode down the room, brushing past Van Hoeck, who sat immovable and silent as though he were carved in stone, and came to where I was standing. My face must have told him that my heart had hardened. But he stretched out his hand, and said hoarsely,—

"Say good-bye to us, pardner."

I folded my arms and shook my head. He dropped his hand by his side.

"Prehaps you're right," he said remorsefully, "prehaps you're not. Time will show that I've got a clean conscience, if heaven is just." He paused; then in a still lower tone, and with an accent of reproach, he added, "Say yer hope so, pardner, say yer hope so."

"I hope so," I said.

He shook his head ruefully.

"Taint yer old voice, Gentleman Thorne,—there's no heart in it. We've roughed it together, and we've shared our bacca out there, end,"—his chin twitched convulsively, and turning away, he muttered, "It takes all the pluck outer me to part like this."

Lola was standing in a corner of the room by the door, with her eyes fixed upon me. Brace was about to pass through on his way out, he caught up her wrist savagely in his hand. As savagely she tore it away and in her turn came and stood before me.

"I'm a-goin," she said.

"And a good riddance," I thought, exasperated by the belief that she knew where the diamond was and could reveal the whole mystery if she chose.

"You ain't goin' to let me go like him are yer?" she asked; "you ain't goin' to let me go without sayin' good-bye?"

There was deep pathos in her voice. The friendless little savage loved me. She had saved my life. My heart smote me for forgetting that. I gave her my two hands; she drew them round her slight body, and then flinging her arms about my neck she whispered, with tender impulsiveness:

"Shall I be good? Shall I tell you where it is?"

But just at that moment her fine ear caught the rustle of a woman's dress, and, catching sight of Edith, who was entering from the dining-room, she started back.

Scowling over her shoulder at Edith, her eyes aflame with hate, she said, in a voice from which all tenderness had gone:

"For her sake? No!" and without looking again at me, she went from the room and joined her father.

The Proper Way to Sit.

A proper sitting position requires that the spine shall be kept straight, and that the support needed for the upper part of the body shall be felt in the right place says Caroline Le Row in The Ladies' Home Journal. Therefore, sit as far back as possible in the chair, so that the lower part of the spine shall be braced against the back of the seat. If this back is straight the shoulders will also rest against it; if not, they will have no point of support, and will be found that they do not need it. The position makes no strain upon the ligaments of the spine. It allows a proper position of the shoulders consequently of the chest, consequently of the lungs, stomach, and every other part of the body. Their work is carried on naturally and comfortably, as is also the circulation of the blood which in a wrong sitting position is seriously interfered with. With the feet resting squarely upon the floor, the hands resting easily upon the lap, perfect equilibrium, and consequently perfect rest of the body, is secured. There is no strain upon any part of the body; no muscle or organ is required to do more than its legitimate amount of work. The arms should never be folded; for this position not only causes a strain upon the spine, and all the other evils already referred to, but, in addition, places the weight of the arms upon the stomach and the diaphragm, thereby increasing the labor of digestion and respiration. Placing the hands behind the back, if possible, is a good attitude to take occasionally, giving, as it does, the fullest expansion to the whole upper Novelist and Cook.

When Blazac, the famous French novelist, was actually engaged in the labor of composition he lived in the most frugal manner, absorbed in work and neglectful of the table. Rose, his cook, used to fall into despair when her master, during these months of production, neglected her dainty dishes. One of his friends writes:

I have seen her come into his room on tiptoe, bringing a delicious consomme, and trembling with eagerness to see him drink it. Blazac would catch sight of her; then he would toss back his mane of hair with an impatient jerk of the head, and exclaim in his roughest and most surly voice:

"Rose, go away! I don't want anything; let me alone!"

"But mossieu will ruin his health if he goes on in this way; mossieu will fall ill!"

"No, no! let me alone, I say," he would thunder. "I don't want anything You worry me. Go away!"

Then the good soul would turn very slowly, muttering, "To take such pains to please mossieu! And such a soup! How good it smells! Why should mossieu keep me in his service if he doesn't want what I do for him?"

This was too much for Balzac. He called her back, drank the soup at a gulp, and said, in his kindest voice, as she went off radiant to her kitchen: "Now, Rose, don't let this happen again."

Yet it did happen again whenever the stress of composition began, for so beloved was the great worker by his servants that they would brave abuse and displeasure for his good.

Brilliant Guess.

It is my lot to teach literature in a girls' class, writes a Companion correspondent. We were studying Gray's Elegy, and lingered long over the verse:

Some village Hampden, that with dauntless breast
The little tyrant of his fields withstood,
Some mute inglorious Milton here may rest,
Some Cromwell guiltless of his country's blood.

"What is the meaning of the second line?" I asked.

No response.

"'The little tyrant of his fields,'" I added, wheedlingly; but the girls only wrinkled their brows in thought.

At last one of them, a bland, brainless, amiable beauty, lifted her big brown eyes to mine and quavered, tentatively, "The potato-bug?"

Seven Days of Terror

London Telegraph.

A remarkable story of the sea comes from St. Malo, the narrator being an ancient mariner named Bauche, whose painful experience in a small boat on the ocean ought to be a warrant for the truth of his tale. Bauche had signed articles with the captain of a vessel called the Mathilde, in which he sailed to Martinique. While in the harbor of St. Pierre in a boat with the cabin boy one day he was driven oceanward by a gale of wind, and was knocked about for a week on the the waves before he was rescued by a Norwegian bark.

After the first night at sea Bauche says that the cabin boy became partly delirious. Water was filling the boat every instant, and in order to prevent the dying 'lad from being drowned in it, the old sailor made pails of the legs of his pantaloons, and was thus enabled to keep the bottom of the little craft tolerably dry. He had also to deprive himself of his shirt, which he utilized as a flag of distress. On the third day the cabin boy died, and hardly was the breath out of his body before seven or eight ferocious black sharks began to circle round the boat, which they sometimes almost touched. Rather than deliver up the dead body to the monsters of the deep, Bauche kept it until it became decomposed.

Being afraid of illness he at length threw it overboard, after having said his prayers over it, and the prey was speedily seized by the sharks, which disappeared with it, and did not show up again for about twenty-four hours or so. Bauche now felt so utterly miserable that he was thinking of throwing himself overboard when he was disuaded from his intention by the reappearance of the sharks, which, after eying him ravenously for some time, actually began to gambol before him as if in anticipation of a good feed off his body.

"I did not want to be eaten alive," remarked Bauche in his perilous adventures, "so I remained where I was and awaited assistance." On the seventh day the sailor lost consciousness, fell down in the boat, and was rescued in an insensible condition by Capt. Paderson, of the Wladimir.

In his mouth the Norwegian sailors found what they first thought was an old quid of tobacco, but which proved to be part of the horn handle of his knife, which Bauche was crunching to stave off hunger when he became unconscious. The rescued sailor, after having been taken to New Orleans, obtained a passage home to St. Malo. Only the other day he went down to the port to meet his old shipmates of the Mathilde, who had been wrecked off the coast of Newfoundland, whither they had made another voyage since Bauche disappeared at Martinique. The crew of the Mathilde had been rescued off the banks of Labrador by an English vessel. They had long, of course, given up Bauche and the cabin boy as lost in midocean, and great was their surprise when they beheld the former in flesh, and as hale and hearty as if he had never been without food on the deep for full seven days in an open boat, and in perilous contiguity to the teeth of the tigers of the ocean.

Why Dinner Was Very Late.

Here is one on Thad Spindle which, though it happened some time ago, has not been told: Thad went home one evening not long ago and found that dinner was not ready. The groceryman had not sent his basket of marketing which he had ordered on his way down town that morning. The cook had expected it every minute, and this caused the delay In no happy frame of mind he went to the grocery some blocks away and wanted to know why his market basket had not been sent out home. Regrets and apologies were ample. It would go at once.

Now Thad dosen't mind carrying a market basket when he is in good humor, but he left still in high dudgeon and scorned to touch it, leaving it for them to send. If there is one thing that he likes better than his dinner it is hunting, so on the way home he stopped to talk gun to his friend the doctor. He did not hurry, as he knew the dinner had to be cooked before it could be served. Finally he noticed that there was an exceedingly diminutive darky with an exceedingly large market basket sitting on the curbstone just out of earshot from him and the doctor. The darky looked very like one he had seen in the grocery, and the market basket looked very like his own. "What are you doing there?" he inquired. "W'y," stammered the nodding little sleepy head in black; as he started up, "w'y, sah, Miss Dora, she say fo' me to follah the gem'man, and I'se follah'n yo', sah."

Powder Marks in Suicide.

Illustrated American.

It is now begining to be admitted generally that a wound inflicted with a modern fire-arm may be accompanied by neither scorching nor powder tattooing, though the weapon may be held very close, if the bullet be driven by one of the modern fulminates contained in the same cap with the projectile. This lack of marks, formerly held to be unfailing, has given rise sometimes to theories of murder.

A case in point is reported from India. A Hindoo went down into the sandy bed of a river and shot himself through the head with a revolver of 45 caliber, making a wound about the edges of which there was not the slightest blackening or scorching. That he committed suicide there is no doubt, as the sandy ground showed no traces of other footsteps than his and as he left a note saying that he intended to kill himself.

WOMEN DISTRUST MEN.

Here Is One Who Had Her Doubts About the Conductor.

The utter lack of confidence that woman has in man was illustrated in a Penn avenue cable car the other day. A lady boarded the car at Sixth street.

"Let me off at Twenty-eight, please," she said to the conductor.

From Sixth to Twelfth streets she was engaged in getting seated and paying her fare. "Don't forget to let me off at Twenty-eighth, will you?" she said, as the conductor took her nickel, and he said he wouldn't.

At Twentieth she collected her parcels and stared at the conductor to remind him of his promise.

At Twenty-first she dropped a package which another passenger stepped on, then apologized.

At Twenty-second she looked out of the window to see if the conductor had called the right number.

At Twenty-third she moved to a seat nearer the door.

From Twenty-third to Twenty-fifth she was engaged in mentally criticising the spring suit of the lady opposite her.

At Twenty-sixth she nodded at the conductor.

At Twenty-seventh she stood up and got ready to leave the car.

As it stopped at Twenty-eight street, adds the Pittsburgh Post, she stepped from the platform and with a sigh of relief exclaimed: "Those horrid conductors can't be trusted to remember anything."

"Only an Amytower."

Close by a prosperous church in a Kansas town is a district known as "Tennessee Town," populated entirely by negroes. The pastor of the church had long made efforts to organize classes of the young colored boys for the purpose of giving them instruction in literary and scientific topics. He was only partly successful. Nothing that he could get for the entertainment or amusement of the restless, idle lads seemed to have any effect on them.

He tried magic lanterns and legerdemain, and all kinds of "clubs," but felt that he was not succeeding in the least. At last he purchased a small box of chemicals, practiced a list of experiments, and announced an illustrated lecture on "The Wonders of Little Things."

The little hall was packed with an enthusiastic audience, and the experiments were successful. Curious to know the reasons for the large attendance on this particular occasion, the long-suffering lecturer called up one of the brightest lads at the close of the entertainment and questioned him.

"What made so many boys come out to the lecture to-night?"

"I 'specs kase we 'lowed you was gwine ter blow yourself up!"

"What! Do the boys want to see me blown up?"

"No, sah," with a grin. "But dey years 'bout your 'speriments, an' dey wants ter see what might gwine ter happen!"

"Don't you know there's no danger with these things if they are rightly handled?"

"Yes, sah, but we knowed you'se only an amytower!"

That was the last chemical lecture in the course.

AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

There is said to be no truth in the report that errors have been found in the original survey of the boundary between the United States and Mexico.

President Harrison will send a message to congress suggesting remedies for the present unjust transportation arrangements between the United States and Canada.

J. C. Hill, chief of the Indian division says there is no danger of the settlers on the Mile Lac reservation being disturbed and that there is no cause for uneasiness.

John H. Lackey, private secretary to Gen. Rosencrans, register of the treasury, committed suicide by shooting himself through the head while laboring under temporary aberration of the mind.

The Mutual Life, New York and Connecticut Life Insurance companies succeeded in securing an order from the supreme court for a new trial in the somewhat celebrated Hilman life insurance companies out of a large amount of money by palming off the body of one man for that of another man on whose life there were large policies.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Gen. Thomas A. Rowley, who served with distinction in the Mexican war and in the Rebellion, was found dead in bed at Pittsburg. He was eighty-five years of age.

Rev. W. M. Speake, pastor of the Fourth Street M. E. church, Washington, was stricken with heart failure while addressing the Sunday school, and died a few minutes afterward.

E. N. Deboissere, a wealthy Frenchman, has made a deed of money, bank stock and property, in all amounting to $125,000, to the Odd Fellows of Kansas, to found a home for children of deceased members of the order.

President Eliot, of Harvard College, is back from his Western trip, but he declines to be interviewed about his Mormon speech at Salt Lake City. Possibly he thinks he has said just a little too much on the subject already.

Solomon Curtis Hamlin, the venerable father of Rev. Dr. Hamlin, died at Dr. Hamlin's residence in Washington, after a brief illness of Brights disease. Mr. Hamlin was seventy-five years of age and a native of Glenville, N. Y., but for a number of years he had lived in Michigan.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Texan lives are lost in a cyclone.

A tornado in New Zealand kills many people.

A railroad accident near Cleaves, Ohio, kills and injures many people.

Fire in the Warner institute, Brooklyn, destroyed the structure, causing a loss of $100,000.

A cloud burst struck Philadelphia, killing three men, who, with two companions were in a sail boat on the Delaware river.

At Rochester, N. H. fire totally destroyed the four-story frame shoe factory owned by George W. Anderson and occupied by F. W. Breed & Co., shoe manufatures of Lynn. Loss, $125,000; insurance, unknown.

James Pigeon, the fourteenth victim of the Central theater fire in Philadelphia, died. The coroner's jury has returned a verdict censuring the city and the proprietors of the theater for permitting the theater to be used as such.

The handsome hall of the Zoellner Maennechor, in East Brooklyn, was totally destroyed by fire. It is believed that two employes of the society perished in the flames. The total loss to the society is placed at $150,000, insurance between $80,000 and $90,000.

Supt. Bradley, of the school farm at Thompson Island Mass., report the finding of the bodies of five of the boys drowned April 10. All the bodies were floating in the water off City Point. As have been identified as follows: Frank Hitchcock, aged 19; Charles H. Graves, 17; William Curran, 17; Adelbert H. Packard, 16.

SINS AND SINNERS.

A Chicago man is arrested in St. Paul charged with swindling the American Express company.

A shooting affair occurred at Red Lodge, Mont., between Charles Sweeney, check weighman for the miners, and Thomas Willets, a coal digger. The quarrel began in the morning. Sweeney going home. Willets got drunk and renewed the fight, attacking Sweeney with a knife, when Sweeney shot him dead.

The engineer of a train approaching the Rochester, N. H., station saw a woman lying across the track. He gave a warning whistle, but her only response was to raise her head and deliberately place her neck on one of the rails. The engine passed over her, severing the head from the body. The suicide was Mrs. Thomas Downing. Domestic trouble probably drove her to commit suicide.

Two men, wearing masks and rubber coats, boarded the outgoing 'Frisco train at Cheltenham Mo., and tried to rob it, but not succeeding, fled. They got on the front end of a sleeping car and attempted to get inside, ordering a passenger to throw up his hands. He responded by drawing a revolver, and several shots were exchanged. One robber is supposed to be hit in the leg.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

The pope is preparing a brief in connection with the approaching Columbian celebration.

A band of Dervishers made a descent upon Serra, Egypt, and massacred thirty-four natives.

It is reported that the steamer Wolkow has foundered in the Caspian sea and that 250 passengers were drowned.

A Syndicate of French and Russian bankers has made the Russian government an offer to take charge of the work of construction of the trans-Siberian railway.

It is stated that Germany has accepted the invitation to the international silver conference.

A great demonstration of railroad men took place in London recently. The speeches were moderate in tone and the proceedings orderly.

Lord Salisbury in a speech practically admits that England's free trade policy is a failure because so many other nations are becoming protective.

The Vatican has sent a circular letter to the American bishops recommending the formation of a national union against Cahenslyism, or the project advocated by Herr Canensly to appoint bishops of the same nationality as the people whom they are to spiritually direct.

Another stormy meeting of the shareholders in the Freeman's Journal and National Press was held at Dublin the other day, for the purpose of deciding upon the reorganization of the board of directors. Mr. Gray, the chairman, and John Dillon on one side, and Timothy Healy on the other, had several hot interchanges of compliments, but no action was taken.

The latest advices received at Petch from the city of Fuenfkirchen, the capital of the country of Baranya, where a huge water spout burst, flooding the colliers situated in that place, are that twenty-one of the miners who were supposed to have perished have been brought up alive by the rescuing parties.

An aged nurse named Myer, residing at Brockenheim, a suburb of Frankfort Germany, has been arrested, charged with causing the death of 58 infants. The alleged crimes extend over a considerable length of time, and it is reported that several wealthy ladies of Frankfort are to be accused of complicity in the baby farmer's criminal operations.

The pope's pro-republican counsel is beginning to have some effect in France. A priest of St. Pierre du Gros Caillou, in Ardennes, has declined to bestow his blessing on the banker who is the depository of the funds of the imperialist committee of that district. The priest bases his refusal on the ground that the banker's place of business is surmounted by an imperial eagle, which the priest declares to be a seditious emblem.

An exciting incident occurred at Nice recently, two women nearly losing their lives at the hands of a dangerous fanatic, whose dangerous ideas in regard to an equal distribution of property among the people had evidently led him to commit the crime. The wife of Senhor Cocconato, the Portuguese vice consul at this place, was murderously attacked by her husband's valet, whereupon he fired several shots, wounding both women. It is thought that he is either insane or is an anarchist.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

The Liberal Republican territorial convention met at Salt Lake, Utah, and selected delegates to Minneapolis. C. C. Goodwin, editor of the Salt Lake Tribune, and C. E. Allen, were named as delegates. They are favorable to Harrison, but are uninstructed.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

Chairman Finley, it is said, will be appointed traffic manager of the Omaha.

The Western Passenger association lines are given authority to meet the Soo's cut on Eastern tourist rates.

A decision is rendered by the United States supreme court against the Northern Pacific in a suit involving lands in Wisconsin.

The Atchinson company contemplates the issue of a permanent fund to provide for betterments and improvements, and formal action may be taken in this direction at the next directors' meeting. It is understood that the plan will provide for the issue of $100,000,000 second mortgage bonds.

LABOR CIRCLE.

The tanners have decided upon an absolute shut down for sixty days or a curtailment of 20 per cent for four months.

The street car employes at Cleveland, Ohio, struck for $2 a day for conductors and motormen. The strike ended in five and a half hours, the motormen and conductors being granted 18 and 17 cents per hour, respectively, for ten hours.

A general strike by journeymen carpenters has taken place in Oranges, N. Y. The men demanded an eight-hour day and the boss carpenters refused. Three hundred men are out, and work is at a standstill. Twenty firms have shut down.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

Hamilton leads the National league as a base stealer.

Staley, of Boston, is the only man who has not hit safely.

Hutchinson and Kitteridge of Chicago are doing great batting.

Lowe, for Boston, played seventeen games without an error.

It may be that long John Reilly may play first for Baltimore and Whistler go to the out field.

Kansas City papers are quite sweet on their team and give Manning plenty of encouragement.

The reason the Baltimores have such poor success seems to be want of head work and ball sense.

Comisky is perfectly satisfied with his team of players, rumors to the contrary notwithstanding.

Killen the Washington pitcher, is weak at the bat—ten-strike-outs to five games was his recent average.

If the Western league pitchers don't awake the Milwaukee heavy batters will have tremendous batting averages.

The Young Men's Christian association at Cleveland will wage war against Sunday ball games, by boycott.

Corbett and his show are on the Pacific slope; he is in good condition at 190 pounds, at which weight he expects to fight Sullivan.

Tom Williams, the 140-pound Australian champion, knocked out Bill Hatcher before the National club in London, England, in just one minute.

The directors of the National Sporting Club of London have fixed Monday, May 30, for the Jackson-Slavin fight. Hall and Choynski will second Jackson and Mitchell and Jack Slavin will look after Slavin.

OTHERWISE.

Ignatius Donnelly's publishers secure a $5,293 judgment against him.

Prof. Briggs and his friends indulge in some plain talk regarding the charges against Dr. Briggs.

The cotton acreage in the South this year will be 15 to 20 per cent less than that of last year, owing to the bad weather.

The reports in Chicago that Daniel Coughlin is critically ill are stated by the prison officials to be untrue.

The St. Paul chamber of commerce extends an invitation to delegates to the national Republican convention to visit this city.

The rice crop of the United States for 1892 will be 50 per cent in advance of any previous year. The crop will scarcely fall short of 8,000,000 bushels.

Judge Sage of the United States district court at Cincinnati, rendered a decision in the case of the United States against the commissioners of Muskingum county, Ohio. The decision is a very important one, as it declares that the river and harbor act of congress is unconstitutional so far as it gives to the secretary of war judical powers.

The greatest log jam ever known in the Northwest now exists on the St. Croix at Eagle Island, Wis. Over 2,000,000 of timber are lodged between the banks for a distance of eight miles and the amount is being added to hourly. Hundreds of people visited the jam and witnessed the efforts to dislodge it.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, North and South Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

Fred C. Pilsbury, the Minneapolis miller is dead.

Judge E. S. Gorman, formerly probate judge dies in St. Paul.

A Winona man and his young son are sentenced to state prison for ten and seven years respectfully for arson.

Judge Cornish, St. Paul, orders the restitution of a deposit made with the Commercial bank the day it suspended.

There is no hope for St. Paul's public building bill at this session of congress.

A woman who had served a year in state prison for killing her husband, is found dead near Farmington Minn. Her second husband is under arrest.

The plans for the Minnesota world's fair building are approved in Chicago.

Charles A. Ruffee is to succeed Capt. Shuler as Indian agent at White Earth.

A cloudburst occurred at Redwood Falls recently. Sewers can not carry the water off and many cellars are filled with water. Some lots are entirely covered with water.

John Hoodicheck, an old veteran, fell from the steps of G. A. R. Hall, at Hutchinson, sustaining severe injuries, from which he died.

J. F. C. Behr, charged with criminal assault upon Miss Minnie Stapp, was convicted at St. James, of assault in the second degree.

In the probate court at Winona the final decree was made in the administration of the estate of William Windom, deceased. The property is all disposed of as directed in the will.

Peter Hebler, aged eighty-nine years, died at the residence in Lake City of his daughter, Mrs. John Gludt. The remains were interred at Wabasha, where deceased formerly lived.

Trustees of the Owatonna Bapitst Church awaded the contract of building their new church building to Kilroe Bros., Minneapolis, for $12,575, to be completed by Oct. 1, 1892.

There is a good deal of excitement at Little Falls, over the finding of the remains of a man near Randall, 10 miles west. Evidently the body had been burned. A pistol and jackknife was found with the charred bones. A coroner's inquest will be held.

An agreement has been reached by the Milwaukee & St. Paul and Chicago & Northwestern railways whereby they will place an interlocking switch at the crossing near Winona. These switches are to be placed at twelve other points of contact between the two roads.

Supt. L. P. Hunt, of the Minnesota world's fair commission, was in Kasson recently, and in a couple of hours succeeded in raising $250 toward Dodge county's quota to the world's fair fund. A note for the amount was signed by thirty of the leading business men.

A savings bank has been organized at Mankato, by L. G. M. Fletcher, George Brett, George T. Barr and William Davis, Jr., of that city, and James McMillan, A. H. Hedderly and George H. Fletcher, of Minneapolis. The building for the bank will be erected immediately.

Clare Peters, a young man from Sioux Center, while returning from Dakota fell from the train about three miles east of Osakis. The conductor or some of the train men noticed him at Osakis but missed him on the arrival at Sioux Center. The conductor notified the section men at Osakis who went out and found the body.

The south-bound passenger train on the Winona & Southwestern railway ran over a Swede named Johnson at Winona. The man was lying on the track drunk, and the thick inky blackness of the nigh hid him from the engineer's sight. He was single and lived on a farm near Le Roy.

Frank Dahl, of North Branch, Minn., had the index finger of his left hand torn off by a Clydesdale stallion that he has charge of. He was putting on the bridle and had his finger in the horse's mouth trying to fix the bit, when the horse shut his jaws, threw up his head and tore the finger off, pulling out the cord up to the elbow.

Two lunatics escaped from the Third insane hospital at Fergus Falls by lowering themselves from the third story with an improvised rope made of bed clothes. One was found by a farmer wandering about the woods in his night-clothes. The other, who came from the St. Cloud reformatory and is sometimes dangerous, is still at large.

J. D. Hines, property man at the Peoples Theater, Duluth, attempted to chop his wife to pieces with a hatchet. Before her screams attracted help he had chopped one thumb off, struck her in the face, a horrible gash running from her nose down the cheek, and another long gash from the top of her head to the back of her neck. Hines fled, but was arrested subsequently with a revolver in his hand. His wife's wounds will not prove serious unless from the shock or loss of blood.

NORTH DAKOTA.

A postoffice has been established at Ostrem, McIntosh county, with John L. Ostrem in charge.

The case of Nelson, the defaulting bookkeeper at Grand Forks, was brought before the United States grand jury at Fargo, and an indictment was found. He will be brought here for trial.

The remains of George Hass were taken to Fargo from Minneapolis and he was buried from the Catholic Church. The fire department attended the funeral, the deceased having been a charter member o the Hook and Ladder Company.

Hugh Wheeler was thrown from a horse at Dickinson, striking on his head, producing concussion of the brain. He was unconscious all day and his recovery is doubtful. Wheeler lately came from Minnesota.

The date for the North Dakota Press association has been settled as June 14 and 15 at Fargo. An interesting program is announced, and among the speakers are Gov. Burke, Hon. W. F. Ball, A. L. Cary and Allen J. Blethen

It is known at Wahpeton, that Dr. J. N. Fradenburgh has resigned the presidency of the Red River Valley University. He is now at Chautauqua and will deliver a course of lectures this summer at Round Lake.

Work was resumed on the Red River Valley University building at Wahpeton, after a rest of six months. The building will cost $25,000 more than was expected. This is the reason the school did not open last fall. The trustees say it will surely open next fall.

Postal clerks assigned to trains 2 and 3. Northern Pacific railway known as the short run of the St. Paul and Helena railroad postoffice, are ordered to extend run so as to end at Mandan, increase in distance 108 miles, making whole distance 457 miles.

Sheriff Stinson, of Barnes county, attempted to arrest four men charged with selling liquor. Two escaped but were recaptured. The names of those arrested at Casselton and Fargo are H. Stensil, R. Lithmand Arle Olson. It is charged they have been running a blind pig for some time.

A Valley City Special says a large number of tramps are quartered in this vicinity, ostensibly searching for work. Mr. Enerson's house was entered, and the would-be thief is now in custody. The Scandinavians of this county have raised $800 for their celebration on the 27th inst. and expect an immense crowd. Hon. Knute Nelson and others will speak in Island Park and the program includes races, open air concert, parade, ball and fireworks.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

J. J. McCanna's barn at Cando, burned with contents including hay, grain and five head of horses. Loss, $2,000; insured in St. Paul Fire and Marine Insurance company.

Sioux Falls subscribed $2,000 cash to the state World's Fair fund, in case $15,000 is raised. President Oschenrieter and Secretary Gibbs, of the new commission, are delighted over the encouragement they are receiving.

Secretary Jeffries, of the South Dakota Russian relief commission, estimates that at the rate contributions are coming in that not less than fifty car loads of flour and other supplies will be collected for the Russians.

The board of trustees of the Agricultural College has been in session for the past few days. Miss Nellie Berkey, instructor in art, was reappointed for the ensuing term. Halvor C. Solberg, who has been instructor in wood-shop work for the past two years, was put at the head of the mechanical department, at a salary of $1,200.

Rasmus Nelson, a Milwaukee section hand, was arrested at Aberdeen for attacking his wife and children with a butcher knife and other weapons, and driving them from home. The brute was drunk when he committed the offense. Mrs. Nelson swore out the warrant.

Wheat is looking well around Miller, notwithstanding the wet, cold weather experienced this spring. The farmers are now busy sowing a large acreage to flax and millet, but will not plant much corn, owing to the advanced season. The prospect for a wonderful harvest could not well be improved upon.

The richest find ever made in the Black Hills has been uncovered at the Cora mines at Galena. It is silver ores, from which assays running as high as $17,000 per ton have been received. A local expert states there are sighted in the mine from 60 to 70 tons of ore that will average $4,000 per ton.

Last April an account was sent from Sioux Falls of the marriage of two wealthy New York parties—a Mrs. Leavitt and E. Demauraic. Since the marriage they have been enjoying their honeymoon on the Pacific coast and arrived in New York recently to face a suit against Demauraic for bigamy.

William R. Kendall of Worcester, Mass., has been granted a divorce by Judge Atkins at Sioux Falls. His experience in matrimony has been varied. He lived with wife number one eight years, and with the second two years. Mr. Kendall is now engaged to a Miss Holman of Worcester. He owns several strings of race horses.

The president of the state world's fair commission was in Aberdeen recently for the purpose of interesting the citizens in raising the $1,000 as the quota of Brown county. A public meeting was held and a committee appointed with instructions to perfect a plan for raising the money. Brown county will not be behind

WISCONSIN.

Reports of the shipments from Ashland show a total of 56,416 tons shipped from all three docks. Norris mine is by far the heaviest shipper.

Calvin D. W. Leonard, of Dayton, Green county, died from lockjaw, resulting from running a nail into his foot. Mr. Leonard was one of the leading citizens of the county.

Levi Breeze, manager of the Capital House, the second largest hotel in Madison, assigned. The creditors are many and the individual debts small. The assets aggregate $5,000. Chicago and Milwaukee grocers get slightly nipped.

Adam Guckenberger, sent to the penitentiary for 15 years from Wood county, for criminal assault, suicided in his cell by hanging. He was found when the cells were opened to feed the prisoners. He had tied his hands and feet to make sure that he would not release himself after swinging off the cell stool.

The Ashland city government is in an uproar over the appointment of sanitary policeman. Mayor Durfee's appointment of E. R. Green was not confirmed by the city council legally, it is claimed, hence Martin Garvey, the old official, will not give up his star. Both men are issuing orders, and the matter will be carried to the courts.

Four lumbermen, walking on the railroad track from Chicago Junction to Shell Lake discovered two track straps fastened securely on the track at a curve north of here so that it was almost impossible to remove them. This was 20 minutes before the passenger train's time, and was apparently done with mischievous intent. Other impediments were discovered.

A round-up by police of West Superior of the inmates of disreputable houses brought about 75 offenders, who were fined from $5 to $75 each, and all who fail to call and pay every month will be driven from the city. This is the first time a system like this has been tried. It is proposed to use the money so collected for the erection and maintenance of a hospital.

IOWA.

D. J. Lamb, a farmer living near Walker, attempted to cross the Burlington road ahead of a passenger train the other night, and was struck and instantly killed.

The first delegation convention of the Young People's Christian Union of the United Brethern Church, embracing the entire Iowa conference met at Cedar Rapids.

Ed Woodruff of Mechanicsville, convicted of burglary in the district court at Tipton, attempted suicide in his cell by hanging. The jailor discovered him in time to save his life.

The residence of Jerome Beck the nurseryman living a mile south of Burlington was entered by burglars who sandbagged, the old man and made away with all of his ready cash.

The first session of the state encampment Sons of Veterans was held at Waterloo, Iowa, washouts on the roads centering here having delayed delegates. Division officers are nearly all present and nearly every camp in the state is represented.

The grand Lodge, A. O. U. W. adopted an amendment providing for graded assessments with the restriction that $2,000 should be the maximum amount of insurance which one individual could hold in this lodge. The meeting closed.

Dr. L. Y. Hayes, president of Buena Nista college at Stone Lake, died after a short illness. Mr. Hayes was formerly president of the Presbyterian college at Fort Dodge and was known as one of the leading educators of the state.

A floater was found, the other evening just below Clinton. The man was about 50 years of age. H wore a good black suit with light underclothes. He had been in the water about two weeks. There were no marks of violence. The only articles found were two Dubuque street car checks.

R. F. Bevins, a blacksmith and wagonmaker of Parnell, after raising quite a sum of money by forging his father-in-law's name to several notes, decamped for parts unknown, leaving unpaid bills to the amount of $1,500 and a wife and four small children in destitute circumstances. Officers have been put on his trail.

Robert T. Soutter, eighteen-year-old son of C. B. Soutter, of T. M. Sinclair & Co., of Cedar Rapids was instantly killed by an electric car by his horse suddenly becoming unmanageable and jumping directly in front of the rapidly moving car. Both were borne to the ground and young Soutter was mangled horribly. No blame is attached to the motorman.

A bad wreck occurred a few miles east of Red Oak on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. Two trains came together at a curve, instantly killing Engineer Charles Connell and seriously injuring Brakeman Maine and Conductor Farrell. Six box cars were totally wrecked, as were also both engines and the baggage car of the passenger train.

A Chicago Society Girl.

The part the young girl plays in Chicago society is very important; in comparison with that taken by the young matrons and the older married people, almost too much so. It has been stated that society exists only as a matrimonial bureau, organized and conducted solely for the benefit of the debutante, who lives a brief butterfly existence in a shower of compliments and flowers before she marries and retires from view. This is an over-statement, but not so egregious a one as might be wished. Older people, with, of course, some notable exceptions, do not consider society to hold any obligations for them. There are very few houses where dinners are given with any reference to the bringing together of the men and women who, in the prime of their lives, are influencing and determining the life of the city. Young and old people, also, are very rarely asked together, which is a loss to both—to the young of the desirable contact with minds of force, maturity and experience; to the old of the joyful, refreshing influences of youth. Hence it happens that the men see each other at the clubs, the women at their luncheon parties and literary societies, and a really regrettable separation of accupation and thought establishes itself. Every possible protection is given to the debutante in her entrance into the world, but here, as elsewhere in America, she is permitted to follow her own inclinations in the question of marriage.

Shopping by System

"But," says some woman, "we must 'shop;' we must get the things we want." Certainly. Bless your heart, shop all you want, but why not apply some kind of a system to the idea? writes Edward W. Bok in the May Ladies Home Journal. Don't make a day of it. Give an occasional morning to the pleasure(?), and break it up in pieces. "Easy talking," says some one, "but we cannot always leave our homes when we want to, as you men can." My dear woman, God give you just exactly the same amount of time as he does to men. And he hasn't given you a particle more to do within that period of time. The trouble is that women are not systematic enough. I played the part of eavesdropper in some of the stores, and was surprised to find how few women really knew just what they wanted. They, knew in a general way, but not in a definite sense. Now, when a man goes shopping he knows precisely what he wants, asks for it, gets it, pays for it and goes away. Women's purchases are undoubtedly different, and such a simple system cannot, perhaps, be followed by them. But that women could simplify their shopping expeditions, numbers of their own sex have confessed to me within the last few days.

Musical Note.

"Were you at the opera last night?" asked Gilhooly of Hostetter McGinnis.

"Yes."

"How did you like the tovt ensemble?"

"Not very well. I thought that the orchestra gave us entirely too much toot as well as too much cymbals."

IS SHE GUILTY?

Mrs. Russell's Case Goes to the Jury Without Argument by Either Side.

Judge Bailey Makes His Charge and the Jury Retired Early Last Night.

Eau Claire, Wis., Special, May 24.—There was some surprise this afternoon when Mr. James, attorney for the accused in the Russell murder trial, announced that the defense had no rebuttal to put in, but there was genuine amazement when Judge Bailey immediately thereafter stated that the case would be given to the jury without argument by either side. The long suffering jurymen gazed in blank astonishment for a moment, and then a smile of gratification overspread the faces of the twelve men who went into the jury box twenty-eight days ago. The smile spread to the lawyers, and Mrs. Russell, who was quite cheerful in the afternoon, smiled also. Court adjourned to 7:30 p. m., the hour fixed for the delivery of the judge's charge.

The proposition to submit without argument came first from Mr. James, and District Attorney Frawley and Mr. Erwin acceded to it on the understanding that the facts in the case were not to be reviewed in the judge's charge. The defense this afternoon called Sheriff Flemming and made him tell a good deal of the story of the deception practiced on Mrs. Russell when she was arrested. Then District Attorney Frawley himself was placed on the stand and subjected to a hot cross-fire on the same subject. He frankly told the whole story and did not seem to care what was thought of it. He said in substance:

I sent Russ Whipple to the jail that night to get what he could of the truth about this murder. I went to the central telephone office, told Whipple to go to the jail and tell Mrs. Russell he was a lofer, named Sweeney, from Fifield and a friend, and to find out everything he could. I talked to Mrs. Russell by telephone, I represented myself as no particular person, but represented myself as being at Mr. Carson's. When she asked whether it was Carson or Bufluston I gave an evasive answer. I intended to deceive her.

The district attorney found out by this means that the defense would produce the package of poison found in the bed of the deceased, but the court would not admit evidence as to what Russell really said. The judge said he purposed to certify to the supreme court the

of this case; the way in which Mrs. Russell was arrested; the manner in which she came to waive examination; the episode at the jail, and the publication of the inflammatory letter in a local paper the day before the trial began; whether Mrs. Russell, the accused, had had a constitutional trial, and whether the actions of the district attorney had not deprived her of it.

Mr. Erwin, for the state, tried to get in some evidence as to the good character of Sarah Halverson, the girl who Mrs. Russell's nephew, Elmer Horton, swore he saw sitting on the lap of Peter Erickson on the piazza one moonlight night. The court ruled the evidence out and so Sarah was put on the stand and said that Horton's story was false. Then Mr. Erwin put in evidence an almanac to show there was no moon that night. The judge examined the almanac and told Mr. Erwin that he had read the figures wrong and that the almanac proved, if it proved anything, that there certainly was a moon that night. When Prof. Mulliken of St. Paul was called by the state to testify as a handwriting expert all over the field once more. The court said, "You will have to show more facts than this, Mr. Erwin, before he can testify." Witness was shown Exhibit 8, and Mr. Erwin asked him to illustrate his evidence by comparisons on a blackboard. The judge said no such comparisons would be allowed. "Besides that," the judge added, "the witness has not shown himself to be an expert." Mr. Erwin and Mr. Frawley endeavored to argue the matter with the judge, but his honor said the matter was settled, and he wanted to hear no more about it. The witness, he said, was deficient in scientific and practical knowledge.

Mr. Erwin—Well, then we ask time to get an expert here.

The court—Well, I won't give you time.

The matter was argued further, but the judge sharply "closed the debate," and Mr. Erwin remarked "That is all then, professor," and Prof. Mulliken left the stand. Mr. Erwin then called Prof. Curtis and asked him if in his opinion the handwriting on the package of poison and that of Adam Erickson were the same and witness said he thought not. Curtiss was a witness for the defense.

THE JURY CHARGED.

At 8 o'clock to-night in a court room crowded to suffocation the jury stood up to listen to Judge Bailey's charge in the Russell case. As the opening sentences describing the crime of murder by poison were read tears filled the eyes of Mrs. Russell and she partially buried her face in a handkerchief. Later she rallied, and by the time the jury had retired she was composedly chatting with her husband. Judge Bailey in his charge called attention to the fact that the character of the evidence relied on by the state to prove the charge against the accused was presumptively circumstantial as distinguished from evidence conclusively circumstantial; also that the jury must not infer, even though the accused had love for the husband of the deceased, that such love was a sufficient motive or that it would naturally prompt to the crime of murder. Reference is made in the charge to the accusation by the defense against the district attorney, and the judge said if it was made to appear that the prosecuting officer had suppressed or manufactured any evidence or attempted it then the whole testimony on which a conviction is asked may be thus tainted so as to be unreliable. At the same time, he said, the law presumed the district attorney innocent of any willful or guilty intent. The jury retired at 8:25 p. m.

Fire Bugs at Work.

Marion Junction, S. D., Special, May 24.—An incendiary fire last night caused a total loss to Louis Seward of his store and stock of general merchandise of $3,800; insurance, $960.

Lincoln County Prohibitionists.

Lake Benton, Minn., Special, May 24.—The Prohibition county convention for Lincoln county was held here to-day. M. F. Woodard and F. J. Carlisle were elected delegates to the state convention, and J. M. Addington and John Stegner were chosen delegates the congressional convention. Prohibitionists who went with the Alliance two years ago were noticed in the convention. A new county central committee was elected, and after considerable discussion the convention decided to put a county ticket in the field this year. At night Rev. J. H. Hector addressed one of the largest gatherings ever held here.

CONDENSED ELTEGRAMS.

A case of small pox is reported at the Palmer house, Chicago.

The Jebus made a sacrifice of 200 people, including many maidens, in order to propitiate the gods prior to battling with the British.

Fifteen students in the canton of St. Gall were boating on Lake Zurich, Switzerland, when their boat was capsized and seven of them were drowned.

Two men named Williams and Davis got into a bloody fight at O'Fallon, Mo., in which each of them carved the other in a most brutal manner. Both will die.

Capt. William A. Andrews of Boston intends to cross the ocean in a sail boat, the smallest craft that has been built for a trans-Atlantic voyage. He expects to sail by July 1.

Thomas O'Brien, the notorious American criminal and bunco steerer, was captured yesterday by the French police at Havre, but later succeeded in making his escape, and is again at large.

Gen. H. F. Sickles, a cousin of Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, and who served with Sherman and was afterwards military governor of South Carolina, died yesterday in Monte Vista, Colo., aged seventy-two.

The rather sensational suit of George Durkee and other heirs of Charles Durkee against Franklin H. Head, the millionaire manufacturer and club man of Chicago, has been dismissed for want of equity.

While a number of men were indulging in a dance near Atlanta, Ga., a quarrel ensued and pistols were used. Bill Taylor and "Kid" Sanford were killed and Robert Taylor so seriously wounded that his life is despaired of.

The tin and sheet iron workers and cornice makers of Chicago have formally decided to strike to-day in two shops at a time for an eight-hour day and a minimum rate of 45 cents an hour. Fifteen hundred men are involved.

DENIES USING FORCE.

The Alleged Abductor of the Iowa School Teacher Arrested.

Northwood, Iowa, Special, May 24.—Sheriff Cornick located and arrested W. L. Baine near Manley last night, who, it is alleged, abducted Chattie McDonald near Jessup, Iowa, two weeks ago, and forced her to accompany him to Des Moines, where she says he compelled her to marry him under threats of death. Sheriff Higbee of Independence arrived here to-day with the $200 reward, which he paid to Sheriff Cornick and took his prisoner back with him. Baine is slimly built and weighs only 132 pounds and is but twenty-two years of age, while Chattie is twenty and tips the beam at 151. He has been at work for H. E. Wilcox on a farm for eight days under the assumed name of Charles Brown. He denies abducting the woman, and says she wrote to him to meet her near the school house the day they left, before school called; that she accompanied him of her own free will and that they were married. He says he would have returned and given himself up if he could have been assured safety, as there were vicious threats of lynching by the woman's friends and parents, who are Irish Catholics. When assured to-day by Sheriff Highbee that he should have ample protection he went willingly. He wrote a letter to his brother at Jessup which led to his identity.

WANTED TO HANG.

Unusual Request of a Negro Murderer in Louisiana.

Bastrop, La., Special, May 24.—An extraordinary murder and lynching occurred here yesterday. One man committed the murder and one man did the lynching, with the assistance of the murderer. S. Chambliss Brigham was manager for Col. George C. Phillips, who owns a plantation on Island de Sirard. Mr. Brigham was twenty-five years of age. While he was on the field he was shot from ambush by an old negro, who fired three shots with a rifle, killing Mr. Brigham instantly. The negro then walked to the plantation residence, summoned Col. Phillips, and told him he had killed Brigham and wanted to be hanged for it. Col. Phillips put a rope around the negro's neck, pulled the rope over the limb of a tree and the negro was soon swinging in a death struggle. No motive is assigned for the murder, and it is thought the negro was insane, although he had lived on the plantation for years without giving any signs of unsound mind.

MURDER SUSPECTED.

Mysterious Death of a Cleveland Contractor Near Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, May 24.—The body found in Lake La Belle, Oconomowoc, yesterday has been identified as that of S. McElroy, a street contractor of Cleveland, Ohio. It is supposed to be a case of murder. Physicians who conducted the post-mortem examination testified that there were no marks of violence, but the lungs were filled with air, showing that death was not due to drowning. There is a woman in the case, and she is now under surveillance. Her name is Mary Wendelstein, alias Mag Bloomerstein, wife of a Minneapolis railroad man, and the couple stopped for three days at an Oconomowoc boarding house. Mrs. Wendelstein was found at Hartland. When she was taken to view the body, she at once identified it as that of McElroy. She denies all knowledge of the manner in which he met his death, and declares she last saw McElroy when she parted with him last week. The authorities are sifting the mystery, and expect to establish a case of murder.

A Denial That Doesn't Deny.

Cincinnati, May 24.—Ex-Gov. Foraker to-day made a half-way denial of the report that he is to make the speech nominating Blaine in the Minneapolis convention. He strongly expressed his preference for Blaine as a candidate, however. Mr. Foraker further said that if it should come to a test between Harrison and Sherman the senator would have practically the solid support of Ohio.

Worthy of Remembrance.

Sioux City, Iowa, May 24.—An immense crowd attended the funeral yesterday of Andrew G. Anderson, the Swedish engineer who rescued seven persons from the flood. He was drowned while trying to save a woman. The Knights of Pythias and citizens will, by subscription, set up a fitting monument in his honor.

A Main Yankee has an order for idols and graven images from Central Asia that will keep him at work for two years. The most singular part of the business is that the order was brought a missionary, also a Maine man, who has come back for a rest from his labors If the hethen must bow down to graven images, your Yankee missionary thinks they might as well be made in Yankeedom. If it keeps on Central Asia will have to put a protective tariff on its gods.—Minneapolis Journal.

The postal fractional note bill seems to have a prospect of passage in congress. Notes, under its provisions, are issued of various small denominations and sold at the postoffices to the people. The notes are really fractional currency and can be used as currency being redeemable at the postoffices. The adventage of such notes for remitting small amounts of money by mail is evident. But such paper ought to have a time limit of currency, because, in circulation it becomes dirty and ragged. —Journal.

George Washington once owned a calf, and that calf was the fortunate possessor of a hide. In due course the calf's cuticle was converted into leather, and the leather into shoes. A Tennessee man now ownes the shoes and they will be exhibited at the Worlds Fair, along with a vial of the water in which was boiled the egg that Columbus caused to stand on end, a flask of air from Thomas Jefferson's bed chamber a box of free soil obtained in Kansas during John Brown's campaign and a demijohon of the spirit of 76.—Tribune.

The official ballot of the coming election will be an imposing document. Nominations for county officers, one congressman, one district judge, three representatives to the legislature are to go upon the ballots. Four parties may make nominations and there must be one space left blank after the names for each office. The space given to each name by the law is three-eights of an inch. Allow five eights of an inch for the head and half inch margins top and bottom; and the whole ticket will be some twenty-six inches long.—Fertile Journal.

Polk County Journal: The sudden death of one of our business men, Mr. R. P. Herrick, cast a gloom over our city such as is seldom witnessed. Mr. Herrick was a man to make many and warm friends and few if any enemies. And when we reflect that he will mingle no more with us upon this earth it causes a feeling of sadress to rest upon this comunity. He was a man of broad and liberal views, a public-spirited man, and the monument he helped to build (the large flowering mill) stands as a reminder of the kind of a man that has gone from us never to return.

The fakir is abroad in the land. This time it is the "all wool and a yard wide" fiend, who palm off "extra fine goods" with the usual story of a bankrupt sale and the seller is traveling for his health and to benefit mankind in general and particular. The goods are always of the very poorest quality, composed of cotton, shoddy, flocks and all such low grade stock, well worked in filling and carefully finished to cover defect. They are no good. After loading the farmer down with this perfectly worthless trash the fakir cinches him with a note to pay and pays it; the fakir has the money and skips. If first class goods could be sold at fourth class prices your local mercants would know it and keep them on hand.—Wilmar Argus.

Crookston Times: Many persons inquiring for government land seem not to be aware of the full effect of the act of Congress passed March 3 1891 under this act both the pre-emption and timber culture law were abolished and all lands that had, prior to that time, been subject to private entry were withdrawn, and can now only be taken under the homestead law. The provisions of the homestead law have also been changed so as to require a residence and cultivation of fourteen months before an entryman can make final proof and payment for the land, only six months residence having been required under the original homestead law. These are facts that landseekers should bear in mind.

The following taken from an exchange, is what we consider good advice and that is the reason we copy it:

"Stand by your own town. Remember that in it you make your home. Stand by it as you would by your family or your wife, for the town is your own, therefore never run it down, Give the town you live in your best; give it the benefit of your experiance in the way of improvement and growth. Chicago don't need you to speculate on her city government but your own plain home town may need your help and sympathy. If you don't like your town, clear out, and let somebody else in. Don't be afraid of every dollar you invest in the way of improvement; not a 10-cent piece is spent but there is some good comes of it. Stand by all things that tend to advance the general good, and bitterly stand against all who dare to run the town down.

Washington May 20.—Senator Davis introduced a bill to provide for allotments to Indians on the White Earth Indian agency. It authorizes the president to allott to each Indian legally residing on the White Earth agency, and to those Indians who may remove to said reservation who are entitled to allotment under the treaty of April 18 1867, between the United States and Chippewas, 160 acres of land and said allotments shall be made and grants issued therefore in the same manner and having the same effect as is provided in the general allotment act of Feb. 8 1867. It also provides that any allotments of land less than 160 acres heretofore made and not accepted by the Indians may be cancelled by the secretary of the interior and new allotments of 160 acres to each Indian entitled thereto may be issued in lieu of those cancelled.—Dispatch.

School libraries in our village and country schools are multiplying. It was the keen eye of Mr. Kiehle Minnesota's Superintendent of public instruction, we believe, that saw that the teacher and pupils in our small schools in the villages and in the country, above all others school workers, need the school library. State funds are granted to aid each school library which the school itself will purchase and partly pay for. Thus teachers are founding permanent libraries all over the state In these little centers of learning. And what unto'd good these libraries foretel in education, in literature, in religion in science, in journalism, in statesmanship, in agriculture, in invention, yes in every department of American life. Thousands of the State's boys and girls thus by library reading in childhood from habits that imbibe ideas which make great men and noble women. Teachers, speak to the school officers and your schools about it and by a school exhibition or in some way begin this good enterprise,—The Message.

JUST ONE CENT SHORT.

Not Much, but It Caused a Lady a Lot of Trouble.

There are some things more embarrassing than to simply be without money. One of these is to be a Harlem lady down town with four cents. Nine miles from a seventh floor nest short one cent is worse than Sheridan twenty miles away on a thoroughbred horse. A lady who lives in Harlem and is accustomed to spending her small change in contiguous shopping districts found herself in this unfortunate predicament a day or two ago. She didn't make the discovery until she had reached the elevated platform to return home—then she almost fainted. She had purchased an evening paper as she came up and was short just that one cent. She had overtraded. She felt through everything composing her costume likely to contain money, and added and subtracted, multiplied and divided, but only the four cents remained. Conscious of the scowls of the cold, cynical gateman and the curiosity of those who noticed her at all, she modestly withdrew down the stair, not, however, before a gentleman had lifted his hat politely and inquired if she had lost anything.

"N-no; oh, no—thank you," she had replied confusedly and got away.

She was neither good looking nor young. It is painful to admit this, but it is necessary for the truth of history and to show why she didn't go right along through and have half a dozen gentlemen to assist her. Being neither good looking nor young and accustomed to the seclusion of Harlem, she was exceedingly timid of the world that roars and seethes in lower Broadway. It was after 4 o'clock and the few acquaintances she could think of had gone home, she felt certain. When she paused at the bottom of the elevated steps her knees knocked together so violently she could hardly stand up. Her first thought was the boy who sold her the paper—perhaps he'd take it back.

"Awe! w'at are ye given me?" said the boy when this was suggested.

"I'm giving you the paper, if you'll give me back that cent—I n-need it to go home, and"—(Oh, the humiliating confession!)

"Rats! Come off yer perch now, old woman! I ain't no chump!"

"Old woman!" Gracious heavens! All for one cent too—and she with a bank account and a husband with a bank account and three children with bank accounts. It was dreadful, but she was desperate. If this boy wouldn't take back the paper she would have to beg a cent of somebody, and that—oh, dear! Such horrible people do that every day and nobody would believe her! She pleaded with the boy to buy the paper.

"Here—give me a paper!" said a man of the crowd gruffly shoving a cent into her hand. He had just come along and caught at the first paper extended as he made for the stairs; but as he put the penny in her hand he noted, half blindly, that the hand was white and soft and the fingers wore handsome rings. He had reached the second step before this got lodgment in his busy brain and then he looked back and said:

"Well, I'm dashed! I didn't know there was so much money in the newspaper business!"

The poor, blushing lady, clutching her cent, hurried across to the other stair and reached home to fall into hysterics when she told her husband. And he, the brute, almost has hysterics every time he tells of it.—New York Herald.

Where Potatoes Are Raised.

The potato is quite an important vegetable in the United States, and we sometimes speak of supplying other lands in a manner to imply that here is the chief source of supply for the potato eating world. This deduction is very far from the truth. The potato crop of the country is in the abstract a large one, amounting to about 200,000,000 bushels annually, but this quantity is greatly exceeded by some of the tuber growing countries of Europe.

Germany, which leads the world in this respect, grows nearly four times as many; Russia produces over 500,000,000 bushels, France nearly 400,000,000, and Austro-Hungary, apart from the quantity credited to the rest of Germany, raises nearly as many. Great Britain, as a whole, raises about as many as the United States, but she consumes a great many more in proportion to the population.—Good Housekeeping.

Professor Swing's Dog.

Professor David Swing, who is to Chicago what Beecher was to Brooklyn and Spurgeon to London, has a diminutive Mexican dog, Chihuahua by name, whose personality is said to be as interesting as that of his distinguished owner. Chihuahua is treated with all the consideration shown to the other members of the household. He is fed at table, and his way made smooth of all its rough places, while as evidence of his mental attainments he has accumulated a knowledge of the meaning of twenty-five different words, which enables him to answer with descrimination when spoken to. The greatest honor of Chihuahua's life was bestowed on him when Canon Farrar fed him with turkey from the table with his own reverend hand.—New York World

What We Owe to the Arabs.

It was to the Arabs and the Jews that we probably owe the discovery of America. From them the Spaniards and Portuguese learned all that they knew of civilization. The Arabs from the Ninth to the Twelfth centuries were the rulers of the sea, the founders of European commerce. Edrisi, the Arab historian, describes the harbors of Almeria, in Spain, filled with the ships of the east and of Lisbon (Eschbona), the center of wealth and trade. Two Mohammedan travelers, or one, who visited China in the Ninth century, found its ports frequented by the vessels of their countrymen, who sailed around the coasts of India. Edrisi again describes the China seas, unknown to Greek and Roman, and the Chinese ships as the finest of their kind.

The adventurous Arab sailors were found in every sea. It is from them that Portugal and Spain learned the art of shipbuilding, as most of the other arts. In 1466 the Spaniards everywhere clothed in Arab dress, imitating the Arab manners, riding Arab horses and the kings surrounded by Arab guards. Splendid Cordova and matchless Granada still ruled the taste of the peninsula. Even the chief terms of business and naval affairs, of police and finance, the Spaniards borrowed from the Arabs. The maravedi, an Arab coin, was used in the time of Columbus to express all their moneyed transactions.—Eugene Lawrence in Harper's.

Baby Language.

The matron of a well managed foundling institution in this city, when interrogated the other day, said: "I am almost convinced if little babies were left to themselves they would form a curious language of their own. In it sounds soft and simple would predominate and gestures would form half of the conversation. Have you ever studied the faces of these little sprites and seen their big, bright eyes twinkle and their chubby little fingers and dimpled hands restlessly move without ceasing, day in and day out? Their language would be cute enough and all monosyllables.

"Without much talk they manage to communicate with each other so as to be understood, and curious little sounds will express their pleasure, disgust, contempt, love or hate. Of course we call it 'baby talk' or 'infant's prattle,' but if they were to work out their own way of communication it would be a regular built language, and a concise one too."—Philadelphia Press.

The Weavers Among the Moqui Indians.

The Moqui Indians are the best weavers in America, except the once remarkable but now less skillful Navajos, and their mantas (the characteristic black woolen dresses of Pueblo women) and dancing girdles are so famous that the Indians of the Rio Grande valley often travel 300 miles or more on foot or on burros, simply to trade for the long wearing products of the rude, homemade looms of Moqui. The Moquis also make valuable and very curious fur blankets by twisting the skins of rabbits into ropes and then sewing these together—a custom which Coronado found among them 350 years ago, before there were any sheep to yield wool for such fabrics as they now weave, and when their only dress materials were skins and the cotton they raised.—Charles F. Lummis in St. Nicholas.

Why There Are No Cross Eyed Actors.

A person with cross or squint eyes is considered a hoodoo on the stage. Woe to the company which carries a man or woman with his or her optics in this condition! Disaster dire will surely overtake them. Likewise a lameness, a clubfoot or a deformed hand will give to the person so afflicted the dreaded title and make it almost impossible for him to "strut his hour upon the stage." To have a cross eyed person look you squarely in the face is a sign of bad luck for thirty days.

An antidote to the effect of the evil eye is to cross your first fingers on each hand, and then eject spittle three times through the notch thus formed. To turn on your heel three times and spit over your left shoulder will, it is thought, avert the evil.—Chicago Herald.

Some Maori Traits.

A dusky worshiper, whose requests for blankets had at last elicited a decided refusal from the missionary, replied, "Kapai" (good); "no more blankets, no more hallelujahs," and thereupon returned to the faith of his fathers. No less humorous, though in another way, was the remark of a Maori who had claimed a piece of land and had been asked to tell the court on what proof he relied for his title. Pointing to the rival claimant he said simply, "I ate his father."—All the Year Round.

Clams Breed Rapidly.

The spawning season of the clam is in June and July. The eggs are carried between the gills, where they develop until they are provided with minute triangular shells, when they are ejected into the water as young clams and left to their own devices. Very few of these baby clams ever reach maturity, being gobbled up as choice morsels by the fish of the sea. But the clam is a prolific breeder, and a bed that is exhausted this season will be full of clams next year.—Cor. New York Sun.

A Seamless Steel Boat.

A seamless boat, made from flat pieces of steel and shaped by hydraulic pressure, is the invention of an Englishman. It is asserted in favor of such boats that they will last twice as long as wooden ones, that there is less liability of their capsizing, and that they are not so easily affected by changes of climate.

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER XIV.

My engagement with Edith was broken off that evening.

I had not the faintest hopes of recovering the lost diamond, and, when I told Sir Edmund my reasons for despairing, he did not attempt to conceal his satisfaction with regard to my determination.

"A man should never be dependent on his wife. It must necessarily be a source of humiliation to him; and no man suffers humiliation without in time losing his own self-respect. That will never, I hope, be your loss, Bernard. . . Poor girl, it will be a great grief to her; for, though she has known you but a little while, she has found in you a great deal to admire and love and her affection is so tenacious that I doubt if she will ever cease to love you." He sighed, and for some moments sat in thoughtful silence; then he said. "We must not break her heart, my dear fellow,—we must leave her some hope. As it is necessary that for some time you should be separated, it is right that you should both be free to form other engagements, at the same time there may be a tacit understanding that, should you succeed in making a position for yourself in a reasonable space of time, and then both are still warmly disposed toward each other, the engagement shall be renewed.

"There is no necessity for your having a large fortune; but it is essential, as I think, and as you happily think also, that you should be able to provide yourself with the necessities of life. I promise that Edith shall bring with her the luxuries."

He then offered to use his influence in procuring me a secretaryship; but, as I had never been accustomed to sedentary occupation, and such an appointment could never satisfy my more ambitious hopes, he generously placed his purse at my disposal, to use as I might find occasion.

I have purposely abstained from dwelling upon my love affairs, for, if I entered into them at all, my feelings would lead me to dilate upon the delights of my brief wooing, to the exclusion of the graver matters which form the subject of this book. For the same reason I shall pass over the bitter grief of our parting. I will only say that Edith's last words awakened courage in my sinking heart.

I could form no satisfactory theory with regard to the Great Hesper robbery, but I was disposed to regard Van Hoeck as the least culpable agent concerned in it.

It was impossible to tell how the robbery affected this mysterious man. As I have said, during the investigation he sat perfectly motionless and perfectly silent. His face wore the inscrutable expression of a death-mask.

Sir Edmund had no sympathy with him after learning from me the particulars relating to the adventures of the morning.

When we entered the library from the dining-room, where our interview had taken place, we found Van Hoeck sitting where we had left him.

"I have ordered the carriage to be at the door in half an hour, Mr. Van Hoeck," said the Baronet. "Be good enough to make your arrangements for departure by that time."

Van Hoeck inclined his head.

"I shall be glad if you will redeem your I O U at an early date," the Baronet added sternly.

Van Hoeck put his hand in his pocket, drew out a purse, and extended it. I took it, seeing the Baronet's repugnance, and placed it on the table.

I accompanied Van Hoeck to Southhampton. Neither of us spoke on the way,—indeed, I had not heard a word pass his lips since we parted in the early morning.

I took a room for him at a hotel, and, when the servant who led us to it was gone, I said:

"I am going to leave you, Van Hoeck."

A gesture of indifference was his only reply.

"You have nothing to say,—no explanation to offer?" I asked.

"What do you mean?—speak plainly," he said.

"I saw you discussing with Brace what should be done with the case that held the diamond before he secreted it."

"If you know that we were discussing that, you know all. It is useless to make an explanation that you would not believe. I have nothing to say."

He groped his way to a chair, and threw himself into it.

I put a packet of notes on the table, and told him that if he had need of further help he might write to me, addressing his letter to the care of Sir Edmund. Then I left him.

I had a vague idea of purchasing a partership in some business where I could find active employment, and with this view I took lodgings in London, and began to look about me. I had been engaged in this pursuit about a week when I received a letter from Sir Edmund.

"I inclose," he wrote, "a cutting from one of the weekly papers. Vine growing, as it is here described, seems to be the very thing that should suit a man of your disposition and taste; it would suit me if I were thirty years younger than I am. As it is, nothing would better please me than to see you a prosperous fruit farmer.

"That Edith might have something to look forward to, I have proposed that our next summer holiday trip should be to San Diego. She thinks we should find California hotels insupportable. Perhaps you will be able to offer something more acceptable than hotel accommodation. In any case, my dear fellow, you can give me no more acceptable testimony of your affection than in availing yourself freely and fully of my pecuniary assistance."

The cutting referred to vine-growing and fruit culture in Southern California; but before I read a single line of it I had made up my mind to be at San Diego to receive Edith and her father in the summer.

CHAPTER XV

Fortune favored me; before I had been twenty-four hours in San Diego, I learned that one of the best fruit farms in the State was to be sold. It lay in Elysium Valley, about twelve miles back of San Diego City, and was the property of Colonel Hinks. On hearing this, I hired a horse at once, and rode to the estate. The road ran between irrigated plantations of lemons, citrons, oranges, and other fruit that perfumed the air; the higher slopes were covered with vines. In the distance before me were the snow-capped peaks of the Sierra Nevada, and turning in my saddle as I ascended the gentle rise on which the house stood, my eyes were dazzled with the beaty of San Diego Bay.

The house was large and well built, in the Italian style,—a style not unsuited to that unclouded sky, and the surrounding scenery. The view from the belvidere was indescribably beautiful, and indeed justified the high sounding name given to the valley it overlooked.

There were flowers everywhere about and around the house; they festooned the terrace fronting the facade; they hung from the windows; they edged the paths; they even twined from bough to bough of the great cedar that lent shade to the lawn.

"This is a house worthy of Edith," I thought. "Oh that it may be mine to offer her!"

It would be time wasted to enter into my business transactions with Colonel Hinks. Suffice it to say that my ardent wish was realized, and that, in less than a month from my arriving in San Diego, I entered into possession of the beautiful property. Doubtless it was a hazardous undertaking for one who knew nothing whatever of the business; but what hazard is too great for a man whose object is to win the woman he loves? That the money I invested was not my own, did not lessen the risk I ran, but increased it; for, unless I could show a reasonable probability of repaying Sir Edmund's loan, I could not demand Edith's hand. However, I had every reason to believe that Colonel Hinks was a gentleman, and an honest and conscientious business man; added to this, I had confidence in my own perseverance, energy and strength, and that buoyant feeling of hope with which nearly every one who breathes the healthful air of this delightful continent seems to be inspired.

Early in November, I received a letter from Sir Edmund. Amongst other things, he wrote:

"The robbery is still a mystery,—to me it is a greater mystery than ever. Van Hoeck has taken lodgings in the village. I have met him twice in the woods, a wild, deplorable object, and, indeed, pitiable, if one may doubt his complicity in the robbery. Once he was upon his hands and knees, groping amongst the ferns, as if he expected to find there the lost diamond; but he chooses the night for these expeditions,—probably because he is then less open to observation. The keepers tell me that he passes the whole night, and every night, in this hopeless search. Why on earth should he do this, if he and Brace got possession of the diamond, as we suppose?"

In a postscript, he added, "Mr. Furnival, dating from Haxel's Hotel, London, wrote, asking me for your address. I replied that you were at San Diego, California."

The news with regard to Van Hoeck did not add greatly to the mystery in which this strange man was involved; but the postscript was a new source of perplexity to me. I knew no one of the name of Furnival; I could not recollect having spoken to any one of Sir Edmund while I was in London.

How, then, could this Mr. Furnival have known where to apply for my address? I expected a letter from him to clear up this matter; but no letter came.

A few days later, I received a letter addressed to me at Monkey Abbey, and re-addressed in Sir Edmund's hand. Turning to the signature, I found it was from Brace. It was dated October 15th, Petersville, Nevada County. The Judge, then, was in California, within a day's journey of me. I was not surprised at this, knowing his partiality for the State; but it was irreconcilable with the supposition that he and Van Hoeck had the diamond. He wrote thus:

"I rite these lines fur to show where I am lokated, and likewise that I have not sliuked off like a thief in the night to hide my lites under a bushel. If things ain't no forarder than they was in the direction of clearin' up what's become of the Great Hesper, they ain't anywas no backarder.

"It ain't no use promisin' without you are got it right inter yer to perform, but I will allow that I ain't goin' to chuck up the cards before I've made you shake my hand and acknowledge I've played square. The Kid is frettin', and things in gen'al is not lively with your pardner,

"JOS BRACE."

I did not reply to this letter. I heard again from Sir Edmund at the end of November. He felicitated me heartily upon the purchase I had made, and added the warmest wishes for my success.

He continued;

"Thank you for Brace's letter. The tone of it would lead one to imagine not only that he knows where the diamond is, but has a strong belief in his power to recover it! One can not possibly believe that it was he who robbed and attempted to murder you. But whom are we to suspect, if not him? If he were not guilty, why should he try to conceal the leather case which might lead to its recovery? There is a fascination in this subject which overcomes my wish to drop it. It is like the fifteen puzzle that drove half the world mad some years ago.

"Van Hoeck still wanders about the woods through the night. More than once he has been seen standing outside the room in which Edith and I pass the evening, listening.

"His suspicions have perhaps fallen upon us. The poor wretch may have lost his reason. His appearance when I caught sight of him the other day justifies the suspicion.

"I nave to confess to an indiscretion which may have no serious result, but which I regret all the same. Yesterday I received a telegram from Furnival, dated Haxel's Hotel.

"It ran thus;

"'We have important clew. Send address of Joseph Brace at once, or place where he is likely to be found.'

"The 'we' led me to suppose that he was an agent of the detectives employed in this case, and, without further reflection, I sent Brace's address, having your letter under my hand. I became uneasy as soon as the messenger was out of sight, and sent Wilson over to Southampton with two telegrams, one for Furnival, and the other for the head of the detective department, asking for further particulars. I have received no reply whatever from Furnival, and the detectives replied by letter that they employed no one named Furnival, and that all inquires were made through the head office

"Who on earth can this Furnival be? and what can be the object of his inquires? The mystery was sufficiently incomprehensible without this addition."

Incomprehensible indeed, and the more closely one examined the mystery the more inscrutable it appeared.

"I inclose," he wrote, in conclusion 'a letter which came to hand this, morning."

It was a second letter from Brace. This is the copy:

"TIBBAL'S GOLDEN STATE HOTEL,
"SACRAMENTO CITY, November 8.

"GENTLEMAN THORNE, SIR,—I didn't expec you to answer my letter, but the Kid have took it to heart morea natral. I told you sh. was kinder frettin, and to please her I made believe I had sent the message she ast me to rite. Which gettin no ansér to said message she sorter felt youd turned your back on her forever. I don't think she's goin to make old bones. Seems to me like as if she meant knocking off early. Ses she don't feel like gatherin any more wild flowers.

"The doctor considers that sickness she got out Africa has settled into her, and she can't corff it off.

"The rains hes set in early up Petersville, and they ain't no good for a poor little sick Kid. We come down here day fore yesterday.

"She's pinin, pardner, that's whats the matter with her, witch is why I rite her message.

"She says she wants to be good; thems her words. I never knew her say such a thing, an I can't hardly expect you to believe it knowin what she was, but, if you could only see her as she is you'd believe it. She's that altered; no tantrums, no opposishun, no obstinacy,—no nothin.

"Seein this, you may be moved, sir, bein kinder pitiful by natur, to write her a few words, jest to say you've got her message, and hope she'll stick to her promise. With a little bit of encouragement like that, I don't think she'd go away without telling us what she's done with the Great Hesper.—Yours respectfully,

"JOS BRACE."

I started for Sacramento without a moment's delay.

TO BE CONTINUED.

HER ONE WISH.

Commendable Object of a Philanthropic Spinster.

Most people who go to Europe have their minds set upon at least one place or thing which they are particularly anxious to see. This was the case with a philanthropic spinster who had lived in Boston for nearly sixty years. She was to make her first trip abroad with her brother's family.

Her sister-in-law and her neices were mapping out the route for the six months' travel, and presently one of them said to her, "Now you must tell where you want to go, Aunt Martha; we're all choosing our favorite places, you see!"

"I've heard you all agree on Italy," replied Aunt Martha, "and that's the only country I have any special desire to visit."

"Why, how nice!" said the neice, in a tone of pleased surprise. "We were talking it over the other day, and mamma said she was afraid you wouldn't care to go to Italy. You're so fastidious and though Italy is lovely, of course there are drawbacks, you know."

"I presume there are drawbacks," said Miss Martha, shivering a little. "I've heard of them. But you mustn't think I want to be sitting about on cathedral steps or damp walls, my dear. All I wish is to see some organ-grinders in their native land. That has been my desire for a good many years. The men we see here look so poor and ill-fed!

"I thought perhaps," added Miss Martha. "if I could learn enough Italian to make myself understood by those men, it would be a good thing for me to advise them not to come to America."

"I think it would!" said her listeners in chorus; but Miss Martha never understood why they laughed.

A Fatal Sneeze.

A very amusing story was told by a popular actress who was asked if she ever rehearsed stage kisses. "Yes, I always do," she replied, frankly; "not repeatedly, you know, but just once. You see, I like to know how the man is going to do it, if he is nervous, the chances are ten to one that he will clutch me so tightly that when he does release me I should lose my balance, and get laughed at, so I need be on my guard.

"My worst experience on the stage resulted from a kiss, though I must confess the mishap was chiefly my own fault. It was a pathetic scene, and I meant to get as much out of it as I could. My lover was to be carried off to prison, and I was clinging round his neck in speechless despair. I noticed that he tried to draw back, but I held him tighter, and pressed my face to his.

"'Let me go,' he whispered, but I held on like grim death. Suddenly he sneezed. Such a sneeze! It seemed to come from his boots, and startled by the shock I drew away from him.

"Then there was a roar of laughter from the audience, and I saw that half my lover's beautiful black moustache was gone. A moment's pause, and then he turned and rushed off the stage.

"I bravely kept my place; but it was impossible for me to go on with the soliloquy that should have followed, for the laughter still continued. Then the stage manager rang down the curtain, and sarcastically suggested that it might be well if I returned the actor's moustache to him.

"I rushed to a mirror, and then I discovered that the other half of the false moustache was sticking to my chin. The actor had lost it in the sneeze."

The Professor at the Dinner Table.

He is discovered deeply absorbed in calculations as to the next appearance of a comet. To him enters the housekeeper with the inquiry: "Please, sir, when have I to serve up the dinner?"

"Professor: "On the 27th September, 1915."

A PLAAUE OF MICE.

The Farmers of England are now the Sufferers.

In certain parts of England a plague of mice has recently been experienced, to the great loss of frmers, for by mice is understood not the little rodent which finds its way to our larders, but the fieldvole (Arvicola agrestis.) At a recent meeting of the Edinburgh Field Naturalists' and Microscopical society, T. Speedy gave some interesting particulars concerning the way in which certain districts have been overrun with these little creatures, and expressed his doubts with regard to the reason commonly advanced to account for their numbers. It has been often affirmed that such a visitation is due to the wanton extermination of hawks and owls, whose natural prey are these voles. But Mr. Speedy plainly showed that in parts of Selkirkshire where the duke of Buccleuch had long prohibited the destruction of the birds, voles existed in great numbers. He had also found that in parts of Norway, where all predaceous birds breed without restraint, hordes of lemmings, which are allied to the voles, periodically make their appearance.

Whisky Corsets.

A novel method of avoiding the Sunday liquor law was discovered at Montreal a week or two ago. The proprietor of a candy store was arraigned in the Recorder's Court, charged with "selling liquor on Sunday out of whisky corsets." The latter part of the charge astonished the clerk of the court, until the chief of police explained that after some months of effort to detect how liquor was sold on Sundays in the French quarter of the city, one of his men while in a candy store saw a man pass the proprietor five cents.

The proprietor produced a small rubber tube from under his vest one end of which the man put to his mouth and sucked. The officer pounced on the proprietor, and a search revealed that the man wore a pair of tin corsets, with doubled space between the inner and outer partions, holding over a gallon of liquor. To this the tube was attached by a stop-cock.

The customers leaned over the counter, took the tube in their mouth, and sucked until the proprietor thought they had the worth off their money, when the supply was turned off and the tube put back underneath the vest. The police discovered that many a buxom candy store woman wore similar tank-corsets, and did a rushing business with rubber tubes on Sundays. Warrants are out for the arrest of several of the ingenious violators of the law.

A Fortune out of Pies.

"The world abounds with millions of opportunities for sudden fortune-making, if one has the acuteness to perceive them," said Dave Henderson, the Chicago theatrical manager. "Now, the ordinary mortal would never imagine that vast wealth lurks in the humble American pie transplated to the shores of effete Europe, and yet Jim Maitland, a Chicago newspaper friend of mine, has made a big fortune from the sale of American pies in England within the past ten years. When Maitland announced to me ten years ago his determination to throw up a $25-a-week job on the Chicago Tribune and introduce the American pie into England I thought he was crazy. Mark the deep-rooted prejudice of the beefeating Britishers against the plebeian American pie, and then you will realize the apparently stupendous task that the rash fortune-seeker undertook. But the pie has conquered the English, and Maitland is back in Chicago trying to buy the Tribune from Editor Medill."—Globe-Democrat.

Tiresome.

It is often difficult to explain colloquialisms; as good a reason as can be given for the popularity of many of them was an honest Picard's explanation of his use of some poor French.

It had been remarked that a Picard could always be recognized by his saying, instead of "Je vais a Amiens" (I am going to Amiens), "Je vais Amiens," leaving out the preposition "a" before Amiens."

It is such an error as it would be to say, "I am going Toledo," instead of "I am going to Toledo."

One day a stranger asked a Picard, "My good friend, why don't you say, 'Je vais a Amiens,' as I do?"

"You say so because you never do go there," was the prompt reply. "If you went there every day as I do, you would find that manner of speaking very fatiguing."

Consoling.

The Vicomte de Segur once had occasion to reflect on the failure of an attempt at consolation made without tact. Many persons have made the same observation, but the vicomte's experience was, in its way, memorable.

He prided himself on his reputation for wit, and was indignant when he heard that M. de Vaines had spoken slightingly of it. Upon meeting him the vicomte said, "M. de Vaines, I hear that in a house where other persons were so kind as to consider me witty, you declared that I was not so. Is this true?"

"Oh, not a word of truth in it my dear De Segur," was the cheerful reply. "No, indeed, I have never been anywhere where you were considered witty."

Recovery of a Stolen Child.

Eleven years ago a fair-haired girl, aged seven, went out to play in the woods on the Servian frontier. She never returned, and no trace of her could be found by the grief-stricken parents. Recently a relative discovered a fair-haired girl about twenty years of age with a band of gypsies. The police inquired into the case and found that she was the missing child. She remembered being carried off against her will, and said that for the first few years she was very cruelly treated. The gypsies have been arrested.

Mrs. Sutherland.

I Had Goitre

Or swellings in the neck since I was 10 years old; am now 52. I used Hood's Sarsaparilla recently and the swelling has entirely disappeared. It has been very troublesome. When I began was feeling so discouraged with the goitre and rheumatism I felt that I would as soon be dead as alive. Whenever I caught cold I could not walk two blocks without fainting. Now I am free from it all and I can truly recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla. I received a letter from Mrs. Jennie Bigelow, now of Fremont, Mich., asking if my testimonial in behalf of Hood's Sarsaparilla was true; I replied it was, and sent particulars. I have another letter from her thanking me very much for recommending and stating that she also has been cured." MRS. ANNA SUTHERLAND, Kalamazoo, Mich.

HOOD'S PILLS are the best after-dinner Pills. They assist digestion and cure headache

The old saying that "consumption can be cured if taken in time" was poor comfort. It seemed to invite a trial, but to anticipate failure. The other one, not so old, "consumption can be cured," is considered by many false.

Both are true and not true; the first is prudent—one cannot begin too early.

CURES SCROFULA

Mrs. E. J. Rowell, Medford, Mass., says her mother has been cured of Scrofula by the use of four bottles of S.S.S. after having had much other treatment, and being reduced to quite a low condition of health, as it was thought she could not live.

INHERITED SCROFULA

S.S.S. Cured my little boy of hereditary scrofula which appeared all over his face. For a year I had given up all hope of his recovery, when finally I was induced to use S.S.S. A few bottles cured him, and no symptoms of the disease remain.

THE NEWS SUMMARY

The Latest News of the World Condensed and Arranged in Convenient Form.

Washington, Personal, Foreign, Criminal, Casualty and Other Important News.

THE CAPITAL.

Bids for the Flandreau, S. D., Indian school will be acted on by the department on the 31st.

A bill was reported to the senate appropriating $100,000 and $15,000 respectively for the erection of a public building at Muscatine, Iowa.

The house committee on agriculture authorized Mr. Hatch to call up the anti-option bill when the sundry civil bill is disposed of, and to endeavor to get a test vote on the question of consideration.

Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska will introduce a bill to amend the anti-trust laws by authorizing the president to place by proclamation all articles on the free list concerning which the circuit court certifies a trust exists.

PERSONAL.

Charles Gayler, the veteran American playwright, is dying in Brooklyn. He is seventy-three years old.

Gen. H. F. Sickles, a cousin of Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, and who served with Sherman and was afterwards military governor of South Carolina, died in Monte vista, Colo., aged seventy-two.

Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage announced that he would embark on the steamer City of New York on June 15 for Liverpool and will engage in a preaching tour through England, Scotland and Ireland.

CASUALTIES.

Pyrotechnic works at Hartford, Conn., exploded, killing six people.

Many more Southerners are drowned in the floods.

A fire at Brighton City, Utah, destroyed several business houses. Loss, $100,000.

A large amount of cotton in a warehouse at Minet-El-Bassel, Egypt, has been burned. The loss is $750,000, which was covered by insurance.

An open boat, in which fifteen members of a foot ball team were being taken across the bay of Port Philip, Austria, by two fishermen, has been found bottom up and all are supposed to have been drowned.

At Chenalls, Wash., fire destroyed four blocks of wooden buildings in the center of the town. The fire is supposed to have been of incendiary origin as it started in a vacant building where a number of tramps sleep. Loss $110,000.

Two tramps walking along the Big Four track two miles east of Dayton, Ohio, discovered a broken rail. One of the tramps hurried east and the other west to signal trains. A west-bound limited express was signaled and an awful calamity averted. Passengers realizing the escape raised a purse of $100 for the tramps and the Big Four officials telegraphed to give the tramps a free ride where it is expected they will be further rewarded.

Nine bodies have thus far been recovered from the wreck which occurred on the St. Louis & Northwestern railroad near Goldman La. Their names were William Christal, Denton, Tex.; R. D. Compton, Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. Octavia Anderson, Amarilla, Tex.; J. T. Sanderson, Pierce City, Mo.; Mrs. R. B. Clark, Winchester, Tenn.; A. M. Menson, Fisher, Ark.; Mrs. Mudgins, Alabama; Frank Nichols, fireman of the freight; James Morgan of Memphis.

THE WICKED WORLD.

A motion for an arrest of judgment in the Russel case is denied.

Baron Bosenecr Lehen, Danish minister of foreign affairs, is dead.

In the Brazilian senate the bill granting amnesty to political refugees passed its second reading.

Mrs. Russel, tried at Eau Claire for killing Bertha Erickson, is convicted of murder in the first degree.

A deputy marshal in Oklahoma kills two horse thieves after being badly wounded by them.

Robbers attack a train in Florida and kill an express messenger, but get no plunder.

The czar and czarina have sailed for Copenhagen for the purpose of attending the golden wedding of the king and queen of Denmark.

William Anderson, the missing wealthy lumberman of Wisconsin, is thought to have been murdered. His body is found bearing several wounds.

Isaac P. Talbot of Gardiner, Me., shot his wife and then committed suicide. He also fired shots at his sister and brother-in-law. Cause, a family quarrel.

Thomas O'Brien, the notorious American criminal and bunco steerer, was captured by the French police at Havre, but later succeeded in making his escape, and is again at large.

Capt. Wm. A. Andrews of Boston intends to cross the ocean in a sail boat, the smallest craft that has been built for a trans-Atlantic voyage. He expects to sail by July 1.

At Midway, Tex., a mob went to the house of A. E. Thurber, who was accused of seducing a young girl of the neighborhood, and shot him five times, killing him instantly.

The story of the alleged four duels of M. Roulez in Paris is false. Roulez has been laboring under a hallucination and really thought that he had been carving imaginary adversaries.

At Springfield, Mo., George E. Sterling and Andy Crump fought a duel with revolvers on the street. Sterling was shot in the abdomen and will die. Crump received a slight wound in the leg.

One of the highwaymen who murdered Express Messenger Saunders near Jacksonville, Fla., has been captured and has confessed his guilt, after being tortured with "twisters" and hot coals. There are nine men in Orlando under arrest.

An 11-year-old boy who gave his name as R. Barrows, from Minneapolis, entered the Merchants National Bank at Helena Mont., handed the cashier a check for $25, drawn on the Montana National Bank of Helena, signed by R. Barrows. The bank refused to cash the check and the boy later forged an endorsement. The bank officials refused to make any complaint. The boy says he is going to remain in Helena.

FOREIGN.

The Columbus House on the Via Diritto Ponticella is being restored. Prof. Tizzorno has provided this inscription in Latin: "No house is more worthy of note than this, within whose walls Columbus passed his youth."

M. Raymond, the faithless husband whose wife killed Madame Delaporte-Lassimonne in Paris, when she discovered her husband in the woman's company, has disappeared, and his friends think he has committed suicide through remorse.

Roulez, who was alleged to have fought duels with four different men, now admits that the story was a hoax, and that the Paris papers and the Havas news agency were imposed upon. Senator Ranc, editor of the newspaper Le Paris, has challenged Roulez to a duel.

The fact that the treasury at Buenos Ayres has withdrawn $1,000,000 from circulation, coupled with heavy purchase of war material, created a bad impression. The report that Argentina will effect a federation with Paraguay is untrue.

The San Salvador Diario Official publishes a list of the crimes for which ex-President Zaldivar was about to be sentenced by the supreme court when the proceedings were stolen. Among others it charged that 44 men and 5 women were executed by his order. There were 196 men and 22 women flogged. Of the women 3 died as a result of the flogging.

POLITICAL ECHOES.

A full state ticket is nominated by the People's party in Wisconsin.

The Kentucky Democratic delegates are uninstructed.

The Illinois Democratic delegates transfear their allegiance from Palmer and Morrison.

The Anti-Harrison men work for a Blaine-Alger ticket, figuring that the Michigan man would soon become president by the death of Mr. Blaine.

The Republicans of the Sixth Ohio district have nominated C. L. Poorman for congress and Judge Taylor and Dr. Keefer delegates to the national convention.

At the third party convention at Charlotte, S. C., it was resolved to present the name of L. L. Polk to the national convention of Omaha as a presidential candidate.

THE RAILROADS.

A steamship line is established by the Northern Pacific, to ply between Tacoma and Hong Kong.

W. W. Finley, it is officially announced, is general traffic manager of the Great Northern. J. N. Faithorn will probably succeed Mr. Finley as chairman of the Western Passenger association.

THE TOILERS.

The order of Railway Telegraphers has decided by a decisive vote that the order would remain a distinctive railway organization and commercial operators could not be admitted.

The American Federation of Labor has come out flatly in favor of the opening of the world's fair on Sunday. It is claimed that this is the only day on which the majority of workingmen can visit the grand exposition.

SPORTING MATTERS.

Fort Wayne, Ind., gets St. Paul's base ball team.

Major Domo makes a new running record for the East and Gravesend.

Ives defeats Slosson at billiards—800 483.

Ryan of Chicago is hitting hard.

Motz still bats hard when he gets a chance.

Jack McAuliffe will train at Bay St. Louis for his fight.

Wilmot is hitting the ball hard and fielding brilliantly.

Canavan at second and Dungan in the field seemed to have materially helped Chicago.

Burns, who has left the Chicago team to manage and captain the Pittsburgs, got $1,500 a year more salary by kindly old Anson's engineering, who did all he could for so faithful a player as Burns has been.

The proposed match between Ted Pritchard and Bob Fitzsimmons is further off than ever. Pritchard states Sept. 5 the date named for him to fight Fitzsimmons, would not give him enough time to train. Pritchard guarantees he will fight Fitzsimmons in the Olympic club any day in November provided a purse of $15,000 is offered.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Methodist decide upon equal lay and clerical representation.

A case of small pox is reported at the Palmer house, Chicago.

Two reports on the Briggs case are made to the Presbyterian general assembly.

The St. Paul chamber of commerce pronounces against the Nicaragua canal project.

Methodist ministers will be compelled to move once every five years, according to a decision of the conference.

The Chicago Milk Shippers' association was beaten in court in a suit for debt on the ground that the organization was a trust. The result is expected to be the disruption of the combine.

An address has been issued from the headquarters of the Irish National League of America, in which unity in Ireland is demanded. It is intimated that unless factional fights cease financial support in America will cease.

A verdict for $15,500 has been given Rev. Mr. Holden of Long Island in his suit against the Pennsylvania railroad. Rev. Holden lost a leg in an accident at Hazleton, Pa., in 1888, a passenger train striking a carriage in which he was driving. The suit was for $10,000.

The Florence kindergarten trustees have petitioned to have ex-Mayor A. G. Hill of Northampton, Mass., put into insolvency. The amount of Mr. Hill's liabilities is supposed to be $50,000 to $200,000. He owes the kindergarten and the local banks alone fully $100,000, and many endorsers must suffer.

The English directors of the recently formed International Packing and Provision Company of Chicago, the Stickney company, have been announced. They include Christopher Furness, M. P., a steamship owner; Samuel White, wholesale provision merchant at Liverpool; William Ruhlmann, London; John Nash, Liverpool; Maj. J. Eustace Jameson.

Cheaper and Better.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press has sprung a pleasant surprise on its large family of readers by making a great reduction in the price of its Daily and Sunday editions where a year's subscription is prepaid. The new rates are as follows, payment to be made strictly in advance: Daily and Sunday, one year, $8.50; Daily without Sunday, one year, $7; Sunday only, one year, $1.50. Rates for a less period remain the same as before. This is a reduction of from 15 to 25 per cent, and it means a boom in circulation for the Pioneer Press.

A year's subscription now will carry you through the Conventions, the Campaign, the Election and Inauguration. The Pioneer Press has so materially improved in the past few months that it is more than ever the representative Northwestern paper. Many new features have been adopted. Among others its Scandinavian news, to which a column is devoted weekly; its sporting and horse department, and much new matter of merit.

Poor health was the cause.

A "Jack the Pincher" has been in the habit of jumping from behind trees at Sioux City seizing ladies as they pass, pinching them and making insulting proposals to them. The other night he insulted Mrs. Robert Black and her sister. Mr. Black and two other men lay in wait for the fellow. He soon appeared and grabbed a woman, who was passing, when the men caught him and Black beat him terribly.

The Origin of the Silhouette.

During the reign of Louis XV. the Marquis Etienne de Silhout was selected, by the recommendation of the Marquis de Pompadour, for the extremely difficult office of Minister of France. He tried hard to evolve some order out of the chaos of national finance, and commenced, as usual in such cases, setting down every state expense, but his endeavors were in vain and at the end of eight months he was glad to retire. In the meantime some witty rascal cut to perfection a portrait of the marquis out of a piece of black paper; of course only a profile and without eyes, and exhibited copies in all the picture shops. The mob christened these portraits silhouettes, because they were "as black as the seal of the marquis and as empty as his treasury."—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Electrical Test for Spurious Coins.

Some interesting tests with alternating currents and a particular form of magnet have been made in England. Among the experiments shown was one which illustrated a new method of detecting counterfeit coins. A genuine coin, being a new conductor, was held between the poles of the magnet, but a bad coin, not possessing that necessary qualification immediately dropped when placed in position.

The Sad Truth.

Uncle Jack, driving with his Boston niece, through the suburbs of Chicago. "There Margaret! There's a fine place —Mrs. Bornstein lives there just — married to her sixth husband——"

Margaret—"Sixth husband. Uncle Jack! Oh, I know so many girls at home that are pining for their first."—Life.

REGNANT DEATH.

Only Death and Destruction Left in the Path of the Kansas Cyclone.

Many Bodies, Horribly Crushed, Found in the Debris at Wellington.

Wellington, Kas., May .—Southern Kansas has again suffered a visitation from the dreaded cyclone. A mighty tornado, a mile and a half wide, formed last night in Harper county and swept across the counties of Harper and Sumner and left death and destruction in its track. To add to the havoc wrought by the storm, a waterspout claimed its share of the general wreck and devastated the northern part of Harper county, while lightning added its fires. Trees, barns, farm houses and whole towns went down before the terrible force of the storm, and human life went out in the twinkling of an eye. Fifteen dead at Wellington and seven at Harper compose the lists of victims in the towns while from the country districts come the report of six killed, making a total of thirty-eight dead. The lists in the next day or two will probably be largely added to as the complete details are learned.

The storm came with deadly suddenness, giving no one the chance to escape its fury. Barely was the roar of the approaching destroyer heard before the prosperous town of Wellington was in ruins. At Harper also the storm came without warning, it swept down upon the town with awful suddenness, and before the people began to realize what had happened the best part of the town was little less than

A CONFUSED MASS OF DEBRIS.

Every telegraph wire in the city is prostrated and the news from that town comes from only indirect sources. The fire is now completely subdued in the ruins of the Alliance Exchange building which is about the only building in Wellington that caught fire. Mrs. Sasher and her sister, Miss Katie Strahn, were in burning building. They cried piteously for aid, and their screaming so maddened Mr. Sasher, the young husband that he made an effort to jump into the flames to get to the woman who was his bride only four months ago. Friends prevented him and kept him confined in the house of a friend. When he heard that the scorched body of his wife and sister-in-law were at last taken from the ruins his mind became unbalanced and at last accounts he was absolutely mad.

The fire assumed the proportions of a conflagration, and it illumined the heavens and the surrounding and ruin to such an extent that it was really thought the entire block was on fire. The building was valued at $18,000 and the stock at about $20,000. The bodies were burned to such an extent that it was futile to attempt to dress them, for on the simple touch of a finger the skin would slip from the flesh.

The city council and executive committee of the board of trade met to-day and decided to make no appeal for aid, although they are certainly in need of it. Mayor Thompson being questioned, however, relative to the matter admitted that any aid sincerely tendered would be appreciated. The following is a complete list of the dead:

James Hastie, horseman; Frank D. Campbell, horseman; James Mayer, Kansas City, piano tuner; Ida Jones, waitress; T. C. Cornwell, Belle Plaine, farmer; Hart Upson, barber; Ed Forsythe, barber; L. Adamson, barber; Mrs. William Sasher; Miss Kittie Strahn.

Faint groans are alleged to have been heard to-night under the debris of the Conrad hotel, and fifty men are tearing up the piles of brick and mortar in hopes of being able to rescue somebody. It is said that a woman and a baby were at the hotel last night having just arrived on the train from the West. The cyclone also struck the towns of Harper and Crystal Springs. The latter place was completely demolished. The following is a list of those killed at Harper:

J. L. Stainbaum, crushed in the fall of his house; wife and child of James Gallagher, a farmer; child of Frank Tomlin, Mrs. Frank Tomlin, James Harrison, William Stevenson.

The most seriously injured are:

Samuel Cole, injured internally, probably fatal; Robert Liberieht; Samuel Challis; Mrs. Samue. Challis, internally injured, probably fatal.

The total loss aggregates about $500,000 on which there is less than $15,000 cyclone insurance.

Let Him Off Easy.

Mankato, Minn., Special, May .—The jury returned a verdict of guilty of petit larceny to-day in the case of A. J. Yorker, charged with embezzling $2,403.16 from the Milwaukee road while acting as the company's agent in this city. The main point in the defense was the alleged insanity of the prisoner, and a dozen of his friends testified as to his peculiarities. Judge Severance charged the jury that if they found the prisoner to have been insane at the time of the alleged thefts, whether from excessive drinking or other cause, they must find him not guilty. They disagreed, and the verdict was a compromise. Louis Eberhart was indicted for grand larceny in the second degree in selling timber that had already been sold.

Shot Her Lover.

Clifford, Ind., May .—Maggie Burns went to the residence of Melville Tollen, a young and prosperous farmer who has called upon her frequently, and, in the presence of his parents, asked him if he intended to carry out his promises and marry her. Young Tollen, who is much younger than her, replied: "No, you are too old." At this she pulled a revolver and fired five shots at him. The fifth struck him in the neck, inflicting a wound which may prove fatal. Miss Burns escaped.

Iron and Car Works in Ashes.

San Francisco, May .—A fire to-day destroyed the Fulton iron works, Hammond car works, Van Drake's brass foundry and a number of small frame buildings, causing a loss of $450,000. Insurance $95,000. The fire started in the Fulton iron works and spread rapidly to the Hammond Car works and other manufactories, occupying half a square of buildings, all of which were frame structures and were totally destroyed. Most of the damage is to expensive machinery. The Fulton Iron works lose $250,000; Hammond Car works $90,000, and the remainder is divided among Van Drake's foundry and a large number of smaller concerns.

CONGRESS

Proceedings of the House and Senate.

Saturday, May 21st.

SENATE.

Not in session.

HOUSE.

The sundry civil bill dragged its weary length along again today, 10 pages being covered. Almost the entire session was occupied in discussing an amendment of Mr. Forney, (dem.) Alabama, which was adopted providing that all pension money provided by inmates of national soldiers homes in excess of $5 per month should be deducted from maintaining the expenses of the home, except where the disabled soldiers have a wife, dependent parent or a minor child. Then the excess should be sent to such dependent by the managers.

Monday, May 23.

SENATE.

The senate today passed the bill for a commission of three to examine and report relative to the employment of the pneumatic tube system or other process for the rapid dispatch of mails in large cities. It appropriates $20,000.

The committee on military affairs today made a favorable report to the senate on a bill providing that vacancies in army post tradership shall not be filled. The object of the bill is to abolish post traderships.

HOUSE.

In the house today the river and harbor appropriation bill with senate amendments was referred to the committee on rivers and harbors.

Mr. Watson's resolution requesting the committee on ways and means to report the sub-treasury bill was adopted.

Tuesday, May 24.

SENATE.

The senate today took up the bill to provide for the punishment of the violators of the treaty rights of aliens. Mr. Morgan spoke in its support.

At the close of this argument Mr. Morgan moved, with the assent of the committee on foreign relations, that the bill should go over until next December. The matter went over without action.

Mr. Mitchell, from the committee on privileges and elections, today reported to the senate a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment providing for the election of United States senators by popular vote. He said that the members of the committee were divided on the subject and would make separate reports. The joint resolution was placed on the calendar.

HOUSE.

Representative Johnson, of Ohio, introduced in the house a bill to admit free of duty glass windows imported for the use of churches.

Mr. Stewart (Texas), from the committee on rivers and harbors, reported back the river and harbor appropriation bill, with the senate amendments thereto, with the recommendation that the senate amendments be non-concurred in. He asked unanimous consent that this course be followed and that a conference be ordered, but Messrs. Holman and Bynum, of Indiana, objected and the bill was referred to the committee on the whole. The house then went into the committee of the whole (Mr. Lester of Georgia, in the chair) on the sundry civil appropriation bill.

Wednesday, May 25.

SENATE.

Senator Pettigrew introduced a bill today to dispose of that portion of the Ft. Randall military reservation which lies in South Dakota. It provides that the land shall be conveyed to the state.

When the resolution offered by Mr. Morgan on the 31st of March, directing the committee on finance to make an examination and report in relation to currency and coinage and as to the effect of the act June, 1890, on the prices of silver bullion, was taken up in the senate today, Mr. Morgan called for the yeas and nays on the adoption of the resolution. It was defeated.

HOUSE.

The house again considered the sundry civil bill in committee of the whole. Mr. Houk, of Ohio offered an amendment appropriating $100,000 to pay the expense of collecting, preparing and publishing facts and statistics pertaining to the industrial advance of the United States citizens of African descent from Jan. 1, 1865, to Jan. 1, 1893, to constitute a part of the government exhibit at the World's Fair.

Thursday, May 26.

SENATE.

Mr. Morgan's silver resolution was again taken up today and Mr. Morgan resumed his adjournment.

Mr. Sherman was on the floor replying to Mr. Morgan's speech at 2 o'clock, when the morning hour expired and Mr. Morgan's resolution went over without action.

Mr. Stewart moved to take up his bill "to provide for the free coinage of gold and silver," which was reported adversely on by the committee on finance. It was carried by a vote of 28 to 20.

The debate on the bill was opened by Mr. Stewart who was followed by Mr. Teller who spoke at some length.

No senator took the floor to continue the debate when Mr. Teller concluded. The senate went into executive session and soon adjourned.

HOUSE.

In the house in committee of the whole today amendment to the World's Fair bill prohibiting lotteries or games of chance within one mile of the grounds, closing the fair on Sunday and prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors on the grounds were voted down. The provision to close the government exhibit was adopted.

In the house Representative Bryan, of Nebraska, introduced a bill, which is favorably regarded by the members of the ways and means committee, to amend the act to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraints and monopolies.

Friday, May 28.

SENATE.

Senator Wilson reported to the senate from the judiciary committee a bill providing that no person shall be excused from testifying in criminal cases based upon any alleged violations of the interstate commerce law for the reason that his testimony might tend to criminate himself or subject him to penalty. Exception, however, is made in the case of perjury.

The silver bill was laid before the senate at the close of the morning business. After some colloquy the bill was, by unanimous consent, postponed till Tuesday, when it will come up at 2 o'clock as the unfinished business. The senate proceeded to executive business.

HOUSE.

A bill to place iron ore and scrap iron on the free list and reduce the duties on manufactures of iron and other metals was introduced by Mr. Stevens, of Massachusetts.

A motion to take up the Hatch anti-option bill was defeated by a tie vote.

Mr. Harries, of Minnesota, from the committee on invalid pensions, reported to the house adversely the bill introduced by Mr. Newberry, of Illinois, relating to pensions granted to pensioners who are foreigners or not bona fide residents of the United States. Its object is to eliminate from pension rolls the names of all persons who are not citizens and bona fide residents of this country.

Mr. Herbert, of Alabama, from the committee on naval affairs, reported to the house with the recommendation that it pass the bill that he introduced increasing the number of enlisted men who may at one time be enlisted in the navy to 9,000.

Very few farmers intend to seed any more wheat after this although some will seed considerable oats and barley.

The material for the new county bridge at Thief River Falls is here but cannot be taken up there on account of bad roads.

Victor Carlson, who stole a gold watch from Knute Qvande about a month ago has been indited for grand larceny by the grand jury.

Miss May Morgan, who has been teaching school near Crookston for the past three months was visiting friends here last Monday.

S. M. Dainard returned last Saturday from his old home in eastern Canada where he had been spending a couple of weeks with his parents.

E. T. Spafford was in town a short time last Monday looking over his business interests here. He says that seeding is finished at Thompson,

Yesterday was moving day for E. M. Hoff, Carl Johnson and Dan Patterson. Each wore one of those satisfied smiles which denote a pleasant occupation.

County Commissioner Kirsch, of Crookston, was in town to-day on his way to Thief River Falls, to look after the building of the new county bridge there.

The country roads have been worse than ever the past week but are now improving slowly and if we are favored with a few days of dry weather they will soon be fairly passable.

The worst cyclone of the season occurred at Wellington Kansas on May 27th. Fifty people were killed and as many more injured and thousands of dollars worth of property destroyed.

Secretary Grabe, of the Minnesota Hail association, of Crookston, was here last Monday and appointed H. E. Ives as agent for the company here. The company is composed of first class business men and should do a good business here.

A building boom seems to have struck us and several are talking strongly of building this spring. Holmes Bros. say they will move their present store onto the lot north and build a large store. M. E. Bjerk is figuring on building a large building and Dan Patterson will build an addition to his dwelling.

Street commissioner Harris has had a large crew of men and teams at work on the muskeg road this week. The high water has washed the road out badly and it will take considerable to put it in shape again, It will be put in good shape before the end of this week.

Dan Patterson retired yesterday from the management of the American House and G. S, Torgerson assumes control to-day. Mr. Torgerson is one of our prosperous farmers and is well and favorably known here and will, we think make a good landlord. Mr. Patterson will devote his time hereafter to his livery and collection business.

Crookston Times: George A. Ralph writes to friends in this city from his present surveying jaunt on the reservation, that he is having a pretty hard time, Much of the lands he is working upon are covered with water and himself and men are continually on the wade, at times up to their waists. Four or five of the crew that went out with him from here two weeks ago have left him, as they could not stand the work He is progressing slowly but intends to stick it out until a part of his numerous contracts are completed.

Crookston Times: State Auditor Bierman has been busy at the court house the past two days disposing of state school lands to the highest bidders A large and enthusiastic crowd has been present and the bidding has been spirited—the prices ranging from $5 to $12 per acre according to the location of the land and the number of persons bent upon its purchase. Between 4,000 and 5,000 acres will have been sold when the work is completed. So great has been the crowd at the court house today that the county commissioners who met for a session this morning, had to adjourn until tomorrow.

An unfortunate accident occurred here last Saturday, Several river drivers working for Meehan Bros. were driving some boom logs past here last Saturday and found a couple of their logs tied up. They took the logs and also the rope and started down the river, The rope it seems belonged to Philip Fricker, although the logs had been tied up by his brother, He met them by the bridge and asked for the rope, They refused to deliver it and words ensued, the drivers trying to drive Fricker away with their pike poles. They struck at him several times when he shot one of them in the legs with a shot gun. The wounded man Wm. Wilkins was hit with several shot in the feet and legs. The wounds are in no way dangerous., Constable Myers, of Thief River Falls was in town yesterday with a warrant for Fricker's arrest. but he could not be found. Mr, Fricker is well liked here and all know him as a quiet peacable fellow. The general impression here is that the drivers were entirely too fresh and that Mr. Fricker was justified in the action he took in self defense.

No other event in many months has caused such great amazement and disgust in the British mind as the transfer of the ocean racers of the Inman line to the protection of the American flag. The average Englishman regards British supremacy on the seas as so thoroughly established that it is impossible for him to understand why any vessel could be willing, under any circumstances, to transfer its allegiance and accept the flag of another power. This is the patriotic view. For the business world in Great Britain the Inman incident has an aspect even darker, as it is more practical, Merchants and others see in this transfer the cloud no bigger than a man's hand that foreshadows the loss of England's commercial supremacy and the building up of American commerce at the expense of the British. The commercial and industrial growth of the United States was already regarded with deep jealousy even before this incident. Now there is almost a panic, The British government will have to take some steps to prevent or to discourage other steamship lines from following the example of the inman, but the government appears to be in confusion as to, what steps to take.—Herald.

The Peoples Party convention at Crookston last week was attended by a large number of enthusiastic delegates. W. Godfrey was made temporary chairman and J. H. Nickle temporary secretary. H, J. Mitchell was elected permanent chairman and J. E. Oppegaard permanent secretary. The delegates elected to attend the state convention were instructed to vote for Ignatius Donnelly for governor and the delegates to the congressional convention were instructed to vote for Andrew Steenerson for congress.

Since the commencement of building of the Whaleback in the ship yards in West Superior, twenty-two of these vessels have been built, the last having been launched on the 21st. This has a capacity of one hundred thousand bushels of wheat and as it draws only fourteen feet, it can be loaded at Duluth and after passing out through the great lakes and the St. Lawrence, can go directly to Liverpool without breaking bulk. It is true that the trip through the rapids of the St. Lawrence is very hazardous and if the railroads reduce rates, as the companies are now talking of doing, wheat may continue to be shipped to the seaboard and from there to Europe by ocean as heretofore for many years, but the time will come when the internal commerce of this country will be so great that the enlarging of the waterways from the west to the ocean will be of such vast importance that nothing will be allowed to stand in its way. Duluth and Chicago are to be the greatest grain and produce markets of the world and all obstructions to the ingress and egress of ocean vessels to and from these ports will, in time, be fully removed, notwithstanding the doubling and tribling and quadrupling of tracks by the great railroad systems,—Crookston Times.

Early in the present session John Sherman introduced a bill into the senate forbidding the use of the United States flag by private individuals for the purpose of advertising. The committee to which it was referred has just now made an adverse report, claiming that it does not lie within the province of congress to interfere in matters of this sort. This may be true but the object of the proposed law is a good one, and perhaps it can be reached in some other way, Popular opinion, if once roused on the subject ought to be effective in saving the stars and stripes from desecration. A few things should be sacred in the midst of the prevailing flippancy. The burlesquing of the famous characters of our national history, the parodying of our national songs and anthems, the employment of our national emblems for cheap and vulgar ends deserve the general disapproval. We have a task serious enough at the best to kindle and keep alive the spirit of patriotism in the breasts of the many about us who by nature neither understand nor care for our institutions, We cannot afford to let the tools which are valuable for this purpose lose their edge through rough misuse. The vendors of soap and patent medicine will spare the flag if they see their patronage will suffer rather than increase because they make it a vehicle for attracting public attention.—Globe.

GOETHE'S ENGLISH POEM.

Thou know'st how happily thy Friend
 Walks upon florid ways;
Thou know'st how heaven's bounteous hand
 Lends him to golden days.

But hah! a cruel enemy
 Destroies all that Bless:
In Moments of Melancholy
 Flies all my Happiness.

Then fears of doubt do fill my mind
 With deep obscurity;
I search myself, and cannot find
 A spark of Worth in me.

When tender friends, to tender kiss,
 Run up with open arms,
I think I merit not that bliss,
 That like a kiss me warmeth.

Hah! when my child, I love thee, said
 And gave the kiss I sought,
Then I—forgive me, tender maid—
 She is a false one thought.

She cannot love a peevish boy,
 She with her godlike face.
O could I, Friend, that thought destroy,
 It leads the golden days.

And other thought is misfortune,
 Is death and night to me:
I hum no supportable tune,
 I can no poet be.

When to the Altar of the Muse
 A triste incense I bring,
I beg let Poetry be mine:
 O Sisters, let me sing.

But when they then my prayer not hear,
 I break my whisp'ring lyre:
Then from my eyes runs down a tear,
 Extinguishing th' incensed fire.

Then curse I, Friend, the fated sky,
 And from th' Altar I fly;
And to my Friends aloud I cry,
 Be happier than I!

—Goethe.

Clam Digging in Maine.

Hundreds of men and boys on the Maine coast make their living by digging clams. They use a heavy rake with teeth ten inches long, and when the ebbing tide exposes the little holes which indicate the presence of clams they begin to dig. In winter great quantities of clams are dug for bait, the diggers sometimes working during the night tides and in the coldest weather. The catch is taken to a little shanty on the shore and "shucked" with astonishing rapidity born of long paactice, and is then ready for market.

Four barrels of clams in the shell will make one barrel in bulk or in meat, and that is worth from five to six dollars. The digger, however, has to pay sixty cents for his barrel and forty or fifty cents for a bushel of salt, so that he realizes only from four to five dollars for his labor. In the fall great quantities of clams are packed at the canneries along the coast, and then the clam digger who is smart and can find a good bed makes fair wages.—Cor. New York Sun.

Santo Domingo Mahogany.

It is true that Santo Domingo mahogany, which was the earliest used, and is perhaps the richest in color and figure, is comparatively scarce in this market, and comes only in small logs seldom over twelve feet long and fifteen inches in diameter. The Santo Domingo forests have been yielding mahogany ever since Sir Walter Raleigh's ship carpenters admired the wood 300 years ago, but the drain has been considerable for less than 200 years. Even yet, however, there is plenty of large mahogany in the interior of Santo Domingo, and in time it will be brought to market. Capitalists of New York have several times been interested in schemes to build railways into the interior of the island in order that the untouched forests of mahogany may be reached.—Exchange.

Art in Architecture.

Art in architecture is the ornamentation of the construction; superadded ornament is either bad art or not architecture. In the development of building the treatment of the three elements of weight, support and security assumed different shapes. The employment of ornament, or architecture, came in with the ornamentation of the support, the ornamentation of the weight, and the ornamentation of the construction which connected the weight with the support. To arrive at the fundamental idea in the different styles one must examine the relations between the support and the weight. —London Tablet.

The Mean Height of Land.

The mean height of land above sea level, according to the most scientific geographers, is 2,250 feet. The mean depth of the ocean is 12,480 feet. Only 2 per cent. of the sea (oceans in general) is included inside a depth of 500 fathoms, while 77 per cent. lies between 500 and 3,000 fathoms. If the land were filled into the hollows of the seas, water would roll over the earth's crust to a uniform depth of two miles.—Philadelphia Press.

It was a matter of patriotism and of state pride that Ohio should have her quota of the 75,000 men promptly in the field. Garfield was asked to raise a regiment from his district. He knew nothing about military matters, he said, but "it was never too late to learn."

In 1880 Maine produced 350,000 bushels of clams, valued at over $100,000, and in 1890 the production was considerably more than 500,000 bushels.

Henry VIII put a stop to the raising of inferior horses in England by having all slaughtered that were under thirteen hands high at the age of 5 years.

It is just as well to make the oest of a scanty head of hair, but before doing that see if you can't mix in with it a little from the shop.

How to Lure Big Trout.

Fred, who had often been here before, wanted big trout and knew how to get them. He cast very near where I did, but gave the little fellows no chance. So rapidly was his single fly trolled across the water that in a few minutes he had collected the whole school away from the spot where he expected to find a big trout. His fly was so large that I laughed when he mounted it, telling him he would find salmon a few hundred miles farther north in Canada, but rather scarce in York state. But my banter was unheeded. Fred knew these waters better than I did the Pennsylvania streams, where many years ago I learned to cast a fly, and where such a fly as he used would be considered a bad want of judgment.

A dozen times he swiftly trailed his fly across the water, getting a rise at every cast, but not letting them have it. Twenty feet away to the right he seemed to have drawn all the small trout in that hole. Then, lengthening his line, he cast again, and slowly drew his fly with a quivering, snakelike motion. There was a rise of a magnificent fish, but Fred struck too quickly and missed him, though I thought the fish felt the steel.

"Wait a moment, Fred," said I. "Change your fly and you will get that big fellow."

"Not a bit of it," yelled John. "Let him have it now quick!"

Fred's fly struck the water before John had done speaking, and had not trailed three feet when the trout took it, showing his head and shoulders out of the water and making the surface boil with the sweep of his broad tail. As his capacious mouth closed on the fly Fred struck so sharply that the leader sounded like the twang of a violin string struck pizzicato.

"You've got him, Fred," yelled John. "Keep him away from the bushes. I'll paddle you out and give you plenty of room to play him."—American Angler.

Prayer Sticks of the Pueblo Indians.

How many of my young countrymen who have read of the "prayer wheels" of Burmah and the paper prayers of the Chinese know that there is a mechanical prayer used by thousands of people in the United States? The Pueblo "prayer stick" is quite as curious a device as those of the heathen orient, and the feather is the chief part of it.

Prowling in sheltered ravines about any Pueblo town, the curiosity seeker will find stuck in the ground carefully whittled sticks, each with a tuft of downy feathers (generally white) bound at the top.

Each of these sticks is a prayer, and none the less earnest and sincere because so misguided. Around the remote pueblo of Zuni I have counted over 3,000 of these strange invocations in one day's ramble; but never a tithe as many by any other pueblo.

According to the nature of the prayer, the stick, the feathers and the manner of tying them vary. The Indian who has a favor to ask of the Trues prepares his feather prayer with great solemnity and secrecy, takes it to a proper spot, prays to all those above and plants the prayer stick that it may continue his petition after he has gone home.—C. E. Lummis in St. Nicholas.

To Induce Humility in a Peacock.

If you wish to take the conceit out of a peacock pull out his tail feathers, and as soon as he finds the glory of his plumage gone he becomes the humblest, most subdued and ashamed looking bird that ever walked the earth. A peacock in full feather is so vain and conceited as sometimes to be really troublesome. Not satisfied with squalling at the top of his discordant voice, and with parading himself through the yard and up and down the walks with expanded plumage, he will attack cats, dogs and even children, and has been known to seriously injure small boys or girls that were incautious enough to venture within his reach.

Plucking his tail feathers, however, causes all his courage to evaporate. He will sneak around the yard like a whipped spaniel, will keep out of sight as much as possible, and you will hear nothing of him until his plumage has again grown.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

It All Depends.

"What kind of a man is he—good, bad or indifferent?"

"Well, that depends a good deal who teeters on the other end of the plank with him."

"How so, sir?"

"Well, if you size him up alonside of Judas Iscariot he looms up middling fair; but when you come to sit him down between such fellows as you an me, judge, de does dwindle terrible surprisin—he does, for a fact."—Texas Siftings.

The Annex Girl's Mistake.

She was at the college tea, telling the poor sophomore all about the recent schools of German philosophy. As they talked, a piano on the floor below began to sound.

"Oh, that is Wagner, isn't it?" she exclaimed.

"No," said the '94 man, whose knowledge came in handily, "that is Jonesy."—Harvard Lampoon.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND.

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER XVI.

I was told at the Sacramento depot that the Golden State Hotel was on the third block up the grade. In ascending the hill, I caught sight of Brace and Lola walking in advance a hundred yards or so, yet so changed that it took me some minutes to identify them.

Swinging along at a good four miles an hour, and dragging the Kid along by the wrist, or letting her trot on behind, I should have recognized the Judge immediately at a quarter of a mile off. But, walking at an old man's pace, with his daughter leaning on his arm, he was not easily recognizable.

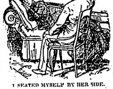
But in Lola the change was still greater. She was no longer a barefooted, ragged little savage, but a young lady with some pretensions to elegance in her dress; and thus altered, she looked a woman rather than a child.

Her head was bent, she leaned for support on her father's arm. She walked slowly, and with an air of fatigue; and, remembering the buoyant elasticity of her gait, the rebellious independence of her spirit, I asked myself with doubt if this could indeed be Lola.

I followed them into the hotel; from the vestibule I saw them enter a room upon the first floor. I ran up and stopped at the open door. Lola had seated herself on a couch, her face rested on the pillow, her eyes were closed.

It was the pretty little face I knew so well, but oh, so changed! Her cheeks were no longer round; the russet bloom had gone from her complexion; the vermilion of her lips was unnaturally bright. I was struck by the delicate beauty of her face, but it was a beauty that filled one's heart with sorrow, like the fading away of a divine melody.

I entered the room noiselessly, and seated myself in a chair by her side. I heard Brace moving about in the adjoining room. She was unconscious of my presence, and, as I sat with my eyes dwelling upon her beautiful face, my thoughts wandered back to the old days at the Cape, when I left my work from time to time to see how "the little 'un" was getting on, as she lay exhausted with sickness. The gleam of the white teeth between the parted lips, the curl of the long lashes that swept her cheek, the crisp little lock above her ear,—these were all the same, yet, with the undefinable trait of womanhood, so different. The bud had opened,—only to die? I had asked myself before if she would live. It was doubtful then, but the hope was fainter now.



I SEATED MYSELF BY HER SIDE.

She opened her eyes, and, seeing me, sprang up with a cry of joy, and threw her arms round my neck and kissed me, for she was, indeed, still a child at heart.

"Oh, it is true!" she cried, between her kisses; "I was asleep, and I saw you come to me, and—" she stopped abruptly, and, drawing back, said in wonder, as she looked in my face, "Why, are you crying!"

Hearing her voice, Brace came in from the next room.

"Say, now, what did I tell you?" he exclaimed. "The Kid's taken into her silly little head that she wouldn't see you no more, sir."

"She will see a good deal of me, if I have my way," I said, holding out my hand to Brace.

His countenance changed; he dragged his chin tuft thoughtfully for a minute, then turning to his daughter, he said:

"Lola, my gel, we must have it out now straight off. Here's Gentleman Thorne holdin' out his hand to me, and I ain't no right to take it till you let on what's come of the big diamond."

"Not now,—not now," she said, beseechingly; "in a little while,—a week,—no more."

"No, my gel; 'tain't to be put off like it was a dose of physic. See here,—see here. When we parted, Gentleman Thorne refused to give me his hand,—for why; he knew we wasn't playin' square; and, turning to me, he said: "You knew we'd got the stone, didn't you, sir?"

"I saw you hide the case," I replied.

"Consequently you knew we'd got the thing among us somewheres. Come, my gel, think how Gentleman Thorne nussed you out there in the hot sun; 'member how he stood by you and pulled you through. Don't let the best friend you ever had think you ain't got nothin' but greaser blood in yer; don't let him think you ain't got no kinder gratitude or 'fection in yer."

"Oh, you should not think that," she cried, starting to her feet. "I'll take you there,—not to-day, it is too far; but to-morrow I'll show you where it is, and you shall take it to her, and never see me again."

"I will take you with me if I go, Lola," I said.

She shook her head, and covered her face with her hands.

"No, no, you will never see me again," she said, and then a violent fit of coughing attacked her, and she left the room, closing the door after her.

Brace looked at me significantly, and in a low voice, that faltered a little, said:

"It ain't nat'ral for her to give in like that; it ain't like the Kid, not a bit. Her contrariness and obstinacy used to make me wild, but it didn't make my heart ache like this."

Lola came back in a little while, weak and exhausted, but with a smile upon her poor face. She sat close to me, slipping her hand under my arm, and resting her cheek against my shoulder. Her love was too innocent, or she was too ignorant of social usages, to know restraint.

"I don't want to talk; it hurts me," she said. "I just want to sit here quiet," and she closed her eyes, nestling still closer.

"You've come to a ruined and an onhallowed country, sir," said the Judge; "durned if I skercely knowed it again,—nothing but machinery and Chinese,—not a decent white placer in all Nevada,—them yaller varmint ain't left anythin' worth lookin' for, not in the or'nary way. It's got to be looked for in onor'nary places, and fetched out in onor'nary ways as I've said more'n once before to you; and my meanin' is that I could do the same if I had the means, and if so be the Kid keeps her promise,—as I do believe she will."

Lola nodded without taking her head from my shoulder, or opening her eyes, and the little sigh fluttered up from her heart. "As I know she will,—I'll do it; not for the sake of the gold, 'cause that won't be needed when we've got the diamond, but just to prove the prenciple of the thing. It's down an almighty hole up the Sierra, nearly up to the snow-line, and I've been there prospectin' it day after day, and studyin' the thing out, an' I didn't leave it till the snow forced us to come down, and now the hole is blocked up for months."

Suddenly raising her head, and turning to her father with eager eyes, Lola exclaimed:

"Blocked!"

"Ah, blocked for full three months by the snow, and for another by the swelled fall; it'll be pretty well June afore I kin get down it."

Lola burst into a fit of hysterical laughter, and clapping her hands with joy, cried:

"It is down there,—the diamond! You must wait—months,—almost till June." Then growing suddenly grave, she looked wistfully at me as if to see if I were angry with her.

CHAPTER XVII.

Naturally they were astonished when they heard I had been in the State a couple of months. When I told them I had come there to seek my fortune, and was farming in the south, where I hoped they would come and stay during the winter, Brace said:

"Well, I hear there's a livin' to be made ranchin', but it's a plaguey long row, they do say. Hows'ever, it won't be none too long for me to hoe along of you, and so be you're agreeable to havin' our company, it ain't likely I'll hold off."

Lola's eyes dilated with eager delight. I fancy her imagination pictured a return of the Transvaal times, the happiest she had known, when rude necessity knit us together in close companionship. I did not think it necessary to undeceive them then, and the next day I took them with me to San Diego. The sun was shining when we got there, and the air was soft and warm; it was like an early day of English summer.

The effect on Lola was miraculous: she seemed inspired with new life. I had never seen her so animated and gay.

Her countenance fell as we passed through the beautiful plantations, and entered the richly furnished house. It was an unhappy disillusion for her. Brace, who never let anything in the world surprise him, stroked his chin reflectively as he looked around him, and said:

"This is your lot, is it, Gentleman Thorne?"

"I shall be better able to call it mine when I have paid up the capital invested in it. As you know I had no money of my own. I have borrowed heavily, and until the loan is paid—"

I shrugged my shoulders.

"Until it's paid," said Brace, continuing my sentence "you've got to go to bed late, and get up airly, and be thankful hef you kin sleep sound in betwixt. I reckon it'll take you a pretty considerable long time afore you feel you don't know what to do with yourself."

"A long while!" I said gravely.

"How long?" asked Lola quickly, under her breath.

"Oh, many, many years, perhaps," I replied. She did not attempt to conceal her satisfaction.

. . . .

I gave the girl a wiry little horse; she sat it for the first time with the grace and mastery of a trained horsewoman.

Every morning I rode 'round the plantation; sometimes business took me to the city,—she never failed to be by my side on these occasions. But when I had work to do, it was another thing. She hated work, and dreaded tranquillity; she found an escape from both in a wild gallop among the foothills. She became coquettish with regard to her appearance. When she could coax a dollar out of her father, she would gallop off to San Diego to buy some trifle for the adornment of her pretty little person. If, by my manner, she fancied I approved the new addition, she wore it till she could replace it with something else; but, if I failed to notice it, or she thought it was not to my taste, she would fling it away before it was a day old. She abandoned herself to the enjoyment of the new life that came to her, and for some time she seemed neither to remember the past not think of the future.

Under these conditions, all trace of illness disappeared, and with health returned something of her old mutinous independence; paternal authority once more sank into insignificance.

Brace quickly found occupation, and, after a time, rendered me invaluable assistance in the management of the business. One day, as we were returning from the packing sheds, he said:

"I've looked round this consarn pretty careful, and I see, sir, that you're goin' to do a great big thing here. You've found out jest where the real grit o' this country lays, and you're goin' to work it up into an almighty pile. That's what you're goin' to do, and I'm everlastin' glad of it, for more reasons than one. And one reason is this,—I'm gettin more duberous every day whether we shall ever get the Great Hesper. For, fustly, when the frost breaks up, the great hole where the gel hes hid the stone, may be swep out as clean as a gun'baril by the torrent of melted snow, or it may be blocked up for everlastin' by the mast of rock that comes rollin' down from the mountain sides every spring; and, secondly the Kid may change her mind. She may back out of the promise she gave us when she was sick. Rec'lect her mother were a greaser, and consiquently it's nat'ral to her to tell lies when they'll serve her purpose; and bear in mind it would serve her purpose to make out the diamond ain't no longer where she put it. Bear in mind, also, sir, as she warn't herself when she made the promise, and that she's been gettin' more herself since. Her obs'nacy and deviltry's comin' back more and more every day, and she's now almost the obs'nate, contrary little cuss she was. Keep on bearin' in mind that she stole the diamond purposely to separate you from Miss Lascelles, and to bring you down to a or'nary workin' man again. I see her game the day we lost the diamond; I see it clearer 'an ever when we got up to Petersville,—she was that angry when I told her there was no good to be done minin' in the or'nary way, so eager for me to write and tell you there was a going for the stuff down the big hole. Now, fortune to be made soon as I hit on the idea of what's she to git by givin' up the diamond,—a little wuss than noth'in. Which is why I rejice in the prospect of your making a big thing of this ere orangegrowin'. Still, sir, we ain't goin' to lose that diamond, if we can help it, and we've got two things to do. We've got to keep our eyes on the snow, and get down the great hole afore the wust of the slush and rock comes tumblin' down, and we've got to make the Kid believe as things down here is so jolly flourishin' as we don't kere two straws whether we find the thing or not. You'll leave that to me. I'll pitch it in strong to her!"

And he kept his word. Every day he exhausted his stock of adjectives in glorifying the estate and dilating upon the marvelous results to be obtained from fruit culture, and occasionally he referred to the Great Hesper with such contempt that one would have thought it was hardly worth stretching out one's hand to take.

This had the effect that Brace desired. She listened in moody silence, and, after I had turned the subject, she would sit with her chin in her hands, her elbow on her knees, and her great sad eyes fixed upon some distant object, wrapped in dreamy meditation. But Brace was not content with this.

One day I overheard him speaking to Lola when they were alone.

"I reckon we shall have to show off our good pints, my gel, before the squire and his daughter come here, or we shall look pretty mean by comparison, and Gentleman Thorne will sorter feel sick seein' us hangin' around. He'll say to his-self, nat'ral like, 'Well, here is this squire and his daughter, as I've never done nothin' in partickler for, has set me up in a business as is goin' to make me the most eternal all-fired millionaire that ever lived; and, on the other hand, here's this derned old Judge, as skercely earns his salt, and the Kid, as I've nussed and saved twice from dying right out, and all they've ever done for me is ter rob me of all I hed, and do their level best to clean me out and ruin me.'"

He might have continued, being of a persevering sort, but that Lola ran away to her room, slammed the door, and burst into a fit of crying, that could be heard where I sat on the terrace.

TO BE CONTINUED.

COULDN'T ALWAYS TELL.

Why a Barber Refrained From Getting His Life Insured.

"You can just always tell about things in this world," said the barber, when his customer had got comfortably settled in a chair; "I used to think that maybe some day I'd own a shop myself, but you can't always tell, you know."

"That's so," said the sympathetic man in the chair.

"I suppose," continued the barber, "that I might have had my own shop if it hadn't been that I began wrong. You see, the shop that I learned my trade in went to smash. I'd worked along there till they'd have taken me into partnership, I guess, only there was no use of being in with a concern that wouldn't pay."

"Of course."

"So, you see, there was a good deal of luck in that, and then, afterwards, when the old concern went up altogether, I was out of a job. That was luck, too, you see, I didn't get the kind of job I wanted again for some time, and when I got it I owed several debts. Well, you can't just always tell what you are going to do in this world. When I got a new job that I liked first rate I got married. That kept me from saving money, you see. Of course I didn't expect to get married when I was hard pinched for money, but I loved her, and—. Well, you can't always tell, you know."

"It seems to be so," said the man in the chair, suppressing a yawn.

"Yes it's a funny world. Now, I had a chance to go out west, and I might have made some money out there, but I thought I'd stick it out here, and so I've just been begging along.

"Now, there's my wife; she's a good woman, and we've always got along firstrate together. I like her and she likes me. If I stay out late at night she never says anything about it. She's got the evenest temper of any woman I ever saw. I never knew her to lose it, and I'd kind of like to do—something for her, but I don't see just what I can do—something that would show her, you know, that I'm grateful for what she's doing for me."

"I suppose you have provided for her in case you die?"

"Well, no. I haven't. You see, you can't always tell, and so I haven't been able to think of anything to do."

"Why don't you get your life insured?"

"Well, you see you can't always tell. My wife's a good woman, you know; she likes me and all that. But suppose I should get my life insured? Suppose she should get thinking about that thousand dollars. You can't always tell. She might put something in my coffee some morning, and then where'd I be? She is a good woman, of course, but you"—

"You can't always tell," interrupted the man who was getting shaved.

"Yes, that's the trouble," said the barber with a sigh; "you can't always tell."—New York Tribune.

HOW ANIMALS BEAR PAIN.

Their Mute Heroism in Suffering Puts Man to Shame.

One of the pathetic things connected with this kaleidoscopic nonsense people call life is the manner in which the animal kingdom endures suffering, says a writer in the Florida Times-Union. Take horses, for instance, in battle, and, after the first shock of a wound, they make no sound. They bear the pain with a mute, wondering endurance, and if at night you hear a wild groan from the battlefield, it comes from their loneliness, their loss of that human companionship which seems absolutely indispensable to the comfort of domesticated animals.

The dog will carry a broken leg for days wistfully but uncomplainingly. The cat, stricken with club or stone or caught in some trap from which it gnaws its way to freedom, crawls to some secret place and bears in silence pain which we could not endure. Sheep and other cattle meet the thrust of the butcher's knife without a sound and even common poultry endure intense agony without complaint.

The dove, shot unto death, flies to some far-off bough, and as it dies the silence is unbroken save by the patter on the leaves of its own life blood. The wounded deer speeds to some thick brake, and in pitiful submission waits for death. The eagle, struck in midair, fights to the last against the fatal summons. There is no moan or sound of pain, and the defiant look never fades from its eyes until the lids close over them, never to uncover again.

Here is an example of this splendid endurance right before us, which proud man in vain tries to emulate. A mule haltered to a post awaiting treatment, one of its hind feet a suppurating sore, the frog festering and running out. Its whole body droops and its eyes are strained and agonizing. The veterinary surgeon standing by says that the lightest touch of that foot to the ground causes the most intense pain, and yet there is no sound, nothing but that patient endurance that astonishes and appals.

A USE FOR THE FLEA.

Women Stake Money Upon His Uncertain Movements.

According to Fanny Ward the women of Chili have a curious little game of chance which is played by putting a small piece of raw beef on a sheet of fly-paper and watching the fleas attack it. The player at the side of the beef first reached by a flea wins the money. Minister Schuyler observed a practice similar to this among the natives of Turkestan, the difference being that the players there made use of lumps of sugar and waited for the flies to alight on them.

An imaum, learned in the law, told Mr. Schuyler that this gambling game, still affected by New Orleans negroes, was of very ancient origin. Perhaps the Vedic worshipers used to sprinkle the succulent ghi on the ground and watch the flies alight on it. Clearly there is nothing new under the sun.

And speaking of the antiquity of things. Dr. Phene, in a recent lecture before the British Society for the Encouragement of the Fine Arts, proved conclusively, as it seemed, that the legends of King Arthur and the Round-Table Knights, instead of being a peculiar property of Western Europe, are really a mere transcript from a part of the voluminous old Hindoo poem, the "Mahabharata."

The likeness is so striking that some of Tennyson's Arthurian poetry, as read by Dr. Phene along with extracts from the Indian epic, seemed nothing more than a free translation of it.

He Had Studied.

It is to be feared that even in the United States so-called liberally educated men are sometimes ignorant of many simple and useful things; but what shall be said of the state of education in China, as pictured by the author of "Chinese Characteristics?"

It is exceedingly common to find men who have spent more years in study than they can remember, who yet cannot read the simplest colloquial book, nor repeat a page of what they have studied.

A few months ago the writer met in a dispensary a man who seemed to be examining his tally-card with a minute attention which indicated that he recognized the characters. The latter were few and simple, merely indicating his surname and number, "Wang, Number 236."

On being asked if he knew the characters by sight, he replied that he recognized "about half of them."

"And have you studied at school?"

"Oh yes."

"How long have you studied?"

"Twelve years!"

Four Thousand Mummies on a Battlefield.

A traveller who has just returned from South America states that on the battlefield of Tarapaca, in the desert, the dead are still lying just as they fell in the battle between the Chilians and the Peruvians. There were about 4,000 of them, and nearly 1,000 horses are left unburied, for the Chilians, who were marching through a horrible region of drought and death, had no time to dig sepulchres. But it never rains on Tarpaca, and the sun has dried the corpses and the nitrate in the soil has preserved them, and upon the plateau 5,000 mummies lie in ghastly confusion, with their broken swords and bayonets all as fresh looking as on the day of that memorable battle. There is no bird, or beast, or insect in that horrible desolation, and if nobody interferes with the relics they will remain the same for centuries.

An Archbishop's Swear.

What is an Archbishop's swear? This curious piece of information came out by accident the other night during one of Dr. Benson's speeches in Whitechapel. He was speaking without notes, and at one particular passage waved indignantly eloquent at the idea that such work as Mr. Barnett was doing was not good and useful work. Suddenly two words slipped out. The Archbishop colored with confusion and apologised profusely for his inadvertence. We hasten to add that they were hardly what would ordinarily pass as very wicked words. The Archbishop's swear was only "My goodness.—English Paper.

BEATS LAUGHING GAS.

Trick of a Dentist to Distract His Victim's Attention.

"There," said the dentist with an air of satisfaction, as he laid aside his instruments; "that didn't hurt you much did it?"

"Don't know replied the patient as he tried to get his jaw on its hinges again. "I didn't have a chance to find out."

"Of course, of course," said the dentist complacently. "It was a quick piece of work."

"Quick nothing," growled the patient. "Who's that driveling essence of idiocy in the next room?"

"The man who plays the cornet?"

"The man who tries to play the cornet."

"Oh, he's a poor, unfortunate—"

"Unfortunate! He ought to be unfortunate. I'd like to get at him once."

"Oh, well, he tries to do his best, you know, and, as he was in pretty hard luck when he took the room, I arranged to pay him a little something every day."

"What for?" The patient seemed loath to beleive his ears.

"Tooting that horn. By comparison it dwarfs the pain that I give—makes one forget that there is such a thing as physical suffering. Influence of mind over matter, you know. When I have an extremely bad case I tell him he'll have to wait for a day or two for his pay. It makes him blue you know."

"What of that?"

"Oh, when he's blue he makes noises that would make one resigned if he were to be burned at the stake. It's cheaper and more effective than anæsthetics."—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

HOW THE OLD MAN WAS FOOLED.

Here is a clever double entente, a love letter. It is sent by a Washington friend, who does not know the author. Read in the usual way it is designed evidently for the father's eye, but read every other line (first, third, fifth, etc.) and an entirely different meaning is found:

The great love I have hitherto expressed for you is false, and I find my indifference toward you increases daily. The more I see of you the more you appear in my eyes an object of contempt.
I feel myself every way disposed and determined to hate you. Believe me, I never had an intention to offer you my hand. Our last conversation has left a tedious insipidity, which has by no means given me the most exalted idea of your character.
Your temper would make me extremely unhappy, and were we united I should experience nothing but the hatred of my parent, added to the anything but pleasure in living with you. I have, indeed, a heart to bestow, but I do not wish to imagine it at your service. I could not give it to anyone more inconsistent and capricious than yourself and less capable to do honor to my choice and to my family
Yes, miss, I hope you will be persuaded that I speak sincerely, and you will do me a favor to avoid me. I shall excuse you taking the trouble to answer this. Your letters are always full of impertinence, and you have not a shadow of wit and good sense. Adieu! Adieu! Believe me so averse to you that it is impossible for me ever to be your most affectionate and humble servant

China Cement.

It is very convenient to have a little china cement to mend china or glass ware. Although no cement has ever been invented which will successfully stand boiling water, yet a piece of china that is intended for decorative use, and not for hard service in the kitchen, where it will frequently be washed, will be good as new when it is once mended. When the handles of steel knives and forks come off they can be easily mended with rosin. Pour a little powdered rosin into the cavity in the handle. Heat the part of the knife that fits into the handle until it is red hot and thrust it into the handle. It will become firmly fixed by rosin when it becomes cool. In heating the handle protect the blade carefully with wet cloths, for if the blade becomes heated beyond a certain point, it looses its temper and the keenness of the steel once lost can not be recovered.

Do You Admire John Chinaman's Complexion?

Probably not. Even were John's eyes not cut on a bias and his nose broad in the beam, his tint would stamp him as the reverse of beautiful. Yet a white man with the jaundice is of the same hue, only more pronounced. Biliousness, with its symptoms of furred tongue, yellowish skin and eyeballs, pains in the right side, sick headaches, vertigo, must if unchecked culminate in jaundice and congestion of the liver. Remedy this trouble and remove its attendant symptoms, dyspepsia and constipation, with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which also cures malaria, rheumatic and kidney troubles.

Thousands of Dollars

I spent trying to find a cure for Salt Rheum, which I had 13 years. Physicians said they never saw so severe a case. My legs, back and arms were covered by the humor, I was unable to lie down in bed, could not walk without crutches, and had to have my arms, back and legs bandaged twice a day. I began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon I could see a change. The flesh became more healthy, the sores soon healed, the scales fell off, I was soon able to give up bandages and crutches, and a happy man I was. I had been taking

CONSUMPTION.

"How do I look?"

That depends, madam, upon how you feel. If you're suffering from functional disturbances, irregularities or weaknesses, you're sure to "look it." And Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the remedy. It builds up and invigorates the system, regulates and promotes the proper functions, and restores health and strength. It's a legitimate medicine, not a beverage; purely vegetable, perfectly harmless, and made especially for woman's needs. In the cure of all "female complaints," it's guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money is refunded. No other medicine for women is sold so. Think of that, when the dealer says something else (which pays him better) is "just as good."

"Times have changed." So have methods. The modern improvements in pills are Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They help Nature, instead of fighting with her. Sick and nervous headache, biliousness, costiveness, and all derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels are prevented, relieved, and cured.

"MY PAPA DRINKS."

Pathetic Appeal of a Little Girl to a Policeman.

The policemen of this city see many incidents and witness bits of life which never come to the public attention. An example of this has lately been experienced by Officer Herron, who some time ago received a letter from a little girl named Florence Hoover at Waynesville, written in childish way, but telling an affecting story. The little girl wanted to know what had become of her papa, George W. Hoover, who she said had left their home sometime ago, and had never come back. She said she thought that Mr. Herron might know about him, because she heard he was in Bloomington.

"My papa drinks," she wrote, "and we are all very sorry, but we don't know where to look for him. Please find him and take care of him for me." The simple childish appeal stirred the sympathy of the policeman, and he made a most diligent search for the whereabouts of the missing father. The officer will keep the letter of the girl as a memento, and says that such a stimulus would spur him on to greater effort to find a missing man than would the offer of a big reward.—Bloomington Ill. Leader.

That Altered the Case.

Skidds—So you are married?

Hipple—Yes.

Skidds—And yet it is less than six months since you told me you had determined to remain single.

Hipple—And I know; but you see, Mamie had decided to get married.

Discrimination.

THE commissioner of internal revenue reports the payment to date of 2,816 claims for sugar bounty, amounting to $7,271,006, leaving unsettled 615 claims involving $54,681.

CASUALTIES.

A fatal accident occurs on the St. Paul & Duluth road.

THIRTY-THREE people were killed by the Kansas cyclone, other towns being stricken besides Wellington.

A conservative estimate of the amount of damages caused by the loss from the high waters from Kansas City to New Orleans places it at the enormous figure of $50,000,000.

AT Woodville, Pa., James Holland, aged seven fell into a creek. In trying to rescue him Elizabeth and Julia Coyne and Mary Enfelt aged from nine to eleven, were drowned.

An electrical storm killed several hundred acres of grass and cotton a few miles west of Greenville, Tex. The cotton is killed dead and has the appearance of being burned. The grass was burned dry by the action of the electricity.

THE body of D. M. Carey, late of the firm of Paige, Carey & Co., whose failure was one of the results of the Painesville, Ohio, bank scandal, was found at Moundsville, W. Va. He had been accidentally drowned.

A TERRIFIC cloudburst flooded Webb City, Mo., and the surrounding country recently. The water fell in great masses and flooded the streets to the depth of 18 inches on the level. All the lead and zinc mines in the city are flooded nearly to their tops and the loss will be enormous.

PERSONAL.

ARCHBISHOP IRELAND leaves Rome on his return to St. Paul.

HON. T. JEFFERSON COOLIDGE, minister to France has sailed from New York.

PROF. JOSEF WELL, an artist of Newark, N. J., has purchased a picture for $100, which he says is a real Rubens, a companion to one now in the royal academy, Munich, which is valued at $125,000.

CAPT. EGAN, the Chicago shipping master who lately disappeared has returned home. He claims to have been drugged, robbed of $500 and taken to Rochester, N. Y., by unknown parties.

THE WICKED WORLD.

THREE Arkansas men, brothers, are lynched because, at their suggestion, their nephew murdered a jailer.

AN Illinois man and a robber exchange shots at Council Bluffs, Iowa, the former being fatally wounded and the robber shot dead.

AT Rockville, Ind., William L. Wright, deputy prosecutor, has been arrested for uttering forged paper to the amount $11,600.

SUCH extensive horse thefts are going on along the Arizona-Mexican border as to arouse the suspicion that another Garza revolution is being worked up.

THE supreme court of Missouri has affirmed the sentence of the circuit court in the case of ex-Treasurer Noland, charged with embezzling state funds, and fixed his punishment at two years in the penitentiary.

THE famous murder case against Col. H. Clay King, a prominent lawyer under sentence to hang for killing David Poston, another prominent Memphis lawyer at Memphis, March 10, 1891, has been taken up in the Tennessee supreme court.

INFORMATION has just reached Huntington, W. Va., of the lynching in Logan county of Jim Smith, a notorious colored desperado. Charles Serpell, aged twelve, a colored boy, was murdered and robbed by Smith, who was caught later. The officers having him were overpowered by a mob composed of negroes, who took the prisoner to the nearest tree and swung him up. Smith had previously killed three men.

FOREIGN.

JOHN PARNELL, brother of late Charles Stewart Parnell, has declined to contest Limerick for parliament.

As the result of a letter written by Michael Davitt on the connection between the labor cause and home rule, the Chronicle has espoused the Gladstonian policy.

DURING a gale along the Anglesea coast, a schooner was driven ashore near Beaumaris, Wales. All the crew except one man were saved.

A LONDON cable says: G. F. Grealrex, a wealthy citizen of Leamington, was shot and killed today by his son, who declared that he killed his father because his allowance of £1,000 a year was too small.

ROBERT W. WILCOX, the leader of the insurrection of 1889, V. V. Ashford and fifteen others have been arrested in Honolulu on the charge of being engaged in treasonable conspiracy against the government.

IT is rumored that the Rothschilds have undertaken to lend the Brazilian government £5,000,000 sterling an advance for the payment of its coupons and help to restore the normal standard of exchange.

In response to a letter from Archbishop Corrigan, of New York, requesting the pope to disavow Archbishop Ireland's school plan, the pope has sent a letter to the bishops of the province of New York reapproving the Faribault and Stillwater scheme.

IN the yacht race at Harwich, Eng., the Iverna was again the leader, beating the Meteor, formerly the Thistle, owned by the German emperor. Many Germans were among the spectators, and they showed considerable disappointment at the success of the Iverna. The weather was fine.

ADMIRAL MAYNE, M. P., after speaking at the Wellshire banquet, mansion house, was seized with a fit and fell over in his chair. He was carried out and revived. Half an hour later he started for home, to all appearances fully recovered. Half-way down stairs he fell and injured his head. He was taken unconscious to his home, where he died.

POLITICAL ECHOES.

CONGRESSMAN OUTHWAITE, of the Columbus (Ohio) district, has been nominated for the fifth term.

THE Republicans of the Ninth Indiana district have renominated by acclamation Congressman Daniel Waugh. Resolutions indorsing President Harrison were enthusiastically adopted.

THE RAILROADS.

A REPORT that after July 1 the Great Northern will assume control of all the telegraphic business on its system is denied. At present the Western Union rents the wires from the railroad under a ten years' contract which expires on that day.

THE Burlington statement for April shows gross earnings of $2,757,620, an increase as compared with the same period last year of $272,061. The net earnings show a deficit of $126,337, a decrease of $250,639. For the four months ended April 30 the gross earnings were $12,087,569, an increase of $2,545,883, while the net earnings were $644,370, an increase of $781,815.

THE TOILERS.

THE Durham coal mine owners and their employes held a meeting and ended the strike. The mine owners agreed to make a reduction of only 10 per cent in the wages of the men. Work was resumed immediately.

SPORTING MATTERS.

JOHN WARD is playing ball this year.

CHARLEY BENNETT is again ready to play ball for Boston.

GETZEIN, of the old Detroit pretzel battery, has been signed by St. Louis.

JACK CONLEY, the Indiana middle-weight defeated Jack Rifle, the Ohio champion, in eight hard-fought rounds, May 22.

GALVIN MULLANE, Keefe and Hutchinson, among the league ancients, are doing great work with the ball, especially Hutchinson.

HAMES, of the University of Michigan team has been attacked by fits of temporary mental aberration from overwork in his college course.

SLAVIN attributes his defeat to a lack of condition. He intends challenging Jackson again. He denies that his jaw was broken.

WILLIAM BRADY, trainer of Pugilist James Corbett, has rented the Redding cottage, Loch Arbour, on the north side of Dead lake, near Asbury Park, N. J., and will train Corbett there for his fight with Sullivan.

THE Olympic club has cabled to London, offering a purse of $15,000 to either O'Brien, Pritchard or Hall, to fight Fitzsimmons before the club in September at the same time as the Sullivan-Corbett contest.

IT is stated that a nobleman, presumably the earl of Lonsdale, has made an offer of £1,000 for a match between the winners of the Slavin-Jackson and the Sullivan-Corbett fight, exclusive of any other moneys that may be put up by clubs or backers, on condition that the fight takes place in Europe.

MISCELLANEOUS.

TEXAS fever is imported into South Dakota, and cattlemen threaten to keep Texas cattle out themselves, if the governor does not do so.

COSTER & MARTIN, Chicago brokers, fail in an attempt to corner the corn market, though they succeed in driving corn up from 46 cents to $1. Prices afterward fell to 55 cents and the brokers assign.

Chicago board of trade markets will soon be distributed free to the public. The contract between the board and the Western Union Telegraph company, arranging for the distribution of the quotations, has been signed. The contract is for one year.

The phenomenal Jersey Cow, Signal's Lily Flag, owned by Moore & Matthews, of Huntsville, Ala., has broken the record, having made 1,208 pounds 13 ounces of butter, with four days more to end her year's test. She is now the Jersey queen of the world.

THE monument to the unknown victims of the great flood was unveiled at Johnstown, Pa. Addresses were read by Gov. Pattison, ex-Gov. Beaver and Flood Commissioner Ogden. The monument is of granite and is surrounded by three figures representing faith, hope and charity.

CROWDS thronged about the tomb of Gen. Grant at Riverside park and heard the announcement made by Gen. Horace Porter that the fund for the erection of the Grant monument had been completed. The oration was delivered by Col. Charles Marshall, who was the chief of staff to Gen. Lee, the Confederate commander.

A young man supposed to be John Brandenburg dropped dead in the union depot at Chicago, as he was about to take a Panhandle train. Brandenburg registered at the Gault House from Minneapolis. In his pocket was a ticket to New Albany, Ind., and a letter with the post mark "Livingworth, Ind." The letter was signed "Pa and Ma," and contained an urgent request to come home.

THE Crockett clan, descendants of the immortal Davy, will celebrate the 106th anniversary of the birth of that deceased hero and statesman at Rutherford, Tenn., Aug. 17. The old double log house and homestead of Col. Crockett when he represented West Tennessee in congress and where he left his family when he went on his fatal mission to Texas, is still in good repair, and will be an interesting curiosity to the surviving relatives.

IT RESPECTS THE LAW.

The Lottery Company's Good Faith.

[Washington telegram to Globe-Democrat.]

The New Orleans Postmaster, Capt. S. M. Eaton, is a little smooth-faced man, honest and shrewd. He is a great friend of Warmoth, but he has backed up the Postmaster-General's efforts vigorously in the fight on the lottery.

The year before the warfare began Mr. Eaton says the Lottery Company bought at the New Orleans office $100,000 worth of stamps and stamped envelopes. For that same year the total revenue of the office was $416,000. So it appears that the Lottery Company contributed within $1000 of one-fourth of the entire revenue of the office.

By the action of the department in enforcing the anti-lottery law passed by Congress this postal revenue from the lottery company became a dead loss. Last year's receipts by the New Orleans office reached a total of $332,000. The day before Capt. Eaton started to this conference the lottery company posted in all its branch offices in New Orleans a notice to this effect:

"The supreme court of the United States having decided the anti-lottery postal law to be constitutional, it is hereby ordered and directed that no one in the employ of this company shall mail a letter which in any way refers directly or indirectly to the business of the lottery. It must be understood that this company will aid in the enforcement of this law."

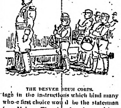
"I think that this notice is honest and sincere," said Capt. Eaton, "and the company means just what it says."

LAST FIELD DAY.

Associated Press Gossip on the Day Preceding the Big Convention.

Harrison Managers Succeed in Holding Their Delegates Well in Hand.

MINNEAPOLIS, June 7.—The sun goes down without any decisive gain by either faction. The Harrison managers have succeeded in holding their delegates well in hand without a break, while on the other hand the Blaine side has been reinforced by outside influence. Henceforth the shouting for the Plumed Knight is likely to become more and more vociferous, and is expected to give tone to the crowd in the hall. The Blaine managers hope this popular demand will serve as an excuse for some of the delegates instructed for Harrison to break away and vote for Blaine. There is no doubt that the president has an advantage in the instructions which bind many whose first choice would be the statesman from Maine. The situation is an embarrassing one to all such. Take the delegation from Iowa as an example. The state is a Blaine state, and yet a majority of the delegation will vote for Harrison. This is explained by Mr. Wheeler, who headed the ticket for governor, to be due to the supposition that Mr. Blaine would not be a candidate, and the management being left to those not heretofore active, care was taken to select those friendly to the administration. This has been interpreted to mean a rebuke to Mr. Clarkson—a mistake which was emphatically corrected to-day in the



THE DENVER DRUM CORPS.

UNANIMOUS RE-ELECTION OF MR. CLARKSON

to represent the state on the national committee. Then there is the Illinois delegation, which is understood to stand thirty-two for Harrison to sixteen for Blaine—a larger number for the latter than was at first supposed. Mr. Raymond and two district delegates refuse to be bound by instructions, which they claim were given when the conditions were different, and when it was supposed Mr. Blaine would not allow his name to be used. They feel absolved by the change, and claim that they have a right to judge of their duty in their relations to their constituents. George B. Swift, another Blaine friend in the Illinois delegation, construes his obligation differently. He will allow his instructions and vote for Harrison, although he would prefer to vote for Blaine. Sheriff James H. Gilbert will do the same; but if the president should fail of a nomination on the first ballot, Mr. Gilbert would be likely to change to Blaine. There are others in other delegations who would also change after a first ballot.

The Harrison managers are displaying first class generalship in keeping their forces pledged to vote for the president first. They confidently count on a nomination on the first ballot, and the figures they exhibit are confirmed from information from other sources. There is not a doubt that if the convention were to reach a vote to-morrow

MR. HARRISON WOULD WIN.

From the ranks of the great multitude of uncommitted harmony-seeking Republicans, there has suddenly sprung up a strong movement for McKinley as a compromise candidate. In Ohio alone does this movement fail to evoke the enthusiasm that is requisite to success. The Foraker and Sherman factional contests have long divided the Republicans of that state, and the fact that McKinley has recently been accused of favoring the Sherman element has provoked unfeigned hostility from certain of the Foraker delegates. Foraker states his belief that Sherman could receive the solid support of Ohio should the other states turn to the Buckeye delegation for a candidate, but he has made no public declaration as to the availability of McKinley. Should Sherman be elevated to the presidency, the Foraker men would almost certainly triumph in the election of their chief to the senate as his successor, while no special benefit would result from the elevation of McKinley. Despite the coldness with which the McKinley movement is received by certain of the Ohio delegates, however, there is no doubt the prevailing sentiment to-day is for the Buckeye governor, if the acrimony of the contest should demand a compromise candidate to save the party.

Of the midnight rumors one of the most interesting is that some of the delegates from the South which have been claimed for Harrison will record their votes for McKinley after the second ballot, as something in the nature of a feeler. This would be a repetition of history of the Chicago convention of four years ago.

Gov. McKinley said to-night, speaking of the reported defection of Southern delegates: "Yes, they will keep on getting votes from the South until the balloting begins."

A careful canvass made by Mr. Harrison's people this evening shows that he can lose fifty Southern votes and still be nominated on the first ballot.

RUSK NOT IN IT.

His Name Must Not Be Used Against President Harrison.

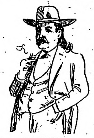
WASHINGTON, June 7.—In regard to the statement that an effort had been made to induce Secretary Rusk to accept second place on the presidential ticket, he gave the following explanatory card to the press to-day:

There is no truth in the statement whatever. My name cannot be used either singly or in combination against the president, and no friend of mine will suggest it.

MORE THAN CONFIDENT.

After the Hubbub the Harrison Leaders Feel Assured of Victory.

Late last night, with the heavy work of the day finished, although the crowds were still making Rome howl with their music and cheers, the Harrison managers expressed the same unbounded confidence in the renomination of the president that has marked all their utterances since the campaign opened in dead earnest.



S. S. MATTHEWS.

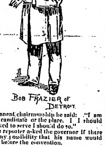
NOT A CANDIDATE.

McKinley Says That There Are but Two Men in the Field.

The arrival this morning of Maj. McKinley was a source of considerable satisfaction to the other leaders of the president's cause, who have been awaiting his advice and counsel with some degree of impatience, and who expect to profit by his personal popularity and influence and his wide acquaintance among the delegates.

"I am for Harrison," said Gov. McKinley, "and I think he will be nominated. Mr. Blaine's resignation has placed him in the field as a candidate. I think it will strengthen rather than weaken Harrison's chances. He has lost that attractiveness which accompanies uncertainty. I think Blaine's resignation at this time was a mistake. I think it has hurt him with the delegates and with the people. We could feel the effect of it as we came through the country. The announcement would draw a big crowd such as you have here, but where one man heard it he had an opportunity to think quietly, and I believe the general judgment of the people is that Mr. Blaine has made a mistake."

Gov. McKinley said he did not know enough to form a judgment of Harrison's strength. He did not know how the Ohio delegation was divided. Concerning the permanent chairmanship he said: "I am not a candidate for the place. I I should be asked to serve I should do so."



The reporter asked the governor if there was any possibility that his name would come before the convention.

"I am not in any sense a candidate," he said. "I will not even discuss it. I take it that only two names are before the convention and that the nomination will be made on the first ballot."

McKinley was accompanied to Chicago by Delegate at Large William H. Hahn, nearly all the state officers and five car loads of prominent Buckeye Republicans.

MORE BLAINEITES.

The Young Men's Republican Blaine Club of Cincinnati Arrives.

The Young Men's Republican Blaine club of Cincinnati arrived in the city this forenoon and with it came another blaze of Blaine enthusiasm. The famous Cincinnati band, said to be one of the finest bands in America, accompanied the club, and as ex-Gov. Foraker met the club at the depot there were hilarious cheers for the fiery orator of the Buckeye state and the band struck up an air of welcome. The march from the depot to the West was a triumphant one. Ex-Gov. Foraker in a carriage led the column, and as the white hatted young Republicans, several hundred strong, followed in majestic tread they were loudly cheered at every corner. At the head was a magnificent silk banner, emblazoned in gilt, bearing the portrait of James G. Blaine and containing loyal allusions to his eminent qualities of leadership. No less than 5,000 people were assembled at the West hotel when the column reached its destination, and the scene was one of grandeur as the club passed in front of the hotel, hoisted its banners and gave alternate cheers for Blaine and Foraker.

TWO FAKES.

Wild Stories About Both Harrison and Blaine Denied.

The following letter was made public here to-day on authority of B. C. Marsh of East St. Louis, a relative of Senator Cullom:

Shelby M. Cullom, Grand Pacific hotel, Chicago—Dear Sir: In case I am not nominated on the first ballot, you will please withdraw my name from the convention. Yours truly,

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Senator Cullom made the following statement in regard to the above:

I never heard of B. C. Marsh before. His statement is positively and absolutely without foundation—not the slightest foundation for it on earth. I have not received any letter or telegram from Harrison in six months. He has never communicated to me anything in regard to his desires in this matter. The whole thing is a sure fabrication. B. C. Marsh is no relative of mine—I never heard of him.

Swept Over the Falls.

MILWAUKEE, June 7.—John G. Loewe and his two sons, aged eight and ten years, were drowned yesterday at the Silver Creek dam, about three miles north of this city, on the Milwaukee river. Mr. Loewe, his two sons and Michael Schwartz, a market gardener, started out in a small boat on a fishing trip. There was a strong current in the river and before either was aware of the danger Loewe lost control of the boat. The party was swept over the falls and father and sons perished. Schwartz was hurled beyond the falls and succeeded in swimming ashore. Mr. Loewe was a miller, and was half owner of the flour mill which gets its power from the falls where he lost his life.

BLAINE RESIGNS.

The Great Premier Tenders His Resignation as Secretary of State.

His Resignation Accepted by the President an Hour After Its Receipt.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Secretary Blaine tendered his resignation as secretary of state to-day, and his resignation was at once accepted by President Harrison. The secretary's letter of resignation is as follows:

Department of State, Washington, June 4, 1892.—To the President: I respectfully beg leave to submit my resignation of the office of secretary of state of the United States, to which I was appointed by you on March 5, 1889. The condition of public business in the department of state justifies me in requesting that my resignation be accepted immediately. I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES G. BLAINE.

Secretary Blaine's resignation was taken to the White House by his private secretary, Mr. Dent, who placed it into the hands of the president. This was a little before 1 o'clock and within fifteen minutes after it was written. Soon after reading it, the president descended to the East room and held his usual Saturday afternoon reception to the public. There were about 200 people present, not one of whom, as he shook the president's hand, could have told from his cool and collected manner that anything unusual had happened. Indeed, an official of the mansion said the president really seemed to be in better spirits than usual and made felicitous replies to the greeting of some of his visitors.

THE RESIGNATION ACCEPTED.

The reception over, the president returned to his library and addressed a letter to Mr. Blaine accepting his resignation. This was given to Private Secretary Halford with instructions that it be delivered at once, and Mr. Halford thereupon took it over to Mr. Blaine's house and placed it in his hands. Thus the whole transaction did not consume more than an hour's time:

Executive Mansion, Washington, June 4, 1892.—To the Secretary of State: Your letter of this date tendering your resignation of the office of secretary of state of the United States has been received. The terms on which you state your desires are such as to leave me no choice but to accede to your wishes at once. Your resignation is therefore accepted. Very respectfully yours,

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

WILL NOT TALK.

President Harrison and Secretary Blaine Refuse to Be Interviewed.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Washington agent of the Associated Press called at Mr. Blaine's residence shortly after the correspondence had been made public, and asked him if he would not supplement it with an explanation. Mr. Blaine smilingly but deliberately replied:

"The correspondence explains itself, and I have not a word to add to it."

The president was next called upon and asked if he was willing to say anything in regard to it. His response, though made with entire courtesy of tone and manner, was equally emphatic:

"Nothing whatever."

The president and Mr. Blaine were seemingly in excellent spirits, and each of them, after declining to say anything for publication about the great event of the day or its effect upon the convention at Minneapolis, turned the conversation to other topics with marked composure.

Mr. Blaine's appearance and manner and tone of voice, however, were especially noticeable as indicative of a feeling of relief and satisfaction which made him even buoyantly cheerful.

CABINET OFFICERS RETICENT.

Secretary Foster did not show any excitement this afternoon over the news of Mr. Blaine's resignation, but soon after hearing it he was one of the most enthusiastic spectators at the Cincinnati-Washington base ball game. He declined positively to say anything for publication in regard to the political situation just at present, but intimated that he might be more communicative at a future day.

Attorney General Miller and Secretary Noble also declined to be interviewed on the subject.

Secretary Elkins visited the White House at 3 o'clock this afternoon, and was asked by a reporter what he thought of the political situation now that Secretary Blaine had resigned. He replied:

"Well, I think that Harrison will certainly be nominated on the first ballot and without any serious opposition, either. That's all I care to say at present."

It is understood that the unusual reticence on the part of the officers of the government in regard to-day's occurrence is due to a suggestion from the White House that the president preferred that the federal officers should avoid public comment on the subject.

A California Forger.

STOCKTON, Cal., June 6.—County Recorder J. F. Mosely has been missing since last Wednesday. He owes about $100,000, most of which is unsecured. Mosely has been a large speculator in land and gave notes in payment. Nine forged notes given by him have been discovered so far, aggregating over $60,000. Six notes aggregating $10,530 are signed by W. S. Hickey and three notes amounting to $21,000 are signed by A. H. McBride. Both men pronounce the signatures forgeries.

Movements of Money.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The exports of specie from the port of New York last week amounted to $2,358,715, of which $1,845,565 was gold, and $511,150 silver. Of the total exports $1,000,000 gold and $502,700 silver went to Europe, and $347,560 gold and $8,450 silver, went to the West Indies and South America. The imports of specie during the week were $50,300, of which $4,207 was gold and $46,100 silver. The steamer La Champagne, which sailed today, took $500,000 gold, consigned to Havre, and the steamer Saale took $1,000,000 gold to Bremen.

CONGRESS

Proceedings of the House and Senate.

FRIDAY, MAY 28.

SENATE.

Senator Wilson reported to the senate from the judiciary committee a bill providing that no person shall be excused from testifying in criminal cases based upon any alleged violations of the interstate commerce law for the reason that his testimony might tend to criminate himself or subject him to penalty. Exception, however, is made in the case of perjury.

The silver bill was laid before the senate at the close of the morning business. After some colloquy the bill was, by unanimous consent, postponed till Tuesday, when it will come up at 2 o'clock as the unfinished business. The senate proceeded to executive business.

HOUSE.

A bill to place iron ore and scrap iron on the free list and reduce the duties on manufactures of iron and other metals was introduced by Mr. Stevens, of Massachusetts.

A motion to take up the Hatch anti-option bill was defeated by a tie vote.

Mr. Harries, of Minnesota, from the committee on invalid pensions, reported to the house adversely the bill introduced by Mr. Newberry, of Illinois, relating to pensions granted to pensioners who are foreigners or not bona fide residents of the United States. Its object is to eliminate from pension rolls the names of all persons who are not citizens and bona fide residents of this country.

Mr. Herbert, of Alabama; from the committee on naval affairs, reported to the house with the recommendation that it pass the bill that he introduced increasing the number of enlisted men who may at one time be enlisted in the navy to 9,000.

SATURDAY, MAY 28.

SENATE.

Not in session.

HOUSE.

The legislative appropriation bill was reported to the house today. The most important feature, and which, without doubt, will lead to a bitter contest in the house, is that abolishing the Utah commission.

The total appropriation made by the bill is $21,682,752—$1,070,286 less than the estimates. The appropriation for the current fiscal year was $22,141,974, being $458,122 more than is recommended in this bill.

TUESDAY, MAY 31.

SENATE.

Pettigrew's bill granting the right of way to the Watertown, Sioux City & Duluth railway through the Sisseton reservation was reported favorably.

Pettigrew introduced a bill to make Sioux half-breed scrip assignable by the half-breeds or their legal representatives. The bill provides for confirming title of lands located with half-breed scrip.

Kyle presented an amendment which is to be offered to the sundry civil bill appropriating $15,000 for a fish hatchery in South Dakota.

Senator Davis's bill authorizing the secretary of the interior to fulfill certain treaty stipulations with the Chippewa Indians passed the senate today. A sum of $117,302 is appropriated. The relief is for the Chippewas of Lake Superior and the Mississippi.

Mr. Sherman delivered a speech in opposition to the bill for the free coinage of silver, he spoke for two and a half hours and at the close of his speech the senate adjourned.

HOUSE.

The postal appropriation bill came up today and Mr. Lind of Minnesota offered an amendment to increase the sum for rent, fuel and light for postoffices of the third class from $500,000 to $616,000. The amendment was lost.

The house adopted a resolution revoking all leaves of absence except those granted on account of sickness, and directing the sergeant-at-arms to telegraph absent members that their attendance is necessary for the transaction of business.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 1.

SENATE.

Davis introduced a bill providing that the pension law of Jan. 27, 1890, shall apply to persons who enlisted for 90 days with 15 days from the date of the muster-in of any 90 days organization.

The senate noted today, at the close of Mr. Sherman's two-days speech on the silver question, that no vote should be taken on that measure until after the Minneapolis Convention.

HOUSE.

The house, in committee of the whole, voted down a proposition increasing by $300,000 the appropriation for the free delivery service.

A joint resolution passed today authorizing and directing the president to proclaim a general holiday commemorating the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America, Oct. 12, 1892.

THURSDAY, JUNE 2.

SENATE.

Mr. Stewart spoke in favor of the silver bill to-day.

Senate bill to provide for holding terms of courts in the district of Montana was taken from the senate calendar and passed. Also senate bill to provide for two additional associate judges of the supreme court of the territory of Oklahoma. Also senate bills creating two additional land districts in Montana and to amend the statue relating to appeals to the supreme court.

The resolution offered by Mr. Turpie, calling for the correspondence with Hayti, Columbia and Venezuela in regard to reciprocity, was considered by the senate.

HOUSE.

In the house Mr. Hatch, of Missouri, reported the agricultural appropriation bill and it was ordered printed and recommitted.

In committee of the whole the house agreed to an amendment to the postoffice appropriation bill of providing for an additional appropriation of $200,000 for the Star route service.

A feature of the bill-making appropriations for the support of the agricultural department for the fiscal year of 1893, reported by Chairman Hatch to the house today, is that section providing that the monthly crop report issued on the 10th of each month shall be confined strictly to a statement of the percentage totals by states and full total without comment, or argument and that it shall be submitted to the secretary of agriculture, who shall officially approve the report before it is issued or published.

DEPEW'S SPEECH.

The Convention Hall Dedicated in an Appropriate Manner.

Hon. Chauncey M. Depew Delivers an Interesting Dedicatory Address.

The great convention hall in Minneapolis was dedicated Monday night in a very appropriate manner. The exercises consisted of vocal and instrumental music, and an interesting speech by Hon. Chauncey M. Depew. Gov. McKinley of Ohio was expected to address the crowd, but failed to do so. Mr. Depew spoke as follows:

About 1,800 hundred years ago, when Rome was mistress of the world, the Emperor Titus, who was counted the most enlightened and liberal of the Cæsars, celebrated universal conquest by the dedication of the Coliseum. Within its walls were gathered 80,000 spectators, who represented all that there was of the religion, politics, and the culture of the Roman empire. Neither eloquence, nor music, nor song were present. Captives who were the flower of the youth of every nation were forced into the arena as gladiators, and 5,000 of them slaughtered amid the plaudits of emperor, senators, priests and people. Thousands of Christian martyrs, men, women and children, were mangled, torn and devoured by wild beasts. Centuries have come and gone, most of them presenting only bloody records of suffering and sorrow. Millions have died upon the battle field and upon the scaffold, dynasties have been overthrown, empires disrupted, continents ravaged and the people kept in brutish ignorance and slavery; but, upon the Western hemisphere freedom from caste and tradition, the equality of all men before their Maker and the laws, the equal opportunities for everyone to rise to the highest places in the state, and to grasp the largest industrial and commercial prizes, the generous recognition of mutual obligations, one to the other, have created an empire greater in power and incalculably better in every attribute of beneficent sovereignty than Rome. The principles of its government have influenced and are influencing and liberalizing the institutions of every nation in the world.

I have spoken at the laying of corner stones of structures which were to be the homes of mighty newspapers which were to enlarge the opportunities of education upon the old scholastic basis, and upon the new and more practical principal of Manual training which were to concentrate the commercial activities of the continent; which were to provide for suffering humanity; but this is the first time I have ever attempted, before a vast audience composed of the members of all parties, to dedicate a hall for the uses of one party. I presume that here and there among these 20,000 auditors will be found a Democrat. I understand that the species is not entirely extinct in the State of Minnesota. But, as this is a Republican week, as I am here commissioned by the State of New York, in conjunction with its other representatives, to nominate the next president of the United States, no man and no woman could be present without expecting that the overwhelming sentiment of the hour should find expression upon this platform. So, if my Democratic friends are here simply as evidence of their existence, or as a protest, or in a spirit of martyrdom, or to find the means of saving grace, I ask them to hear me for my cause, and be silent that they may hear.

A prominent Democrat of Missouri remarked the other day that the difference between the parties was so unimportant that it did not make much difference to which one of them a citizen belonged. We who have come here as the representatives of the Republican party do not entertain any such idea. The history of our organization, its men and its measures of the past, are a part of its claim to popular support. The Democratic party neither through the mouths of its orators, nor the utterances of the conventions, nor the editorials of its newspapers ever refers to a Democratic statesman, since General Jackson, with one exception. They do speak of Ex-President Cleveland; sometimes from Albany and then again from Syracuse. Sometimes in the New York World and then again in the New York Sun. But it is difficult to put a statesman in the category of Jefferson or of Jackson, when that part of his party describe him as a "mountain of light" and the other part as a "mountain of beef." No mention is ever made of Polk, Pierce or Buchanan. No statesman of Democratic faith brings us in contact with the needs or the obligations of the present. The Republican party on the other hand, hangs upon the walls of its convention the portraits of its presidents, and knows, as the country knows, that their lives and achievements are the best history of the country. At the head of the list stands and the emancipation of the slaves—Abraham Lincoln. Then comes the great soldier, whose genius for war gathered the scattered fragments of power and welded them into an irresistable force—Ulysses S. Grant. Then comes the educator, soldier, statesman and orator, whose example is the theme of the college commencement and the aspiration of the American youth—James A. Garfield. Then that admirable officer and model gentleman—Chester A. Arthur. We honor and express our best wishes for long life and happiness for Rutherford B. Hayes, and whatever may be the outcome of this convention it will place upon record its pride in the wonderfully useful and patriotic administration of Benjamin Harrison.

THE "SAVIOR" OF THE REPUBLIC

Our Democratic friends seem to be remarkably deficient in presidential timber. It is Cleveland or Hill and nothing beyond. Cleveland and reform, or Hill without reform. That peerless journalist, Henry Watterson, has recently said that the Democratic party was between the devil and the dark blue sea. By which one of the three metaphors he intended to refer to Cleveland and which one to Hill, he did not say, but he felt that the Democratic voters who are seeking light and safety, in the condition of the colored convert when the preacher declared that he had hell on one side and damnation on the other. "Then," says he, "dis darkey takes to de woods." But the Republicans are embarrassed with riches. Ohio, the mother of presidents, and the mistress of offices, has upon this platform admirable qualifications for the chief magistracy in Gov. McKinley. She has a statesman whose creative mind has formulated the best legislation of the century, and whose name will live forever as one of the greatest of American statesmen—John Sherman. Iowa has the experienced and able Allison; Vermont, Edmunds; Michigan, Alger; Wisconsin, Rusk; Illinois, Cullom and Lincoln. I might exhaust your patience before I exhausted the list.

There are two names which at present belong to no state, but to the country. One, that singularly gifted statesman who has contributed so much to the improvements of our industrial possibilities, and the glory of American diplomacy—James G. Blaine. The other, that level-headed, wise and eloquent soldier, senator and president, who, upon the platform of the people, and in the chair of the Chief Magistrate has maintained the best traditions of the presidential office,—Benjamin Harrison. The Republican party is united in its policy in every part of the Union, except where here and there the bugle may give a shriller note, because there is more silver in the instrument. The Democratic party upon its industrial policy, and on the crucial questions of sound finance and honest currency. A Democratic voter, anxious to understand what his party believes, who reads first Cleveland with clear utterances on the one side, and the eight-tenths of his party leaders with their emphatic declarations on the other, and then studious Governor Hill's masterly balancing on the financial fence will be mentally in the inebriated condition of the alcoholized Chamois of the Swiss mountains, who jumps from jag to jag.

IS HOPELESSLY DIVIDED

It is eminently fitting and proper that this great hall, which was built to house the products of the factory and the farms of Minnesota, should be dedicated to the use of a national convention of the Republican party. The Republican party has solved the problem of the harmonious activities and the mutual prosperity of the farm and the factory. It represents that industrial energy and usefully employed capital which is so rapidly developing the resources of our country, with employment and good wages to the laborer and ever increasing homes to the thrifty and industrious. There is something sublime in the significance of this exhibition of a great people governing themselves. It can be equalled in grandeur only by the gathering from the sea and the land of those who will respond to the last trump when the assembled universe stands before the Great Judge.

Its deliberations will be watched with equal interest by friend and foe. They will be carefully studied by the lovers of liberty all over the world. May partisanship without passion, individual judgment, deferential to the views of others, and patriotic effort for the right so guide and control the action of this convention that its nominees and its principals shall command the support and receive the approbation of the American people.

MOSCOW'S CHIMING BELLS.

Reproduction of a World-Famed Novelty for Ringling Bros. Grand Parade.

Of all the cities of Russia, Moscow is the most renowned. In that city is located the famous "cracked bell," of history, and there also for centuries the sweet-toned bells of the Kremlin, have been the mecca of all the music lovers of Europe, The percentage of those who can visit so far a country as Russia is, however, small, and to exhibit in America a fac simile of the greatest curiosity in all Moscow, must be conceded a feat of startling magnitude But this is just what the Ringling Bros. have done, By long endeavor and the expenditure of vast sums of money they have accomplished the most incredible task of securing as one of the features of the World's Greatest Shows an exact representation of those far-famed cathedral chimes of the Kremlin tower, the music of which has been the inspiration of musicians and poets the wide world over. As an illustration of the magnanimity of this great circus management, these marvelous chimes are not enclosed under canvass, but are exhibited free and open upon the streets in the mammoth daily procession, while an accomplished manipulator, imported especially from Moscow, discourses the sweetest of sweet clanging melodies These famous bells will be seen, at Crookston June 16th during the visit of the Ringling Brother's colosol shows Cheap excursion rates on all railroads.

MODERN RACHELS AT THE WELL.

The Beautiful Madonna Faced Woman at the Fountains of Majorca.

One of my first inthrallments here was by the water carriers of Palma. They are not so naive as those of the Azores, so bold as those of Italian cities, so voluptuous as those of Lisbon, nor so languorous eyed and petite as those of Grenada and Seville. But I could not help thinking that here an artist would find hundreds of perfect models for a "Rachel at the Well." Tall, lithe, slender, but shapely maidens are these, and their dress, carriage, features and ways constantly increase one's admiration and interest.

For days I found myself, against all apparent reason, drawn to this fountain, and that, making all manner of mental excuse for what my own judgment scourged me with as an accusation of impropriety, attempt as I might to study all other features, become interested in the majestic cathedral or essay tramps into the interior, back I came to the fountains to contemplate these fair maidens and endeavor to unravel the strange spell they had cast upon me. In the first place, I never saw but one woman whose unrivaled art gave her the perfect carriage these women unconsciously own as nature's heritage. That woman was Sarah Bernhardt. Added to this was a conscious dignity and a not coyish but superb and stately modesty which lent positive radiance to every movement, gesture or look.

Their attire added a rare charm to all else. Their tiny feet were incased in dainty slippers. A skirt of loosely woven dark stuff fell in close and graceful folds about their long and shapely limbs. Over this lay a short napkinlike apron, spotlessly white. A dark bodice, low at the neck, displayed exquisite shoulders and breast, and its sleeves stopping at the elbow, where an edging of white was seen, showed the lower half of beautifully molded arms. The head is bare, covered by a wealth of hair coiled low and heavily in the neck, giving in the sunlight the blue black luster of the grape. The forehead is strangely wide for the Latin type, and the eyebrows, which almost meet, have the low, wide arch.

The eyes are large, luminous, melting, sad, and never were seen eyelashes of such length, and blackness on other women. The nose is finely chiseled and the nostrils are thin and have a perceptible tremor. An oval chin, dazzling teeth, a mouth that suggests the hot blood of the south, chastened by endless repression, with lips of crimson, complete a face of Madonnalike depth and feeling. This face looks out of a filmy white kerchief drawn close beneath the chin, with points fastened with a rose or a trifle of jewelry to the hair at either side of the head, while its longest point covers the neck and breast to the girdled waist below.

In processions of a dozen to a score, wending their way to and from, or when loitering beside the fountains, they form groupings against the quaint old walls beneath the lonely palms fit for Tadema's master hand. Their burdens are never carried upon their heads. The bottom of the empty or filled ewer always rests upon the right hip, the handle against the carrier's breast, and her half bared white arm is flung carelessly around the vessel just below its mouth.—Palma Cor. Chicago News.

A Remarkable Clock.

Japan possesses a remarkable timepiece. It is contained in a frame three feet wide and five feet long, representing a noonday landscape of great beauty. In the foreground plum and cherry trees and rice plants appear in full bloom; in the rear is seen a hill, gradual in ascent, from which apparently flows a cascade, admirably imitated in crystal. From this point a threadlike stream meanders, encircling rocks and islands in its windings, and finally losing itself in a far off stretch of woodland. In a miniature sky a golden sun turns on a silver wire, striking the hours on silver gongs as it passes. Each hour is marked on the frame by a creeping tortoise, which serves the place of a hand. A bird of exquisite plumage warbles at the close of each hour, and as the song ceases a mouse sallies forth from a neighboring grotto and scampering over the hill to the garden is soon lost to view.—Iron.

The Death Battle.

A correspondent tells this interesting snake story: "A few days ago I sent two boys to the spring after water, and in a moment one of them came running back in great fright, saying that he saw a stinging rattlesnake with rattlers on his head and a horn on his tail, and one-half of the snake was black and the other half spotted. I went with them to see the monster, and when we got there a black snake about five feet long was swallowing a rattlesnake about 2 1-2 feet long. The rattler was rattling with all his might, while his colored brother was swallowing with all his power. We left them, and went back in about an hour and both were dead."—Great Divide.

The Prose of Motion.

Aunty—So you took your first dancing lesson today? Did you find it difficult?

Wee Nephew—No'm, it's easy 'nough. All you have to do is to keep turning 'round and wiping your feet.—Good News.

IT REALLY RAINED.

Cuba Is a Country Where Water Comes Down In Great Shape.

It was in Cuba, and I was in a railway car journeying from Matanzas to Havana. It was springtime, and the beginning of the rainy season was at hand. The people were looking forward to the first rain as—I was going to say, as we do to the first snow, but that does not parallel their expectation, for they know that when it once begins to rain there is an end to their liberty.

The first intimation that I had of the likelihood that something was going to happen came from my seeing a dense jet black cloud over against the southern horizon. All around me lay a peaceful and prosperous scene. Beside the track were some hutlike negro cabins, with black women seated in the doorways, and funny little half naked piccaninnies playing in the dirt.

But the black cloud grew bigger and blacker. It was advancing toward us with very great and evident speed, and presently I saw that it was all fretted with bolts of lightning and toothed with white darts of fire. Never before or since did I see such a dreadful display of the electrical force. The bolts were so close together that it seemed as if they must destroy every living thing in the pathway of the cloud. When the black and terrible mass in the sky came still nearer it seemed no longer toothed or fringed, but it spat the lightning with vicious force straight down upon the forest beneath it.

Next came a sucking, roaring sound of wind, the sky grew black, and with the last glimmer of daylight, before it vanished into night, I saw the giant palm trees throw up their huge fanlike arms like mortal creatures that were hurt and panic stricken. Then the storm burst over the train, and through its din I heard the crashing of the falling palm branches that had been snapped off and thrown to the earth.

In another minute the worst of the darkness was over, and in the half light that remained I saw such rain as I never had dreamed could fall from the sky. It did not appear to fall in drops or in "ropes," as I once heard an Englishman say of a severe downpour of rain, but it descended in vast, thick sheets, layer upon layer. You could see one thickness tumbling after the other as so many great plates of glass might be thrown down. It grew lighter still, and I saw that the beautiful palms were wrecked and were still writhing in their misery, tossing up their broad hands and thick arms, many of which were broken and disjointed, while others had been snapped off.

At the foot of the palms there was no longer any ground. The surface of the earth had become a lake. The water stood high in the doorways of negro cabins. The litter of palm branches floated about on the rain pelted water. I remember waiting to see the train demolished by the lightning, but it was not, nor could I see that the fiery bolt had harmed anything around us. Another minute passed—perhaps not more than five minutes had passed since the shower began—and the daylight came back grandly, disclosing the great flood everywhere.

A Cuban, sitting on the other side of the car from me, passed me his cigarette box, and as he did so he said in a labored effort to be polite in a foreign tongue: "I t'ink it will rain. W'at you t'ink?"—Julian Ralph, in St. Nicholas.

Not "Micrococci."

Professor Brieger, of the Berlin Medical institute, was busily at work in his laboratory, surrounded by a formidable array of chemical and bacteriological utensils. A distinguished foreign physician called upon him and watched his absorbing labor with interest.

The professor's attention seemed to be anxiously, but still hopefully, concentrated on a vessel which was enveloped in smoke and steam.

"Guess what I am boiling here," said the professor.

The visitor began to enumerate the entire scale of micro-organisms.

"Micrococci?"

"No."

"Sonococci?"

"No."

"Spirochetæ?"

"No."

"What, then?"

"Sausages," replied Brieger.—Exchange.

Aristocratic Kentucky People.

"If there be an aristocracy in America," said J. E. Parish, of Versailles, Ky., "it is in the blue grass region of Kentucky. A person who has never made an extended visit to that section has no conception of the delights of country life in America. In the west and north the people are gradually flocking to the towns and cities because of the hardships of rural life. But this is not true of the blue grass region. There are no big cities there. All our people want is a postoffice and a few stores in which to make their purchases. They live on their ancestral estates like English dukes and princes. The country is so traversed by turnpikes, which are superior to your city paved streets, that the problem of transportation of their farm products to market is reduced to the minimum and neighborhoods are brought into close and intimate touch."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A Peculiar Well.

A phenomenon is observed in an artesian well near Edensburg, Mass. The well spoken of is down about 200 feet, but the water in it is still 160 feet below the surface. The peculiarity consists in the fact that when there is no wind the water is that distance below the curbing; when there is a high wind flowing water pours out of the pipe.—Philadelphia Ledger.

MISTOOK THE MAN.

Naturally, Therefore, Matters Were Pretty Lively for Awhile.

"Read something the other day about a case of mistaken identity," said E. H. Shaw to an Indianapolis Journal man.

"I had one once myself."

"Anything remarkable?"

"Well, yes; it made an impression on me that lasted a good while. Several years ago, when I was much frisker than I am now, I boarded at the St. Charles Hotel on Illinois street. It was then kept by a man named Hart, who had formerly been a professional wrestler.

"Hart took a great deal of interest in me, and every now and then would grab me to show how easily a man could be drowned if one only knew how. He would come up, reach around my neck, lift my chin so that I would be at his mercy, and then ask 'How's that?'

"One day I was walking along Virginia avenue, near Washington street, when I saw Hart standing on the sidewalk talking to another man. His back was turned towards me, and I thought to myself. 'Shaw, here's your opportunity.'

"I walked toward the unsuspecting man, brought my hands down on his shoulders with all my might, and, lifting my knee at the same time, raised him from the sidewalk as I asked, 'How's that?'

"Here Mr. Shaw stopped to wipe the beaded perspiration from his brow.

"Go on with the story," said an interested listener.

"Well, there was an awful fight right there, and I was in it, or thought I was for a little while. The man was mad all the way through, and wouldn't give me any chance to explain.

"He got through finally, and then I told him I was mistaken in the man; that I had thought it was Mr. Hart. I didn't ask his pardon; that was quite unnecessary after what had occurred. That's the most remarkable case of mistaken identity of which I have any knowledge."

Presenting Arms to a Cat.

Some fifty years ago a very high English official died in a fortress in India at a place that is one of the centers of Brahmanic orthodoxy, and at the moment when the news of his death reached the sepoy guard at the main gate a black cat rushed out of it. The guard presented arms to the cat as a salute to the flying spirit of the powerful Englishman, and the coincidence took so firm a hold of the locality that up to a few years ago neither exhortation nor orders could prevent a Hindoo sentry at that gate from presenting arms to any cat that passed out at night.

Queer Find in a Tree.

Some extraordinary finds have at times been made within the trunks of trees. A woodman, for instance, when engaged in splitting timber for rail posts in a wood in Scotland discovered in the center of a large wild cherry tree a living bat of a bright scarlet color, which he foolishly allowed to escape from supersitious fears that it was a "being not of this world." The tree showed a small cavity in the center, where the bat was inclosed, but it was perfectly sound and solid on each side.

Blood Poisoning

Mrs. Mary E. O'Fallon, a very intelligent lady of Piqua, Ohio, was poisoned while assisting physicians at an autopsy 5 years ago, and soon terrible ulcers broke out on her head, arms, tongue and throat. Her hair all came out. Her husband spent hundreds of dollars without any benefit. She weighed but 78 pounds, and saw no prospect of help. At last she began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla and at once improved: could soon get out of bed and walk. She says, "I became perfectly cured by Mrs. M. E. O'Fallon.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

and am now a well woman. I weigh 128 pounds eat well and do the work for a large family. My case seems a wonderful recovery and physicians look at me in astonishment, as almost like one raised from the dead."

Swift's Specific.

The old-time simple remedy from the Georgia swamps and fields has gone forth to the antipodes, astonishing the skeptical and confounding the theories of those who depend solely on the physician's skill. There is no blood taint which it does not immediately eradicate. Poisons outwardly absorbed or the result of vile diseases from within all yield to this potent but simple remedy. It is an unequaled tonic, builds up the old and feeble, cures all diseases arising from impure blood or weakened vitality. Send for a treatise. Examine the proof.

CHAPTER XVIII.

I had written a few hurried lines from Sacramento, telling Sir. Edmund that Lola had taken the Great Hesper, and intended to restore it as soon as the snow had melted, and allowed us to reach the cavern in which it was concealed. In answering this letter, he wrote:

"After reading your good news, Edith and I went for a stroll through the park, where we encountered poor Van Hoeck, whose woe-begone appearance appealed once more to Edith's heart, and mine also. 'Why,' she asked, 'should we any longer treat him as a possible scoundrel, now that the Braces admit having taken the diamond?' We turned back, overtook Van Hoeck, and told him what had happened. The poor wretch was overcome with emotion, not because of the possible recovery of the lost diamond—of which he entertains strong doubt,—but in being once more treated as an honest man."

Now, did Van Hoeck deserve to be treated as an honest man? That was the question. I will give here Brace's account of what occurred in the woods, and, as near as I can, in his words:

"When we parted company in the woods," he said, "I hunted around for Israel, as was my intention, you will remember. I found him crawlin' like a varmint of a reptile through the ferns. I fetched him into a convenient spot, and, says I, 'Israel,' I ses, 'you air goin' to prophesy what has gone of the Great Hesper. It's not a hard job, if you give yer mind to it. 'Tain't nothin' near so hard as prophesying what's goin' to be.'

"I had hold on him by the arm. All of a suddent, he flings himself round grapples on to me, and 'fore I'm aware of anythin' I'm on my back, and his two thumbs is inter my windpipe. I never thought he'd got it inter him. — such strength and agility,—and I'll allow he would have strangled me hef the Kid hadn't come up in the nick and frightened him by singing out for you. I did not lose any time, and when I had shown I was as strong as him, with a little bit to spare, I got him to prophesy. He wanted a plaguey lot of perswadin,' and he got it; but when he couldn't stand no more on it, he let on that it was inside of a rotten willer, alongside a pond in the holler. I didn't know no pond, but I ketched sight of the Kid sneakin' off, end I jest sneaked after her, takin' Israel along, case he mighter made a mistake in his jography. There was no walking fast with Israel over the brambles, end I lost sight of the Kid; but it stood to reason that the holler was downhill, so down I went the way the Kid had gone, near as I could reckon, and there was the pond, and the rotten willer, all he had prophesied, and there at the foot of the willer was the empty case but nairy diamond. I cocked my eye around end once more I ketched sight of the kid sneakin' off I went for her, nat'rally, but I might jest as well have went from a tom-tit. She got clean outer sight about the same time's I got outer wind, but Israel wouldn't give up end so we hunted about for the Kid until we couldn't neither of us hunt any more; then we sit down in committee, and, arter pretty warm discussion, we came to the unanimous conclusion thet, fur the sake of every one consarned, we hed better get rid of the leather case and say nothin' about it. I laid it down that the Kid had not took the diamond for mere mischief. She knew, in her own greaser way, that the thing had a power in it to bring happiness to the owner,—like a charm. She see that it clothed us decent and lodged us comfortable, and that, while it separated you and her, it brought you and squire's daughter together. And we laid it mutual that the Kid hed too much gumption to pitch the thing away, but would hide it somewhere where she could fetch it bimeby. Now, hef we'd done otherways, what would have happened? Van Hoeck ud have declared it was all a lie, and wild horses wouldn't er dragged the secret outer the Kid. The only hope of gettin' back the Hesper was ter let her play her game and watch her close."

A copy of this statement I sent to Sir Edmund, and I added:

"Either Van Hoeck is possessed of supernatural clairvoyance, or he must have been in complicity with the man who took the diamond from me."

"Can that man have been the 'Furnival' who obtained the address of Brace and myself from you?"

For my own part, I doubted Van Hoeck's innocence. Perhaps I may have been biased in forming an opinion of him by my jealous dislike of the relation he had formed with Edith. She was the only living creature Van Hoeck had spoken well of in my hearing; and I fancied he was playing a hypocritical part to obtain the pleasure of her society and friendship.

By the return mail, Sir Edmund wrote:

"I felt it right to read that part of your letter referring to the robbery to Van Hoeck, who for the last week has been an accepted visitor here, and, I may add, the object of Edith's sympathetic commiseration. He declared upon his oath that there had been no struggle between himself and Brace, and that no statement had been extorted from him by the violent means indicated; that when you left, he felt his his way to the road, and waited there. Brace came and undertook to lead him home. He remembers stopping on the way while Brace asked him if he thought you had really been robbed of the diamond. He knew nothing of the leather case, which Brace might have concealed in the manner you describe, without his perception. After this explanation, he said that he must once more relinquish our friendship, until all doubt is cleared up. 'But,' he added emphatically, as he was about to leave us, 'if only a part of this story is true,—if the girl got possession of the diamond, hid it, and should restore it to Brace and Thorne, they will make away with it and you will never see any one of them again.'"

"If Van Hoeck is not the very old' un himself,' said the Judge, when I showed him this letter, "he's hand in hand with him."

We asked Lola if she had recognized the man who dropped from the oriel window.

"No," she replied, "the night was too thick; but he was about the size of the man I saw the night before going from one window to the other in the left-hand side of the house."

One morning Brace said to me:

"I've had my suspicions on it for some time; but now I'm sure on it. We're being watched."

I asked him what reason he had for this belief.

"My reason is this," he replied. "The one-legged nigger as comes here for scraps give one of the house-helps harf-a-dollar this morning. It looked like he'd been buying up your silver spoons, so I jest had the rascal searched; but there warn't nairy thing on him but varmin. Lay your life, sir, that nigger didn't give half-a-dollar for nothing. We've got to keep our eyes open!"

"You think he is a spy, paying the helps for information with respect to our movements?" I said.

"I do,—jest that."

"Why?"

"Why?" echoed Brace, drawing a long breath, "because it is jest three weeks since Van Hoeck learnt that we are going to get back the Great Hesper, and he found an excuse for quittin' the locality of Monken Abbey."

CHAPTER XIX.

As the spring advanced, Brace turned his eyes daily to the mountain tops. On the first of May he said he would have a day or two off, and "jest have a look round at things."

On the seventh he returned.

"The time's come," he said; "the snow's going away sharp, and the rocks is already squittering down, but, glory be, the hole's open. All we've got to pray for now is that the Kid'll listen to the v'ice of reason. Leave her to me!"

As we were sitting at table he said, in a casual way:

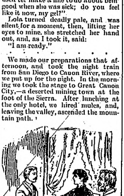
"I was up to my old lot in Petersville for a bit of a refresher during my holiday, sir; and you've no idea how nice the old place do look. Now, supposin', as we ain't got nairy blessed thing to do for the next week, we kinder take a look around arter that stone we used to think such a lot of,—jest for curiosity like,—hey? The Kid used ter make a fine to do about bein' good when she was sick; do you feel like it now, my gel?"

Lola turned deadly pale, and was silent for a moment, then, lifting her eyes to mine, she stretched her hand out, and, as I took it, said:

"I am ready."

. . . .

We made our preparations that afternoon, and took the night train from San Diego to Canon River, where we put up for the night. In the morning we took the stage to Great Canon City,—a deserted mining town at the foot of the Sierra. After lunching at the only hotel, we hired mules, and, leaving the valley, ascended the mountain path.



"I AM READY."

Water streamed freely down the mountain path upon the lower slopes; but our difficulties only commenced when we reached the line where the half-melted snow made the rocks treacherous even to the feet of the sure mules. We had four hours of terribly rough and dangerous traveling before we reached Petersville,—the most wretched collection of rotten shanties I ever saw.

Not a living creature was to be seen. There was not a foot mark in the slushy snow which still lay upon the ground; it seemed completely abandoned, But the Judge led the way through the deserted rows of tumbledown huts, and presently pointed to one from which a column of blue smoke was ascending through the clear air.

We were on a plateau in the very heart of the mountains. All around the rugged peaks rose high into the still air, tinted with deep purple in the shadow, and the loveliest rose pink where the sunlight fell upon the snow. Where the snow had slid away from the precipitous sides, the granite, streaming with water, glittered in the bright rays as if it were encrusted with jewels.

As we came to a halt, waiting for a response to Brace's call, the silence was broken by a prolonged roar like that of distant thunder, as some rock, loosened by the frost, broke away and hurtled down the unfathomed canon.

A man came from the building, which still bore faint trace of the word "Hotel" on its facade, and, greeting Brace with the air of an old acquaintance, said he had got everything aired, and a supper all ready to put down to the fire. Brace had seen the necessity of preparing him for our reception: A couple of rooms had been made as decently comfortable as might be expected. We left Lola there, and strolled out while the dinner was preparing.

The end of the town abutted upon a wide stream, that was tearing and whirling along among the gigantic boulders that marked its course, toward a black cleft which divided a towering mountain in two. Fantastic as are the effects which characterize the heights of the Sierra, I had seen nothing comparable to this. It was as if some mighty hand had split the mountain in half.

"I have know'd the time," said the Judge impressively, "when both sides of this river was lined with miners, and every one on 'em worth his thousands of dollars!"

I had no sympathies with the past glories of the stream. My mind was filled with admiration of the savage beauty of the scenery around.

"Thar," said the Judge, flinging a piece of wood, part of an appliance which might have washed gold untold, into the turbid and rushing waters; "thar, bar stoppages, that'll pass the Great Hesper in less time than it will take us to get back to the hotel."

"Is it through that cleft we have to go?"

"Ah, sir, and down to the very innards of it."

I was looking toward the dark chasm with a feeling of awe, when Brace touched my elbow.

He was dragging at his chin tuft, his lower lip protruding, his heavy brows bent. He pointed slowly to a trace in the snow.

"The man from the hotel been down here,—is that what you mean?" I asked.

"It ain't him, sir, that mark. Look at it,—it's a one-footed man! end!" he added, striding forward and looking closer,—"end it's a left-footed man! end it's a one wooden-legged man! and then, with conviction, "It's the durned nigger that's been spyin' after us. Leave him to me. He ain't goin' to spy us to-morrow not hef I knows it.

I approached the marks, and perceived that beside the foot was the round hole made by a wooden stump.

After dinner, Brace looked to the pine torches he had brought up, and spent the evening in drying them carefully, whilst chatting with the man of the hotel. He said not a word about our discovery, nor did the man speak of any visitor being in the house. This with a certain cunning look in his red eyes, alarmed me.

We were called at four o'clock the next morning, Brace saying that we must start early, in order to get our job done in time to get back to a comfortable dinner, but in reality, I believe, to preclude the possibility of being followed. When we had finished our breakfast, Brace, taking the hotel man by the button, said:

"Old pal, you hev got a stranger staying in this house, I reckon."

The man scratched his ear, looked up and looked down, and then at a jerk of his button blinked up at Brace, and said:

"Wal, I allow I hev."

"A wooden-legged stranger, I think?"

The same shuffling, and then:

"Wal, I allow he hev got a wooden leg."

"A nigger. I believe."

"Wal, a nigger accordin' to appearances."

"I kinder fancy he's in the little chamber over there. 'Twarn't a swine I heard gruntin', were it?"

"You kin inspect him, if you like."

"I will, after which hef I take a fancy to nailin' of him up for four and twenty hours for the same number of dollars, you will allow me the use of a hammer and some three-inch pints?"

"I will do that," said the man; and, the two having shaken hands on the bargain, he went off to get the articles required, while Brace looked into the room.

"It's the same," said Brace, and turning up his sleeves, he proceeded to nail up the door in a business-like manner.

"I don't think he will trouble us unless he kin afford to make it worth the old pal's while to let him out," said Brace, as we started from the house, "end even then he won't get much of a chance, seein' as no mortal man can get down that hole without a light, and we've got eyes or to see hef a light is follerin' on us."

TO BE CONTINUED.

How the Nations Laugh.

All the world laughs, though the nations have different ways of showing mirth. The Chinese can't laugh as hearty or as expressive as the European or American. It is oftener a titter than a genuine outburst of merriment. There is little character or force in it. As for the Arabian laugh, we hear little of its hilarious ring through the ages of mirth in the old world. The Arab is generally a stolid fellow, who must either see good reason for a laugh, or be surprised into it. In Persia a man who laughs is considered effeminate, but a free license is given to female merriment.

One reads of the "grave Turk" and the "Sober Egyptain," but it is not recorded that they have never moments of mirth, when the fez bobs or the veil shakes under pressure of some particularly "good thing." In Mahomet himself, Christian writers have noted cordiality and jocoseness, and they say there is a good ringing laugh in the prophet with all his seriousness.

An American traveler in Europe remarks the Italian laugh as languid, but musical; the German as deliberate, the French as spasmodic and uncertain, the upper class English as guarded and not always genuine, the lower class English as explosive, the Scotch of all classes as hearty, and the Irish as rollicking.—From the Detroit Free Press.

The Olive in the South.

The olive grows readily in the southernmost States of the Union, and though a slow tree in coming into bearing, it keeps fruitful during the life of of olive oil as a food has many generations of men. The use never been thoroughly established in this country. We have been satisfied with the more easily procured and grosser animal fats. Olive oil, unlike lard and tallow, does not contain products which tend to develop uraemic diseases. For most stomachs it is more readily digestible, and the taste for it may be quickly acquired. The only doubt as to olive oil arises from the dishonesty of venders. It is quite possible that chemical experts may succeed in purifying cotton-seed oil so that it may become a cheap and wholesome substitute for olive oil. The chief objection to cotton-seed oil is in the disagreeable odor evolved in the process of cooking. But in the meantime the farmers of the South, who are convinced of the advantage of a diversification of their crops, should plant olive groves, which in seven years would begin to bear and would need but little further attention.—Philadelphia Record.

A Queer Exodus.

Wife—"Dear me, it's a rainy Saturday, and I'll have the children racing about the house all day and breaking things."

Husband—"What have you usually done on rainy Saturdays?"

Wife—"I generally sent them in to play with the neighbors' children, but all I knew have moved away."

SHE WAS DISOBLIGING.

A Chaperon That Did Not Fill the Bill for Comfort.

There are two young people well known to the men about town who feel mutually indignant at the treatment accorded them by the young lady's chaperon a few days ago. The young man went on the evening in question to call on the young lady. For a while the chaperon did not bother them, but about 9 o'clock, when the chairs of the young people meandered from points on opposite sides of the room to a point equally distant from each near the centre of the room, the greater distance having been traversed by the young man in a ratio of 4 to 1, the chaperon came in. The chairs retreated, but the chaperon remained in the room. She said she was looking for her Bible. The young people sent longing glances across the room, but the chaperon kept looking for her Bible.

At last she found it and went out, and the young couple were happy for one minute. Then chaperon came back. Dagger glances met her, but with an angelic smile she placed an arm chair in front of the door and soon fell asleep. She snored hard and the young people were happy—for a time. But when 12 o'clock came the young man wanted to go home, but could not go without waking the chaperon. This he was afraid to do. Matters became desperate. While the young lady held open the window he vaulted to the street, without hat or overcoat. The girl being unable to get into the corridor to get them for him he went home without them and sent a messenger after them the next morning.

The Ugly Duckling.

A well-known writer calls attention to the fact that however attractive a "plump, well-filled out, pretty little girl of 12 or 13" may become, she rarely, if ever, develops into a beauty. "It is" he goes on to say, "the girl who is angular and bony, whose limbs are long and whose bones are sharp, whose face is peaked and fleshless, whose elbows and shoulders are pointed, and whose hands and feet seem to possess length without breadth, that sometime surprises every one by rising to a celestial power of feminine grace and beauty." "I have often noticed that," said a lady who had read aloud these comments. "I went to school with Lady—, whom we considered the most beautiful American girl in Europe at one time, and when she was 15 she quite filled Trollope's description. I shall never forget my first sight of her a half dozen years later. It was at the opera and she was in Mrs.—'s box, surrounded by half a dozen men. "Who is that lovely creature?" I asked my hostess, and I was amazed beyond description when I heard it was Mollie—, with whom I had once been so intimate. It is quite impossible. I asserted, but I was wrong. It was none other than herself, but transmogrified, glorified in a way that was simply incomprehensible.

Valuable Advice.

Among the ludicrous experiences of "green Easterners" in California, where so many things are unlike the ways and circumstances to which they are accustomed in the East, the following occurrence no doubt deserves an honorable place:

A Vermont lady had removed from her native place to the beautiful California city of Oakland. She found life there very agreeable at first, but before long she began to experience distressing physical sensations. She became nervous, fretful and very uncomfortable; she lost much of her sleep at night, and much of her happiness by day.

At last she resolved to consult a physician, and did so, calling to see a bright light in the profession. She gave him a very full account of her symptoms, and then asked:

"What is it that ails me," doctor?"

"Fleas, ma'am!" answered the doctor.

For this information the Vermont lady paid the doctor's minimum consultation fee of five dollars, and went her way, but not rejoicing.

Groundless Fears.

It is not very long since a lady living in Harlem rushed into the house of one of the most fashionable families and said to the lady of the house "I have just heard that your son has been doing something terrible."

Merciful heavens! What is it?"

"He is accused of forging a check."

"O, is that all? How you scared me! I was afraid that he had been eating meat during the lenten season."

Great Fun.

Suburban Boy—"Pop, won't you get me a sword, and a drum, and gun, to play soldier with?"

Pop—"I'll tell you how we'll fix it. We'll pretend every blade of grass on the lawn is an armed foe, and then you charge on them with Gatling swords and cut their heads off. Won't that be fun?"

"Indeed it will. But I haven't any Gatling swords."

"No, but a lawn mower will do nicely."

Johnny's Reformation.

Mother—"I am glad little Johnny is at last beginning to realize the necessity of cleanliness. He has been up stairs washing himself for nearly an hour."

Little Dick (breathlessly)—"Mamma, Johnny wants you to give me a penny to buy a pipe."

"A pipe?"

"Yes'm. We just broke th' other one, an' can't blow any more bubbles."

A Poor Contrivance.

Mamma—"You are not satisfied with your new doll? Why, it creeps and says 'mamma,' and opens and shuts its eyes, and I don't know what all."

Wee Pet—"It's fingers doesn't move, an' its tongue doesn't wag, an' it never frows up."

A Great Head.

Wife, preparing for a dinner party: "Hubby, dear, I think I have too little meat for twelve persons."

Husband: "Then I'll step out and invite a thirteenth; that will spoil the appetite of the lot."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured,

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

HARRISON AND REID

Selected by the Republican Convention as Their Standard Bearers.

Short Resume of the Proceedings of the Minneapolis Convention.

FIRST DAY.

The tenth Republican National Convention was called to order in Minneapolis, Tuesday morning by Chairman J. S. Clarkson of the Republican National executive committee. After prayer by Rev. Dr. Brush, the call for the convention was read by Hon. H. De Young of California.

Mr. Clarkson announced that the executive committee had chosen Hon. J. Sloat Fassett of New York for temporory chairman, a vote being taken he was elected unanimously and on taking the chair made a short, eloquent speech which was frequently interrupted by outbursts of applause.

Hon. T. B. Reed of Maine was called for, and delivered a very interesting speech.

M. Clarkson announced the recommendations of the executive committee as to the other temporary officers, and a vote being taken they were approved.

The committees were then announced and the convention adjourned.

SECOND DAY.

The convention was called to order by temporary chairman Fassett. Bishop Whipple of Minnesota opened the proceedings with prayer.

The committee on credentials announced that they were not ready to report, and were granted further time.

The committee on permanent organization recommended for permanent chairman Hon. Wm. McKinley and for permanent secretary C. W. Johnson of Minnesota. The recommendations were unanimously concurred in.

Gov. McKinley was escorted to the chair and delivered an eloquent address.

The committee on rules reported a code of rules for the government of the convention which were adopted after some discussion.

A number of memorials and resolutions were referred to the committee on resolutions after which the convention adjourned.

THIRD DAY.

The proceedings were opened up with prayer by Dr. Brush.

The committee on credentials announced that they would be ready to make a report at 8 o'clock in the evening.

Several resolutions were referred to the committee on resolutions.

A motion was made and carried that a recess be taken until 8 o'clock in the evening.

EVENING SESSION.

After the call to order by President McKinley, Mr. Depew took the floor and in a very neat and appropriate speech made a motion that the congratulations of the convention be extended to Col. Thompson, it being his 83rd birthday. It was carried unanimously and Col. Thompson made a fitting response. Col. Thompson has been a delegate at every national convention of the party.

The committee on credentials presented a majority and a minority report.

After prolonged and spirited discussion the majority report was adopted.

The committee on resolutions made their report on platform of principles which was adopted:

THE PLATFORM.

The following is the platform:

The representatives of the Republicans of the United States, assembled in general convention on the shores of the Mississippi river, the everlasting bond of an indestructible republic, whose most glorious chapter of history is the record of the Republican party, congratulate their countrymen on the majestic march of the nation under the banners inscribed with the principles of our platform of 1888, vindicated by victory at the polls and prosperity in our fields, workshops and mines, and make the following declaration of principles:

We reaffirm the American doctrine of protection. We call attention to its growth abroad. We maintain that the prosperous condition of our country is largely due to the wise revenue legislation of the Republican congress.

We believe that all articles which cannot be produced in the United States, except luxuries, should be admitted free of duty, and that on all imports coming into competition with the products of American labor there should be levied duties equal to the difference between wages abroad and at home. We assert that the prices of manufactured articles of general consumption have been reduced under the operations of the tariff act of 1890.

We denounce the efforts of the Democratic majority of the house of representatives to destroy our tariff laws by piecemeal, as manifested by their attacks upon wool, lead and lead ores, the chief products of a number of states, and we ask the people for their judgment thereon.

We point to the success of the Republican policy of reciprocity, under which our export trade has vastly increased, and new and enlarged markets have been opened for the products of our farms and work shops.

We remind the people of the bitter opposition of the Democratic party to this practical business measure, and claim that, executed by a Republican administration, our present laws will eventually give us control of the trade of the world.

The American people from tradition and interest favor bimetallism, and the Republican party demands the use of both gold and silver as standard money, with such restrictions and under such provisions, to be determined by legislation, as will secure the maintenance of the parity of values of the two metals, so that the purchasing and debt paying power of the dollar, whether of silver, gold or paper, shall be at all times equal. The interests of the producers of the country, its farmers and its workingmen, demand that every dollar, paper or coin, issued by the government shall be as good as any other.

We commend the wise and patriotic steps already taken by our government to secure an international conference to adopt such measures as will insure a parity of value between gold and silver for use as money throughout the world.

We demand that every citizen of the United States shall be allowed to cast one free and unrestricted ballot in all public elections, and that such ballot shall be counted and returned as cast; that such laws shall be enacted and enforced as will secure to every citizen, be he rich or poor, native or foreign born, white or black, his sovereign right guaranteed by the constitution.

The free and honest ballot, the just and equal representation of all the people, as well as their just and equal protection under the laws, are the foundation of our republican institutions, and the party will never relax its efforts until the integrity of the ballot and the purity of elections shall be fully guaranteed and protected in every state.

SOUTHERN OUTRAGES.

We denounce the continued inhuman outrages perpetrated upon American citizens for political reasons in certain Southern states of the Union.

FOREIGN RELATIONS.

We favor the extension of our foreign commerce, the restoration of our mercantile marine by home-built ships and the creation of a navy for the protection of our national interests and the honor of our flag; the maintenance of the most friendly relations with all foreign powers, entangling alliances with none, and the protection of the rights of our fishermen.

We reaffirm our approval of the Monroe doctrine, and believe in the achievement of the manifest destiny of the republic in its broadest sense.

We favor the enactment of more stringent laws and regulations for the restriction of criminal, pauper and contract immigration.

MISCELLANEOUS.

We favor efficient legislation by congress to protect the life and limb of employes of transportation companies engaged in carrying on interstate commerce, and recommend legislation by the respective states that will protect employes engaged in state commerce, in mining and manufacturing.

The Republican party has always been the champion of the oppressed and recognizes the dignity of manhood, irrespective of faith, color or nationality. It sympathizes with the cause of home rule in Ireland, and protests against the persecution of the Jews in Russia.

The ultimate reliance of free popular government is the intelligence of the people and the maintenance of freedom among men. We therefore declare anew our devotion to liberty of thought and conscience, of speech and press, and approve all agencies and instrumentalities which contribute to the education of the children of the land; but while insisting upon the fullest measure of religious liberty, we are opposed to any union of church and state.

We reaffirm our opposition, declared in the Republican platform of 1888, to all combinations of capital, organized in trusts or otherwise, to control arbitrarily the condition of trade among our citizens.

We heartily endorse the action already taken upon this subject, and ask for such further legislation as may be required to remedy any defects in existing laws, and to render their enforcement more complete and effective.

We approve the policy of extending to the towns, villages and rural communities, the advantages of the free delivery service, now enjoyed by the larger cities of the country, and reaffirm the declaration contained in the platform of 1888, pledging the reduction of letter postage to 1 cent, at the earliest possible moment consistent with the maintenance of the postoffice department and the highest class of postal service.

CIVIL SERVICE.

We commend the spirit and evidence of reform in the civil service, and the wise and consistent enforcement by the Republican party of the laws regulating the same.

NICARAGUA CANAL.

The construction of the Nicaragua canal is of the highest importance to the American people, both as a measure of national defense, and to build up and maintain American commerce, and it should be controlled by the United States government.

TERRITORIES.

We favor the admission of the remaining territories at the earliest practicable date, having due regard to the interests of the people of the territories and of the United States. All the federal officers appointed for the territories should be selected from bona fide residents thereof, and the right of self-government should be accorded as far as practicable.

ARID LANDS.

We favor the cession, subject to the homestead laws, of the arid public lands to the states and territories in which they lie, under such congressional restrictions as to disposition, reclamation and occupancy by settlers as will secure the maximum benefits to the people.

THE COLUMBIAN EXPOSITION.

The World's Columbian exposition is a great national undertaking, and congress should promptly enact such reasonable legislation in aid thereof as will insure thereto, and the attainment of results commensurate with the dignity and progress of the nation.

INTEMPERANCE.

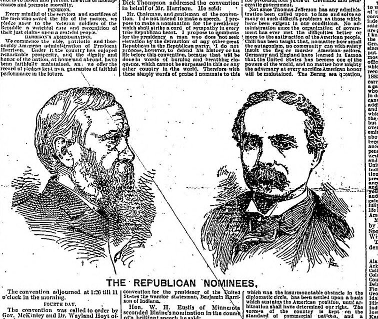
We sympathize with all wise and legitimate efforts to lessen and prevent the evils of intemperance and promote morality.

PENSIONS.

Every mindful of the services and sacrifices of the men who saved the life of the nation, we pledge anew to the veteran soldiers of the Republic a watchful care and recognition of their just claims upon a grateful people.

HARRISON'S ADMINISTRATION.

We commence the able, patriotic and thoroughly American administration of President Harrison. Under it the country has enjoyed remarkable prosperity, and the dignity and honor of the nation, at home and abroad, have been faithfully maintained, and we offer the record of pledges kept as a guarantee of faithful performance in the future.



THE REPUBLICAN NOMINEES.

The convention adjourned at 1:26 till 11 o'clock in the morning.

FOURTH DAY.

The convention was called to order by Gov. McKinley and Dr. Wayland Hoyt offered up prayer.

The secretary then read the completed list of the executive committee as follows:

Alabama, William Bloodgood; Arkansas, Powell Clayton; California, M. H. De Young; Colorado, J. F. Sanders; Connecticut, Samuel Fessenden; Delaware, R. D. J. Layton; Florida, J. C. Long; Georgia, W. W. Brown; Idaho, George H. Shoup; Illinois, W. J. Campbell; Iowa, J. S. Clarkson; Indiana, James M. Huston; Kansas, Cyrus Leland, Jr.; Kentucky, W. O. Bradley; Louisiana, ——— ———; Maine, J. H. Mr. Miller presented a communication from the Woman's Republican Association offering help in the coming campaign. It was unanimously accepted.

Nominations were declared in order for president and the secretary proceeded to call the roll for nominations.

BLAINE NOMINATED.

Senator Wolcott presented the name of Mr. Blaine in behalf of Colorado. He said:

The greatest American now living suffered defeat eight years ago, because the party which he led and honored was torn by discord and because fraud triumphed. We meet to-day to atone for that wrong, and to present to our uncrowned leader the pledge of our unswerving devotion, and the assurance of a victory in November that will obliterate in his heart and ours the memory of past defeat and restore to our party its old reputation of fealty and devotion. It is to us a matter of comparative indifference who shall lead the Democratic hosts, but we trust they will once more renominate THEIR PROPHET OF TARIFF REFORM in order that we may demonstrate how short a life have slander and calumny. That a chastened country may repair the wrong of '84 and stamp with the seal of final disapproval a policy which could only lead to impoverishment at home and which brought only contempt and dishonor abroad. There is practical agreement among the delegates at this convention, certainly among the representatives of the Republican states, as to whom our leader should be and it would find unanimous voice were there not a mistaken feeling among certain of our associates that the bestowal of office is a personal gift. The welfare of our beloved party, Mr. Chairman, is of infinitely greater importance than the vindication or nomination of any man within its ranks, and when the roll of states is called I believe it will be remembered that the obligations of office are repaid solely by faithful performance of its duties, and that manhood and independence are never bartered among good men for the emoluments and honors of public station. Our candidate, Mr. Chairman, has never been president of the United States. He will be. But if he has not yet occupied that high office, he has, by his devotion to the party, made Republican presidents possible, and he has enriched and guided two administrations with his sagacity and statesmanship. We are honored and respected abroad, we owe it to his statecraft. We are gathering the republics of America together IN BONDS OF CLOSEST FRIENDSHIP. It is because he devised the plan and has shaped the policy. We are protecting our own people on the farm and work shop, and by wise concessions are inducing the nations of the world to open their gates to our products. His far-seeing and discriminating vision saw the possibility of reciprocity and induced us to foster it. There is no public measure since the days of reconstruction which has tended to the advancement of our country with which he has not been identified, and when the history of this generation of our republic shall be written his name will stand foremost among its statesmen. No official title can add to or detract from the luster of his fame, but we may at least let history record that such as we had to give we gave with loyal and loving hearts.

The best gifts of this world are not for those who seek them. Our votes are to be cast for the one who is almost every Republican's candidate except his own. For my own part I rejoice that the opportunity is given me of casting my vote for a nominee who seeks nothing for himself, but everything for his country. And the sole devotion to the nation's welfare which has guided him in his public life for nearly a generation insures his acceptance of any duty which the convention may impose upon him. For many months there has been apprehension in the public mind respecting his health and strength. It is gratifying to be able to state that the fears which have moved us are groundless. For our country's sake and his own, we could wish that he were again THE YOUNG AND ARDENT LEADER who has guided his party through countless battles and that his youth could be renewed like the eagle's. Experience, however, Mr. Chairman, comes only with ripening years; the same unconquerable will and lofty patriotism still dominate his being; and though time has tinged his hair with white, and the years of struggle in his country's service have left their impress, he still stands for us who love him, the embodiment of all that is brightest and best in American statesmanship, and, mellowed and broadened by the creeping hours of time, we thank God that he is still amply able and equipped to give to the people of these states an administration which shall protect our own citizens, and, looking beyond the confines of our borders, embrace the well-being of all America.

And so, Mr. Chairman, we turn in the hour when victory is at hand to the intrepid leader who shaped for his party the policy which has lifted it above the danger of further defeat. To those of us who belong to the younger element of the party who are content to follow and not to lead, but only to bear their share of the burden and heat of the day, he stands as our ideal, our inspiration. His name is engraved in all our hearts in living letters that can never fade. Brave, true-hearted and great, there is no true Republican who will not follow him when he leads, and, with loving faith and trust that a kind providence may long spare him to a people whose grateful homage he has earned and whose affectionate devotion he possesses, we pledge our unfaltering and loyal support to James G. Blaine.

When Indiana was called the venerable Dick Thompson addressed the convention in behalf of Mr. Harrison. He said:

Mr. Chairman, and gentleman of the convention. I do not intend to make a speech. I propose to make a nomination for the presidency which shall strike a cord of sympathy in every true Republican heart. I propose to nominate for the presidency a man who does not seek elevation by the detraction of any other great Republican in the Republican party. I do not propose, however, to defend his history or his life before this convention, because that will be done in words of burning and breathing eloquence, which cannot be surpassed in this or any other country in the world. Therefore with these simply words of praise I nominate to this convention for the presidency of the United States the warrior statesman, Benjamin Harrison of Indiana.

Hon. W. H. Eustis of Minnesota seconded Blaine's nomination in the course of a brilliant speech he said:

Our party stands pledged to an honest ballot, an honest dollar and protection of American industries and American labor. These epistles are followed by the revelation of reciprocity. The great revolution which has demoralized free traders here is the result. In the great commercial conflict now dawning on the world our country is to the front, while our great rival, in the language of her leader, is without armor and without arms. Who in this great battle is best equipped to be our leader? All honour to him whose name is a synonom of honest money; unstinted praise to the president who has sustained the flag and upheld the rights of American citizens on land and on sea. All honor and love to you, sir, Chairman McKinley, who is like a rock against the floodtide of free trade, and who has lifted the shield of protection above the wages of the worker. All honor and cheers for the gallant soldier from Michigan whose great war record the people will not suffer Democracy to tarnish. We honor and love all these none the less, because there is one leader whom we honor and love more. He has toiled for the party during all its history. He has toiled for the party, to the honor of the party and the glory of the republic. In every quadrennial contest in the history of the party, and his plume has been in the front of the fight. He never for a moment has faltered in his earnest allegiance and support of the party and its nominee. He is an intense Republican, as he is intensely American. The linked hemisphere attests the breadth and scope of his statesmanship. Every issue upon which we must win is personified in his name. Illinois, in the Indian tribal tongue, the name of your grand commonwealth signifies a race of men. It has its meaning to-day. For the past let Lincoln, Grant and Logan answer nay. For the present you must speak. Illinois, take the hand of Minnesota and let your patriotic action this day tell with the courage of your convictions—nay, more, with the courage of your love, that Illinois! Illinois! still means a race of men. [Applause.] My country, 'tis for thee the people cherish their best and their noblest aspiration. 'Tis for thee that they would exercise their God-like power. It was for thee, my country; it was for those who died, whose graves but yesterday we strewd with flowers and wet with tears. 'Tis for thee, my country. 'Tis for thee, my country and my countrymen, that Minnesota with loyal heart and patriotic purpose takes the hand of every sister state and seconds the nomination of James G. Blaine.

Mr. Blaine's nomination was also seconded by W. E. Mollison of Mississippi, G. Q. Boyd of Tennessee, Warren Miller of New York and Stephen Downey of Wyoming.

HARRISON NOMINATED.

Mr. Depew of New York presented the name of Mr. Harrison and spoke as follows:

Mr. President, and Gentlemen of the Convention: It is the peculiarity of the Republican national conventions that each one of them has a distinct and interesting history. We are here to meet conditions and solve problems which make this gathering not only an exception to the rule, but substantially a new departure. That there should be strong convictions and their earnest expression as to preferences and policies is characteristic of the right of individual judgment, which is the fundamental principle of Republicanism. There have been occasions when the result was so sure that the delegates could freely indulge in the charming privilege of favoritism and of friendship, but the situation which now confronts us demands the exercise of dispassionate judgment and our best thought and experience. We cannot venture on uncertain ground or encounter obstacles placed in the pathway of success by ourselves.

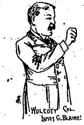
The Democratic party is now divided, but the hope of the possession of power once more will make it in the final battle more aggressive, determined and unscrupulous than ever. It starts with fifteen states secure without an effort, by processes which are a travestry upon popular government, and if continued long enough will paralyze institutions founded upon popular suffrage. It has to win four more states in a fair fight, states which are doubtful. The Republican party must appeal to the conscience and judgment of the individual voter in every state in the Union. This is in accordance with the principles upon which it was founded and the objects for which it contends. It has accepted this issue before and fought it out with an extraordinory continuance of successes. The conditions of Republican victory from 1860 to 1880 were created by Abraham Lincoln and U. S. Grant. They were that the saved republic SHOULD BE RUN BY ITS SAVIORS: they were the emancipation of the slaves, the reconstruction of the states, the reception of those who had fought to destroy the republic back into the fold, without penalties or punishments, and to an equal share with those who had fought and saved the nation in the solemn obligations and inestimable privileges of American citizenship. They were the embodiment into the constitution of the principles for which 2,000,000 fought and 500,000 had died. They were the restoration of public credit, the resumption of specie payments, and the prosperous condition of solvent business. For twenty-five years the were names with which to conjure, and events fresh in the public mind, which were eloquent with popular enthusiasm. It needed little else than a recital of the glorious story of its heroes and a statement of the achievements of the Republican party to retain the confidence of the people. But from the desire for change which is characteristic of free governments there came a reversal, there came a check to the progress of the Republican party and four years of Democratic administration. These four years largely relegated to the realms of history past issues and brought us face to face with what Democracy, its professions and its practices mean to-day.

The great names which have adorned the roll of Republican statesmen and soldiers are still potent and popular. The great measures of the Republican party are still the best part of the history of the century. The unequaled and unexampled story of Republicanism in its promises and in its achievements stands unique in the record of parties in governments which are free. But we live in practical times, facing practical issues which affect the business, the wages, the labor and the prosperity of the day. The campaign will be won or lost, not upon the bad record of James K. Polk or of Franklin Pierce, or of James Buchanan—not upon the good record of Lincoln, or of Grant, or of Arthur, or of Hayes, or of Garfield. It will be won or lost upon the policy, foreign and domestic, the industrial measures and the administrative acts of the administration of

BENJAMIN HARRISON.

Whoever receives the nomination of this convention will run, upon the judgment of the people, as to whether they have been more happy, whether the country has been in a better condition at home, and stood more honorably abroad, under this last four years of Harrison and Republican administration, than during the preceding four years of Cleveland and Democratic government.

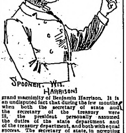
Not since Thomas Jefferson has any administration been called upon to face and solve so many of such difficult problems as those which have been exigent in our conditions. No administration since the organization of government has ever met the difficulties better or more to the satisfaction of the American people. Chili has been taught that, no matter how small the antagonism, no community can with safety insult the flag or murder American sailors. Germany and England have learned in Samoa that the United States has become one of the powers of the world, and no matter how mighty the adversary at every sacrifice American honor will be maintained. The Bering sea question, which was the insurmountable obstacle in the diplomatic circle, has been settled upon a basis which sustains the American position, until arbitration shall have determined our right. The success of the country is kept on the standard of commercial nations, and a convention has been agreed upon with foreign governments, which, by making bimetallism the policy of all nations, may successfully solve all our financial problems. The tariff, tinkered with and trifled with to the serious disturbance of trade, has been courageously embodied into a code—a code which has preserved the principle of protection of American industries. To it has been added a beneficent policy, supplemented by beneficial treaties and wise diplomacy, which has opened to our farmers and manufacturers the markets of other countries. The navy has been builded upon lines which will protect Americans and American interests and the flag all over the world. The public debt has been reduced. The maturing bonds have been paid off. The public credit has been maintained. The burdens of taxation have been lightened. Two hundred millions of currency have been added to the people's money without disturbance of the exchanges. UNEXAMPLED PROSPERITY has crowned wise laws and their wise administration. The main question which divides us is, to whom does the credit of all this belong? Orators may stand upon this platform more able and more eloquent than I, who will paint in more brilliant colors, but they cannot put in more earnest thought, affection and admiration of Republicans for our distinguished secretary of state. I yield to no Republican, no matter from what state he hails, in admiration and respect for John Sherman, for Gov. McKinley, for Thomas B. Reed, for Iowa's great son, for the favorites of Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan. But when I am told that the credit of the brilliant diplomacy of this administration belongs exclusively to the secretary of state: for the administration of its finances to the secretary of the treasury; for the construction of its ships to the secretary of the navy; for the introduction of pork into Europe to the secretary of the agricultural bureau; for the settlement, so far as it is settled, of the currency question to Senator John Sherman; for the formulation of the tariff laws to Gov. McKinley; for the removal of the restrictions placed by foreign nations upon the introductions of American pork to our ministers at Paris and Berlin, I am tempted to seriously inquire, who, during the last four years, has been president of the United States, anyhow?



WOLCOTT COL.
JAMES G. BLAINE!

Cæsar, when he wrote those commentaries, which were the history of the conquests of Europe under his leadership, modestly took the position of Æneas when he said, "They are the narrative of events, the whole of which I saw and the part of which I was." Gen. Thomas, as the hero of Chickamauga, occupies a place in our history with Leonidas as among Greeks, except that he succeeded where Leonidas failed. The fight of Joe Hooker above the clouds was the poetry of battle. The resistless rush of Sheridan and his steed down the valley of the Shenandoah is THE EPIC OF THE CIVAL WAR. The march of Sherman from Atlanta to the sea is the supreme triumph of gallantry and strategy. This detracts nothing from the splendor of the fame or the merits of the lives of his lieutenants, that, having selected them with marvelous sagacity and discretion, Grant still remained the supreme commander of the national army.

All the proposed acts of any administration before they are formulated are passed upon in cabinet council, and the measures and suggestions of the ablest secretaries would have failed with a lesser president, but for the great good of the country and the benefit of the Republican party, they have succeeded, because of the suggestive mind, the indomitable courage, the intelligent appreciation of situations, and the grand magnimity of Benjamin Harrison. It is an undisputed fact that during the few months when both the secretary of state and the secretary of the treasury were ill, the president personally assumed the duties of the state department and of the treasury department, and both with equal success. The secretary of state, in accepting his portfolio under President Garfield, wrote: "Your administration must be made brilliant, successful and strong in the confidence and pride of the people, not at all diverting its energy for re-election, and yet compelling that result by the logic of events and by the imperious necessities of the situation." Garfield fell before the bullet of the assassin and Mr. Blaine retired to private life. Gen. Harrison invited him to take up that unfinished diplomatic career where its threads had been so tragically broken. He entered the cabinet. He resumed his work, and has won a higher place in our history. The prophecy he made for Garfield has been superbly fulfilled by President Harrison. In the language of Mr. Blaine, "The president has compelled a re-election by the logic of events and the imperious necessities of the situation."



SPOONER. WIS.
HARRISON!

THE MAN WHO IS NOMINATED HERE TO-DAY, to win, must carry a certain well known number of the doubtful states. Patrick Henry, in the convention which started rolling the ball of the independence of the colonies from Great Britain, said: "I have but one lamp by which my feet are guided, and that is the lamp of experience. I know of no way of judging of the future but by the past." New York was carried in 1880 by Gen. Garfield, and in every important election since that time we have done our best. We have put forward our ablest, our most popular our most brilliant leaders, for governor and state officers, to suffer constant defeat. The only light which illumines with the sun of hope the dark record of these twelve years is the fact that in 1888 the State of New York was triumphantly carried by Gen. Harrison. He carried it then as a gallant soldier, a wise senator, a statesman who inspired confidence by his public utterances in daily speech from the commencement of the canvass to its close. He still claims it, and in addition, an administration beyond criticism and rich with the elements of popularity with which to carry New York again. Ancestry helps in the old world and handicaps in the new. There is but one distinguished example of a son first overcoming the limitations imposed by the preeminent fame of his father, and then rising above it, and that was when the younger Pitt became greater than Chatham. With an ancestry a signer of the Declaration of Independence and another, who saved the Northwest from savagery and gave it to civilization, and empire, and who was also president of the United States, a poor and unknown lawyer of Indiana, he has even, unaided, gained distinction as lawyer, orator, soldier, statesman and president that reflects more credit upon his ancestors than they have devolved upon him, and presents in a case more the parallel of the younger Pitt.—By the grand record of a wise and popular administration, by the strength gained in contact with the people in wonderfully versatile speech, by the claims of a pure life in public, and in the simplicity of a typical American home, I nominate Benjamin Harrison.

Mr. Harrison's nomination was seconded by Mr. Cheatham of North Carolina, Mr. Spooner of Wisconsin, and Mr. Frink of Wisconsin.

The ballot was made unanimous and the convention adjourned till 8 o'clock in the evening.

EVENING SESSION.

The convention called to order by Gov. McKinley, who announced nominations in order for vice-president.

The secretary then proceeded with the call of the roll.

Senator O'Connor of New York—Mr. Chairman: At a meeting of the New York delegation, regularly called, in the absence of Senator Miller I was designated its chairman and instructed by the unanimous voice of the delegation to present the name of a distinguished citizen of the State of New York in nomination for vice president. As you all know, the great majority of the delegation, since the opening of the convention, have been working very strenuously for the nomination of a candidate that this convention in its wisdom did not see fit to sanction; but we want to notify the Republican delegates from every part of the United States that that large majority subordinate their personal views and acquiesce in the wisdom of this convention. We want to assure you that in our opposition to the nomination of the successful candidate there was nothing of a personal nature, and we now recognize the duty of every Republican to bow loyally to the judgment of this convention. We believe, however, that New York State ought to be aided in the great struggle it will have to make to land that state in the Republican column; and I believe the gentleman whom I shall name will aid us materially in accomplishing that purpose. I will not detain this convention as Gen. Horace Porter of the city of New York will tell this convention the distinguished claims of the gentlemen I shall nominate, and I therefore will conclude my labors in behalf of the New York State delegation by placing in nomination for the vice-presidency of the United States

Gen. Porter and Thomas B. Reed were also mentioned, but their names were withdrawn.

The nomination of Mr. Reid was made unanimous.

After the usual votes of thanks to the chairman and others connected with the convention, and a rousing vote of thanks to the city of Minneapolis the convention adjourned sine die.

AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

Secretary Tracy has gone to New York for a few days.

Col. W. B. Remy, judge advocate general of the navy, was placed on the retired list, with the rank of colonel in the marine corps.

A report from Paris that Samana bay, in San Domingo, has been ceded to the United States, is denied at the state department. It was stated that whatever excitement or uneasiness prevailed in San Domingo is in nowise due to any action on the part of the United States.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Much destitution prevails among the Pennsylvania flood sufferers.

A passenger train on the Oregon Pacific ran into a hand car at Acquina City, on which were ten persons. Mrs. Pratt and child and a child named Manning were killed instantly. The seven others were severely injured.

William Ruskine, the Yale man who was injured by initations, died. At the initation Ruskine was blindfolded and told to run down a street. He swerved a little from the direct path and dashed into a pole of a carriage before he could be checked. He received an awful blow on the abdomen and was in intense agony until death.

A passenger on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy was wrecked by a broken rail near Indianapolis, Neb. The passengers miraculously escaped with a bad shaking up, only one person, L. Eldridge of Denver, Colo., having his shoulder dislocated. Five Pullman sleepers were turned over. Among the passengers was a party of about sixty editors with their families, returning from the meeting of the National Editorial association at San Francisco.

PERSONAL MENTION.

There is an improvement in Sidney Dillon's condition.

Sidney Dillon, the financier and railroad magnate, dies in New York.

The standing of the six-year final graduating class of the naval cadets at Annapolis has been announced. Frank H. Scofield of New York is first. A. V. Catlin of Minnesota is seventeenth on the list.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Betti, daughter of Millionaire Fleischmann of Cincinnati, to Dr. C. R. Holmes, a local physician, is announced. Miss Fleischmann recently gave the mitten to Count Dogothetti, who is now in Chicago.

SINS AND SINNERS.

Postoffice safe blowers are arrested at Dubuque.

A case of boodling, real or alleged, crops out in the Massachusetts legislature.

Edward McMillin was hanged at Wikesbarre, Pa., for the murder of his wife Feb. 20, 1891.

The dispatch sent out from Little Rock that the sheriff of Perry county had been overpowered and the three McArthurs taken from him and lynched is untrue. The men were safely jailed.

A cold blooded murder was committed near the head of Flathead lake, south of Kalispell, Mont. William Knox and a neighbor named George Searls quarreled over a piece of property, when Knox shot Searls in the abdomen with a shotgun. Officers have gone from here in search of the murderer.

The Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., of New York, pastor of the Twenty-third Street Baptist church, has been held in $12,000 bail on a charge of criminal libel preferred by Excise Commissioner Joseph Kosk, who claims that the reverend gentleman libeled him criminally in one of his recent sensational sermons.

Mary Anderson, a domestic, was found dead with her throat cut in a swamp between Woodbridge and Perth Amboy, N. J. The throat was cut from ear to ear. There was a deep gash on the forehead and the dead girl's clothing was torn and disarranged. The murder had evidently been committed with a pocket knife, but nothing was found near the body to furnish a clue to the murderer and the motive is yet a mystery. The victim was about 23 years of age and very good looking.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

Emin Pasha is reported dead.

Thus far there have been over $3,000 deaths from cholera in Calcutta.

Three persons were killed and many injured in a collision on the Midland road near London.

A revolt has broken out in the Monshaland Hasoun districts of Armenia. Turkish troops sent to the revolt have been defeated. The rebellion is spreading.

Blandel & Garnier, bankers of Paris, have failed with liabilities amounting to $3,000,000 francs. The failure was due to losses on the bourse.

In the house of Commons Mr. Balfour announced that the local Irish Government bill would be withdrawn. Government business will rule until the end of the season.

A frightful disaster is reported from Central Russia. The steamer Albion, while plying in the Ounja river, a tributary of the Volga, took fire and sixty persons were drowned in endeavoring to escape from the burning vessel. Thirty persons were saved.

The Berlin Tageblatt confirms the recent rumors of the death in the interior of Africa of Emin Pasha. If it is true that Emin is dead, the natural supposition is that he has fallen a victim to smallpox, from which reports in April stated he was suffering.

Riots resulting from a strike occurred in Chatalonia. Serious conflicts took place between the rioters and the police, and several persons were badly wounded. During the disorders a number of workmen of San Martin whipped a mill proprietor and seriously injured him.

A manifesto in reply to the pope's recent encyclical has been issued by Royalist members of the chamber of deputies. "French Royalists," it declares, "while respecting the decision of the pope in spiritual matters, claim for the French the right of preserving their political preferences. The form of government is a question that should be decided by Frenchmen alone. The papacy has recognized all previous forms of government in France, but it has never called upon the adherents of preceding regimes to forget their fidelity or renounce their hopes.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

The Republicans carry Oregon by a good majority.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

Again does the Soo cut Eastern passenger rates $3.

J. R. Buchanan has not yet accepted the chairmanship of the Western Passenger association. Neither has he declined it. Mr. Buchanan appeared before the committee today and asked for further time in which to decide.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

Fred Warner, the boxing instructor of the Syracuse Athletic club, and James Kennard, the "St. Paul Kid," sparred ten rounds at Syracuse to a draw. Warner weighed 130 pounds and the kid 112.

Secretary Bateman, of the Louisville Ball club, addressed a letter to Manager Chapman assuring him that, despite gossip to the contrary, the team should be entirely under Chapman's control, and asking him to appoint Tom Brown as captain and Taylor assistant captain.

OTHERWISE.

Col. Wright assumes office as mayor of St. Paul.

The Mississippi river is again booming at Keokuk, Iowa, standing at seventeen feet four-tenths above the low water mark.

Smallpox is raging at Snohomish, Wash. Six cases were reported. A pest house has been established and quarantined.

Near Grayson Ky., Austin Porter was hung by a mob. On May 2 he killed his wife. The mob gathered at midnight, forcing the jailer to deliver Porter, and he was taken out and hanged to a bridge. Porter confessed the murder.

Mrs. Gertrude Weber, of Wahpeton, N. D., before a justice of the peace at St. Joseph Mo., secured the conviction of her husband, Joseph Weber, and Mrs. Ellen Havens on a charge of adultery. Weber was fined $50 and sixty days in jail. Mrs. Havens was fined $10. Both appealed.

The master coopers and manufacturers of staves of Illinois, Michigan and Indiana held a meeting at Chicago to formulate a strong protest against the manufacture of barrels by convict labor. According to the members, convict labor has demoralized the cooperage business and thrown thousands of men out of employment.

The liabilities of Coster, Martin & Co., the board of trade firm which failed after trying to corner the corn market, are estimated to be about $190,000, and assets $70,000. None of the claims against the defunct firm are large. The biggest, $17,000, is said to be held by Pardridge.

The colored citizens of Boston held a mass meeting with stirring addresses, and adopted resolutions denunciatory of the outrages upon members of their race in the South and in New York, and demanding the punishment of the perpetrators. They also demand that the word "white" be eliminated from the Chinese exclusion bill.

The annual report of the San Francisco produce exchange shows the amount of wheat in the state June 1 was 2,000,000 centals, as against 10,000,000 centals, Dec. 1, 1891. Flour, 120,000 barrels, against 140,000; barley, 913,000 centals, against 168,000; beans, 128,000 sack, against 275,000; corn, 93,000 centals, against 263,000; rye, 6,000 centals, against 30,000.

The appelate court at Chicago, rendered an opinion sustaining the will of the late John Crerar, which, among other public bequests, makes a provision for a library on the South side to cost about $3,000,000. The will was attacked on the ground that the charitable bequests were void because they created a continuous trust, and also because they were not specific.

Ed Pardridge, the board of trade plunger, has given up, and has ordered his brokers to buy up enough wheat and corn to cover his shortages, which are said to be about 8,000,000 bushels, nearly equally divided between the July option of those cereals. Within the last few days it is estimated that Mr. Pardridge has watched a half million of his big fortune fade away.

In the house, Representative Bennett, of Everett, stated that two members of the legislature had informed him that they had been offered $100 each to vote for Cape Cod canal bill, and $30 each to render the endowment orders bill to the next legislature. He offered an order for an investigating committee report. The order was unanimously adopted.

Gov. Willey has returned to Boise, Idaho from the Cœur d'Alene mines where he went to investigate the trouble between the mine owners and the miners union. As a result of the investigation, the governor has issued a proclamation calling upon all unlawful assemblages to immediately disperse and refrain from interfering with the mine owners. The proclamation states that force, both state and national, will be invoked if necessary to preserve peace. The governor fears trouble before the difficulty has been adjusted.

County Recorder J. F. Mosely has been missing from Stockton Cal., for some time. He owes about $100,000, most of which is unsecured. Mosely has been a large speculator in land and gave notes in payment. Nine forged notes given by him have been discovered so far, aggregating over $60,000. Six notes aggregating $40,500 are signed by W. S. Hickey and three notes amounting to $21,000 are signed by A. P. McBride. Both men pronounce the signatures forgeries.

Under Tammany.

New York Sun: A merry, philosophical citizen, about thirty years old, who looked like a seafaring man, entered police headquarters at 6:15 o'clock last evening. His face was covered with an eruption resembling small-pox. A quiet scared-faced man was with him.

"Where's the board of health's office?" asked the merry citizen with the eruption.

"They're closed up to-day. What do you want?"

"Jes' look at this face. I guess I've got the small-pox."

"I guess you have, too, and you want to hurry across the street there to 300. They'll take care of you there."

The man made his way through the crowds of children in the street and asked a woman with a baby in her arms where 300 was. She told him and he was admitted. His scared-faced companion hurried away after the merry citizen was taken into the bureau for contagious diseases.

Dr. Benedict examined him and he was sent to the reception hospital soon afterward. Dr. Benedict would not say who the citizen was. He did say that he did not know whether the man had small pox or not.

THE REPUBLICAN NATIONAL CONVENTION.

The Republican National Convention was held at Minneapolis last week and is now a thing of the past. Much to the surprise of all President Harrison was re-nominated on the first ballot. His nomination was brought about, first, by Wall street and the Vanderbilt millions, by the grace of Chauncey Depew, second, by nearly all the federal office holders in the country being at the convention and working in every way for his nomination, and third, by vote of nearly every negro delegate in the convention representing southern states which have never cast an electoral vote for a Republican. Boodle and Fedral patronage may be said to have controlled the convention and nominated a ticket which is sure to be defeated. Whitelaw Reid, the nominee of the convention for vice president, is the editor of the New York Tribune, which paper has for the past twenty years been the avowed enemy of organized labor and it was not until two days before the nomination that the Tribune would consent to employ a union printer. Chauncey M. Depew, the great railroad president, in seconding Harrison's nomination, said that his administration had been "conservative and safe" but the people will undoubtedly consider that what is "safe" for railroads and millionaries is not a good thing for them. James G. Blaine, the poor man's champion and the idol of the Republican party, was decidedly not in it. The railroads and money interests of the country never had Blaine under their thumb and consequently would never consent that he be president. He is the author of the only good thing the present administration has put out (reciprocity) and is undoubtedly the choice of a large majority of the republicans and should have been the nominee, and would have been if fair play and honesty had ruled.

Mr. L. R. Bramsness was kicked in the face by a horse and was very seriously injured, Dr. H. Grundy was called to dress the wounds and reports his patient doing nicely.

Mrs. Fanny Aimes, the State Secretary of the W. C. T. U., will give a free lecture in the Methodist Church June 27th, All are cordially invited to attend. Mrs. Ames is a good speaker and it is hoped that many will be out to hear her.

The Polk County Alliance will hold their annual meeting for the election of officers at the court house in Crookston on June 29th at 10 o'clock a. m. Each sub-alliance is entitled to three delegates

H. G. Mitchell, President. J. D. Knutson, Secretary.

Lars Anderson came in from the town of Sanders last Monday and swore out a warrant for Ludvig Treftlin charging him with stealing $10 from him last Sunday. Treftlin has been working on the section at Ives and Constable Williams went down and arrested him. He was taken before Justice Hanson and was fined $50 or 60 days in the county jail. As he was unable to pay his fine he was taken to Crookston by Constable Williams on Monday's train.

MOSCOW'S CHIMING BELLS.

Reproduction of a World-Famed Novelty for Ringling Bros. Grand Parade.

Of all the cities of Russia, Moscow is the most renowned. In that city is located the famous "cracked bell,, of history, and there also for centuries the sweet-toned bells of the Kremlin have been the mecca of all the music lovers of Europe, The percentage of those who can visit so far a country as Russia is, however, small, and to exhibit in America a fac simile of the greatest curiosity in all Moscow, must be conceded a feat of startling magnitude But this is just what the Ringling Bros, have done, By long endeavor and the expenditure of vast sums of money they have accomplished the most incredible task of securing as one of the features of the World's Greatest Shows an exact representation of those far famed cathedral chimes of the Kremlin tower, the music of which has been the inspiration of musicians and poets the wide world over. As an illustration of the magnanimity of this great circus management, these marvelous chimes are not enclosed under canvass, but are exhibited free and open upon the streets in the mammoth daily procession, while an accomplished manipulator, imported especially from Moscow, discourses the sweetest of sweet clanging melodies These famous bells will be seen at Crookston June 16th during the visit of the Ringling Brother's colosol shows Cheap excursion rates on all railroads

SPECIAL EXCURSION RATES.

O HELEN, HELEN DEAR!

How lightly up the winding stair
We ran together, she and I;
And still I see her lovely face
Look downward from the landing place;
For she outsped me. Through the gloom
Of the great hall, into her room,
She led me on that summer day,
In years that fled too quickly by.

I pray you, if you ever pass
This sunken grave within the grass,
Touch tenderly the crumbling stone,
And say, for me, in undertone—
"O Helen, Helen dear!"

How fair she was, how straight and tall,
My Helen in that far off day!
Like living things that longed to go,
The curtains fluttered to and fro,
As up and down the room we walked,
Perhaps of love and lovers talked,
As girls have always done, and will,
And nothing whispered "yea" or "nay."

I pray you, if you ever pass
This sunken grave within the grass,
Touch tenderly the crumbling stone,
And say, for me, in undertone—
"O Helen, Helen dear!"

What trifling things the heart will keep!
They seem too simple to be told.
That day she lifted from its place
A dainty thing of flowers and lace,
And held it up that I might see.
Oh, little bonnet, plain to me,
Your ribbon streams across the mist,
A shadowy streak of palest gold!

I pray you, if you ever pass,
This sunken grave within the grass,
Touch tenderly the crumbling stone,
And say, for me, in undertone—
"O Helen, Helen dear!"

The German Empire.

The case of the Grand Duke of Hesse and his brother potentates forms one of the most interesting phases in the German situation of today, and one must know something about it in order to understand the current of German affairs. Germany, as well as the United States, has a dual system of government, though hers is in other respects very unlike ours. There the big state of Prussia has three-fifths the area of the whole, and in round numbers about thirty millions out of fifty million population.

Her king is at the same time German emperor. Consequently Prussia is the cock of the walk in Germany, and behind her come tagging along with a more or less degree of dignity some twenty-five states, of which three are kingdoms, ranging in importance from Bavaria, which has the population of Belgium or Holland and the area of both, whose capital, Munich, is one of the finest cities in Europe, down to the principality of Schaumburg-Lippe, which an active Kentuckian could come very near jumping across.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Grave of Penn's Surveyor.

In a little clump of woods just off the line and to the eastward of the Bustleton branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, one mile from the village of Holmesburg, lies the body of Thomas Holme, the man who, as surveyor general for William Penn, laid out the city of Philadelphia. The little cemetery in which the body of Holme lies is so isolated and so unfrequented that a stranger could not well find it without the aid of a guide. In it, besides the body of the great surveyor, there are a hundred or more graves of those of his descendants.

In the center of this acre and a half devoted by the Holme family to the burial of their dead stands a little white marble monument, erected by private subscription in 1863. The inscription on this monument reads: "In memory of Thomas Holme, died 1695, aged seventy-one years. Surveyor general of William Penn. He drafted the plan and laid out the city of Philadelphia."—Philadelphia Record.

Lightning Doesn't Strike Indians.

In the course of his New Haven lecture Rev. Thomas S. Dana, an educated Indian, made this singular statement: "The Indians never cook anything in the house. They always cook outside, giving as their only reason that if they cook inside the steam will collect in their clothing and draw the lightning. Whether this is truth or not I do not know, but I do know this: No Indian wigwam has been struck by lightning since the dawn of history, and no Indian has been killed by lightning for more than 100 years."

The Value of Walking.

A sharp walk every morning at daybreak is excellent. Indeed walking is the very best form of exercise. It puts all the muscles of the body in play. It is far better in this respect than horseback riding or driving. Carriage riding is not a form of exercise at all. It is merely easy airing. It is good for the health and spirits, but it is no aid to muscular development. Running, jumping, swimming, climbing are all excellent forms of athletic exercise.—New York Tribune.

Imported Negroes.

In the suburbs of Mobile reside a number of negroes, the decendants of and part of the last cargo of slaves brought into the United States in 1861. They have never associated with other negroes, are but partially civilized, still use their native language, and are ruled by a queen of their own choosing. They enjoy a good reputation for industry and honesty, and their colony is one of the curiosities most eagerly viewed by sightseers.—Exchange.

Rathite, a New Material.

Rathite is the name of a new rubber preparation that comes from France. It is made of vulcanized caoutchouc and silk, and has, it is said, high elasticity with great durability.—New York Journal.

HER INGENIOUS SCHEME.

A Story That Illustrates the Amenities of Life in a Flat.

The boy in the second flat has friends, and he and his friends make so much noise that they keep the baby in the first flat awake. Consequently the mother of the baby in the first flat made complaint to the people in the second flat, and that availing nothing studied deeply to devise some way of stopping the racket.

And as she debated with herself there was a rattle above her head as some one rang the doorbell of the second flat, and looking up she saw that the doorbell wire ran through the corner of the room she was in. There was a look of triumph on her face as she got out a cane with a curved handle and sat down to await developments.

The next time that the boy above tried to jump over the dining room table she hooked the cane on the wire and gave it a jerk. The noise ceased and some man came down to the door. There was evidently a consultation when he went back, and it was fully ten minutes before the boy and his friends started in for a game of "tag." When they did the little woman in the flat below gave the cane another jerk and there was another trip to the door.

The people in the second flat seemed to be troubled when the man came back and, after a council of war he crept quietly down the stairs again and waited just inside the door, while the others took positions at the top of the stairs, where they could see the fun. Ten or fifteen minutes tired them all, and with the remark, "Well, I guess those kids are not coming back," he started up the stairs. As he did so the boy's spirits overcame him again, and he gave a war whoop and tried to turn a handspring.

The little woman in the flat below promptly jerked the cane again, the bell tinkled, and the man on the stairs rushed down, threw the door open and chased the boy who happened to be passing half a block.

"I guess that'll settle it," he said, when he returned, all out of breath. "I'd have licked that boy if I could have caught him."

"Ought to have jumped on him with both feet!" said the boy who made the noise, and as he tried to illustrate his remarks the little woman in the flat below pulled on the cane again.

There was a wild scramble down the stairs, and two men started around the block in different directions. When they came back one of them rapped on the door of the little woman's flat.

"I beg your pardon," he said courteously. "Have you noticed anything wrong around here tonight?"

"Why, yes," she returned pleasantly, "the doorbell"——

"Do you know who's doing it?" he interrupted.

"The boy upstairs," she replied. "He plays football or something and shakes the house so that he rings all the bells in addition to waking up my baby."

The boy isn't so noisy now.—Chicago Tribune.

A Remarkable Clock.

Japan possesses a remarkable timepiece. It is contained in a frame three feet wide and five feet long, representing a noonday landscape of great beauty. In the foreground plum and cherry trees and rich plants appear in full bloom; in the rear is seen a hill, gradual in ascent, from which apparently flows a cascade, admirably imitated in crystal. From this point a threadlike stream meanders, encircling rocks and islands in its windings, and finally losing itself in a faroff stretch of woodland.

In a miniature sky a golden sun turns on a silver wire, striking the hours on silver gongs as it passes. Each hour is marked on the frame by a creeping tortoise, which serves the place of a hand. A bird of exquisite plumage warbles at the close of each hour, and as the song ceases a mouse sallies forth from a neighboring grotto, and scampering over the hill to the garden is soon lost to view.—Iron.

Points in Pronunciation.

"Viola," Grinnell, Ia., asks, "What is the correct pronunciation of 'New Orleans?'" Over toward Boston they follow the Websterian style and mince it into four syllables, with the accent on the antepenult. In New Jersey, Missouri and states of like culture they speak it in three syllables, with the accent heavily on the last. In the Crescent city, where they are supposed to know how to lisp it in its purity, they cut it down to two syllables, "Nor-lins," with the accent on the first. So with the name of the Alamo city, San Antonio. Webster gives it five syllables. But "San-tone," with the accent on the "tone," seems to be the popular way of pronouncing it in Bexar county.—Chicago News.

Just a Shade of Difference.

When a man shrugs his shoulders (a very feminine accomplishment) at the mention of another man's name, what conclusions are drawn by the generality of people? Is the maligned man thought less of? Rather people begin to delve and wonder what the cause, what the motive for this detraction.

They wonder if it is malice; if the slandered one has been more successful in business or perhaps, having good judgment, has found the real character of the pretender, and consequently spurned him; perhaps the injured man has been a rival for some fair girl's affection and won. These are some of the thoughts which come to us when, contrary to all manly principles, one man slanders or even detracts another man's reputation. I suppose you know the difference between detraction and slander. There's a shade of difference, you know, only a shade.—Philadelphia Music and Drama.

The Dress-Maker's Subterfuge.

"I discovered the other day," said a New York woman. "How far-reaching are class ramifications in this so-called democratic country. A woman formerly in the employ of a firm who made dresses for me came to me announcing her start for herself and begging, imploring almost, that I would give her some of my custom. I gave her an order and in due time she brought the garment completed to fit on. It was not quite right and had to go back. 'Could I send it to her?' she inquired. 'No, I could not.' Then, cried she leave it while she went to the corner and rang up a messenger? Certainly she could and I went out to keep an appointment for which she knew I was hurrying.

"As I drove by the corner I noticed her standing where she could see my door and something in her attitude aroused my suspicions. When I returned a question to the maid disclosed the fact that she only waited for me to leave the neighborhood before she came back herself for the gown, declaring she could not afford a messenger, nor could she permit me to think she would carry a parcel."—New York Times.

A Legacy of Anguish.

The rheumatic taint transmitted from parent to child is indeed a legacy of anguish. Moreover, trifling causes, such as setting in a draught, the neglect to speedily change damp clothing, readily develop it. Whether rheumatism be hereditary or contracted by exposure, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the surest depurent for expelling the virus from the blood and for preventing the latter encroachments of the disease. Equally potent is it in arresting malarious, bilious and kidney trouble and constipation.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured,

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

It's an insult to your intelligence, but some unscrupulous dealers try it. For instance: you're suffering from some Skin, Scalp or Scrofulous affection, or are feeling "run-down" and "used-up." There's a torpid liver, impure blood, and all that may come from it. You've decided, wisely, that Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the medicine to help you. You know that it's guaranteed to do so, as no other blood-purifier is.

If it doesn't benefit or cure, you get your money back.

But what is best for you to take isn't, always best for the dealer to sell. He offers something else that's "just as good." Is it likely? If the makers of a medicine can't trust it, can you?

One of two things has to happen. You're cured of Catarrh, or you're paid $500 cash. That's what is promised by the proprietors of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. By its mild, soothing, cleansing, and healing properties, it cures the worst cases.

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER XIX.—CONTINUED.

It was dark, despite the snows that lay upon the ground. Brace led the way with a pine torch, which burned sluggishly in the mist that enveloped us. Lola holding my hand tightly, we followed close behind Brace, who kept the torch low to show the nature of the path; nevertheless, we slipped and floundered considerably in stepping from boulder to boulder,—the half melted snow rendering it impossible to obtain a firm footing.

Under other circumstances, Lola would have enjoyed the difficulties, and laughed at our mishaps, but now she neither smiled nor spoke; sometimes she would press my hand a little tighter,—that was all the sign she gave. We followed the course of the river, guided by the sound of the rushing waters. As we proceeded the descent grew more and more rapid, the stream forming a long succession of falls, and the light increasing, the rocks and boulders about us became dimly visible through the gray mist. At length our progress was stopped by a huge rock that rose perpendicular before us.

"Hark!" said the Judge, as we stopped to regain the breath that had been jumped out of our lungs by the last scramble.

I listened,—we seemed to have turned our backs on the stream,—its rushing sounded more distant than I had yet heard it. I said this.

"Hark again!" said Brace. Then as I leaned my ear attentively, I heard beside the swirling and dashing noise in our rear, a muffled roar, that seemed to come from the very bowels of the earth. I almost fancied I felt the rock vibrating under my feet.

"You're right," said Brace, when I gave him my impression; "end the roar you hear is that stream shootin' down thousands of feet to the bottom of the great hole. If it warn't for the durned mist," he added, holding up the torch, which revealed but a few feet above our heads of the granite wall by our side, "you'd see that we're now standin' right between the two sides of the divide we looked at last night. We are standin' right over the canon, with per'aps four or five thousand feet of nothing under us, on a lump of rock that's tumbled down from up above, and wedged itself here, 'cause somethin' stopped its goin' furder; end it do tremble, I allow. It ain't solid! It's moved a lump since I knew it in the old days, and one o' these days a chunk from up above will come down add start it off for good an' all."

"I think we may as well get off it, in that case."

"Wal, yes. It ain't more risky standin' on it than standin' under it; but, as we've got to go under it, and down the hole, we may as well git."

He led the way along the trembling rock a dozen yards maybe,—the rushing water sounding upon the left of us, and then stretched out his left arm to stop us. He advanced cautiously, and, holding out the torch at arm's length, the light fell upon the yellow water as it poured down into the black gulf upon which our standing place abutted. The flame of the torch was drawn down by the current of air as if it had been at the blast-hole of a furnace. Raising his voice to overcome the noise of the water, Brace called out:

"We've got to go down there!"

"You are not afraid, Lola?" I asked.

She shook her head, and gave my hand another little squeeze.

Brace led us off the rock, keeping the water still on our left, and there was some more downward clambering for a few minutes. Then we came to a stand, and he showed me a lateral opening about four feet in height.

"We goes through there," he said; en he produced a flask, poured out a dram, and handed it to me. I offered it to Lola. Another shake of the head and another little squeeze.

I emptied the cup, and Brace helped himself.

"There ain't no need to get ourselves in a muck over this job. We'll put our rubbers on," he said; "the wet drips through."

I took out the overcoats from the bundle of rugs, and we put them on. Then I strapped the roll of rugs on my shoulders again.

Brace touched my shoulder, and pointed upward to a couple of faintly pink nebulous patches in the mist.

"What is it?" I asked.

"The sun ketchin' the tops of the peaks," he replied.

He took a couple of torches from the bundle he carried, and began to light them at the end of the one he had last used.

"Won't you wait a little,—it will be light in half an hour?" I said.

"Not down there," he replied; "it's pitch dark in that almighty hole. Now," he added, when the torches were well lit, "take one of these, kick the snow well off your feet, keep one eye on me, the t'other on the rocks, and leave the rest to Providence."

With this last injunction, he stooped down and passed through the opening. We followed, but singly, for we needed both hands to make the perilous decent.

The first thing I noticed in passing under the great block that bridged the awful chasm was the comparative silence. We could no longer hear the rushing of the stream on the other side,—only the dull roar of the water as it struck the bottom of the canon some thousands of feet below.

Brace's voice was startlingly distinct when he spoke.

"You tell me the thing is on the other side of the ropes, my gel," he said.

She answered yes, and we went slowly forward and downward along the narrow and jagged ledge, our faces toward the glittering quartz, seeking interstices and projections for hold to our hands.

We were getting away from the fall, but at a certain point the natural path returned toward it in a zig-zag along the lower projection. At the angle, which offered a little wider standing space, we stopped.

"This here hole was fust showed me by the Kid's mother," said Brace; "it had served her father for a cachette in the early days of this country's glory.

"A cachette," he explained, "is a place where you keep things snug. A'most every miner, before the Vigilance Committee nominated me Judge, had a cachette. This was mine, and many an ounce I've brought down here; fur, you see, barrin' accidents, it's won'erful safe. You will allow that no one could find his way down here in the dark" (I shudder at the thought of any one attempting such a fearful venture), "and from here right up to the hole is a fair straight line, so that no light could come down without its bein' seen; but that ain't the only safeguard as you shall see. Come on sir."

We made our way foot by foot along the narrow ledge for some distance, still descending. When Brace again halted, the light of his torch revealed the yellow stream falling silently through space, a few feet before him. That silent fall impressed me with a sense of the awful depth of the gulf beside us.

The ledge ended abruptly where Brace stood; a recess in the wall allowed ample standing room for us three.

"The greaser never got no furder down than this; but it weren't fur enough for me," said Brace. "I had my idea of gettin' right down to the bottom of this hole, where these waters must have carried tons o' gold."

"But the ledge ends here."

"It do; but," he added lifting his torch, "it goes on again over there."

The light fell on a jutting projection of quartz upon the opposite side of the chasm, distant at least twenty feet.

"But you can not leap that."

"Correct, end I ain't going to try."

He laid himself upon his face, and stretched his arm down the chasm; when he rose, he had a cord in his hand. Pulling this in, he drew up two coils of stout rope. As he drew them in, I saw that their other ends were attached to rocks upon the opposite ledge, one above the other, with about four feet between.

"We must hitch 'em tight,—give us a hand, sir," he said.

I helped him to make the ropes taut, and fasten their loose ends upon the projecting crags that he had long employed for that purpose.

"There, sir," he said, taking his torch from Lola, and holding it over the black gulf, "there's as pretty a bridge and hand-rail as the heart of man could reasonably desire."

For all that I held my breath as I saw him step out on the low rope, and make his way, holding by the upper one, across that black abyss. My turn came, and with the blood humming in my ears, I stepped out upon the rope. It swung to and fro in the middle, and I was seized with that irresistible suggestion of self-destruction which affects the imagination of most people in looking down from the extraordinary height.

Lola began to cross before I was well off, and when we stood all three in safety on the ledge, a fervent "Thank God" rose from my heart.

"Wal, we've got to git back agin," observed Brace, as if my thankfulness were a little premature; "hows' ever 'tain't bad to think of Providence when you're in danger; now, my gel, it's for you to lead on."

"You can stay here; you're too heavy for where I'm going," said she, taking the torch from his hand.

With a swiftness that terrified me, she went down the side of the precipice, finding foothold where we, looking down from the projection, could see none.

"They don't know danger,—kids don't," said Brace, in a low tone. "End," he added, looking into the depths about him uneasily, "I wouldn't mind feeling the same myself. First time I ever felt skeery, down this hole, and I'm durned if it sha'n't be the last. I'm gettin' too old to enj'y risky work."

I could not take my eyes from the light below, as it passed in jerks from point to point. At last it stopped, and after a minute's pause, to my great relief, it began to return.

Quicker and quicker the light danced along until I felt sick and giddy with fear for the girl's safety; and then, with one last bound, she stood upon our shelf of rock, holding the Great Hesper in her hand.

"Am I good?" she asked earnestly, nestling up to my side.

CHAPTER XX.

"It's the very same," said Brace, taking the stone in his hand.

"Do you take care of it," said I, "for I find enough to do to take care of myself."

"Wal, I reckon it won't be long before we're on the best side o' this hole," he replied putting the stone in his pocket.

He was certainly ill at ease, and less confident than usual, for he took his torch and examined the fastenings of the ropes, and then, from an adjacent cavity, he brought out another coil of cord, in which cross-pieces of stout hickory were knotted at intervals of a foot. He unfastened it, and laid it loose upon the rock, with the looped end free.

"The ropes has been years exposed to the damp, and they're bound to go one day. Hef they should happen to go this day, this here knotted rope may come in partic'lar handy. You know how to use it, my gel. Here's for a start."

With the torch in his hand, he began the return along the rope.

He had got to the middle when he stopped.

"What's that?" he asked sharply, holding the upper rope with one hand, while he raised the torch with the other, and peered out into the darkness.

It was fearful to see him standing there with one upheld torch over the awful chasm,—the one luminous object in the blackness.

"Did you hear anything, pardner?"

"No."

"Seemed to me I heerd a rifle cocked. Durned old fool!" he muttered in self-reproach, as he continued his course.

Without accident, or other incident, he reached the ledge, and with a grunt of content, seated himself on a boulder letting the torch drop by his side. There was a pool of water there; with a hiss, the light went out.

The next instant there was a flash in the darkness beyond, followed by the sharp crack of a rifle shot.

We could see nothing, but from the ledge opposite came a groan, and Brace called faintly:

"I'm hit pardner; look out for yourself."

The shot had been fired after the light was extinguished, leaving him in obscurity. The faculty that had enabled the assassin to descend that terrible ledge in the dark, had enabled him to mark down poor Brace when he was no longer visible to our eyes.

This reflection struck me as, torch in hand, I sprang upon the rope bridge to cross to my fallen partner.

"Back, pardner, back," groaned Brace; "he's got the Hesper, and he'll have your life,—back!"

I raised my torch, and, looking toward the ledge, I saw a man kneeling over Brace.

He raised his arm to silence Brace, and the light fell on the bright blade of the knife in his hand. I shouted. Turning, he saw me midway across the chasm, and sprang to his feet. Then I recognized him. It was Van Hoeck.

It was he, but could I believe my senses. His eyes were not the same. At that distance, his sightless eyes should have been hardly distinguishable from his cadaverous face but now they shone out black and lustrous. Yet, in that instant as he looked toward me, they seemed to fade away in the light of my torch. And this was no deception of my sight.

With a savage cry of rage, he held up his arms to shield his eyes from the light, and grasping his knife, he made his way quickly toward the rock to which the rope on which I stood was attached.

In a moment the whole mystery was revealed. He was a Nyctalops, and his eyes, blind in the light, were gifted with the extraordinary power of seeing in the dark,—a power by which was explained all that had hitherto been inscrutable in the robbery of the Great Hesper, and the attendant events at Monken Abbey.

With a perception that he intended to cut the rope which sustained me, I hastened to reach the ledge on which he stood. But my progress was necessarily slow, for the lower cord, stretched with the weight upon it, formed a deep bend, and my damp boots slipped upon its wet surface.

Which would he cut first? If it were the upper one, I must trust to catching the lower as I fell. With this view, I kept myself as perpendicular as circumstances permitted; at the same time grasping the upper one with all my force, in case he cut the lower one.

I was within a yard of the rock when I felt the rope under my foot jerk as Van Hoeck cut the first strands; the next instant it went altogether, and I was left swinging by my hands to the upper rope over the chasm.

"Die! cursed dog, die!" shouted Van Hoeck, with the frantic excitement of a man achieving at last the object of his life, as he attacked the upper rope with his knife. "Die, and know that all you cherish in the world shall be mine, —wealth, and the woman you love. Die!"

And with that, he severed the last strand, and I swept down through space. Clinging with desperate energy to the rope in my hands, I swung, cramping myself together in anticipation of a violent shock against the side of the precipice. Happily, the rock above projected a little, so that the blow was less severe than I expected. I rebounded and swung to and fro like a pendulum in the pitchy darkness. For, in order to get a firmer grasp upon the rope when I saw his intention of cutting it, I had dropped the torch, which fell like the spark of a rocket into the depths below.

A REAL ROMANCE.

The Remarkable Experience of a Citizen of Indiana.

That truth is stranger than fiction has been once more proved by the experience of S. N. Lock, a prominent and wealthy resident of Richmond County, Ind., who has had a most remarkable experience with some Chicago real estate parties, by which he finds himself richer by $30,000 while he did not expect a cent. Twenty years ago he was in Chicago and purchased a lot in the Boulevard addition. He paid a very small price for it. He came back home without having his deed recorded. A few days after he lost the deed, and being unable to secure another without going to law he allowed the matter to drop. It now transpires that upon the same day Lock lost the deed it, was found by John Ritchey, who was afflicted with brain trouble. Placing the deed in his pocket, he laid it away among other papers. A few months later Ritchey died, but no notice was paid to a package of what was supposed to be worthless papers that were included among his effects until a few days ago, when his son opened the papers and found the deed from Chicago to Mr. Lock. He at once delivered it to him. Lock placed it in the hands of his attorney, W. T. Edward, who sent it to Chicago. Mr. Lock received a letter from the persons in possession of the lot offering him $30,000 for a warranty deed. He sent his acceptance of the offer. Had the deed remained concealed 10 days longer it would have been valueless on account of the law of limitation.

A California Product.

Frank Page, who recently removed to the stockyards near Berkely with his parents, has created a great deal of attention of late. The lad is only 14 years old and weighs 275 pounds. He does not find it an easy matter to get around, and in hot weather it is very unpleasant for him. The youngster does not complain very much, however, and tries to act like other boys.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Page are large people and will each weigh nearly 200 pounds. Frank was as sound as could be until he was 6 years old, when he was taken sick and remained in poor health for a long time. In a few years he seemed to recover entirely and commenced to gain flesh very rapidly. There seemed to be no stopping, and every day he is adding to his weight. If he keeps up his present gain something is certainly going to happen.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Why They go to the Seaside

Mr. Williams (Fanny's admirer)—Is your sistah going to the seaside this summah Tommy?

Tommy—That all depends on you. I heard ma say that if you and Fanny were engaged before the season opened, there wouldn't be any sense in her going.

Change in the Weather.

Mrs. Spinks—"Where is the money you have been saving up for a rainy day?"

Mr. Spinks—"In the Neverbreak Savings Bank."

Mrs. Spinks—"Well, give me a check for some of it I want a new water proof."

A BURGLAR UNBOSOMS.

A Retired Burglar Relates Some of the Inconveniencies of His Profession.

"Occasionally," said a retired burglar the other day, "a man transfers to himself in a single night the accumulations of another man's lifetime, but these instances are very rare, and nothing could be farther from the truth than the idea that burglarly is a quick and easy road to wealth. The fact is that the great majority of burglars make but a scant living, and to make even that they must encounter many difficulties and dangers. The burglar's reward, whatever it may be, is never commensurate to the risk he takes.

"I have myself acquired some property, but if I had my life to live over again I should chose some other occupation than burglary. Indeed, when you come to consider the inconvenient hours and the general worry and uncertainty of that business, the wonder is that anybody should go into it; if a man is at all inclined to be sensitive he should certainly keep out of it.

"I remember a long time ago going late one night into a room in which there was one man sleeping. His clothes were on a chair near the head of the bed. I was bending over those clothes and about to take them out into the hall, when the man suddenly woke up. Without an instant's hesitation he threw his arms around me. I was young then, and strong, but this man was four times as strong as I was. I think he could have crushed me if he had wanted to, and he put me out of the house with the greatest ease. But before he did that he carried me over to the table and lit a light. As he looked at me my watch-chain caught his eye, and do you know that that man took my watch and chain and kept them."

How to Raise Heifers.

"Right here," says Mr. King, in the Ohio Farmer, "I want to say a word about feeding those choice calves that are to build up our herd. I think it best for the cow, and decidedly best for the calf, to let the latter remain with the cow at least three days. I do not wish you to understand me to advocate letting the calf have all the milk for this length of time. Take all you can get twice a day; the calf will be sure to get enough. When you do take the calf away, the better way is to have them in a stable and quietly drive the cow out, letting the calf remain, so she does not see you take it from her. Keep it where she can neither see nor hear it, if possible. Leave it alone twelve hours. Offer it some milk warm from the cow. It will generally suck the finger, and about the next feed it should drink alone. You should not feed it fresh milk right along. Give one-half skimmed sweet milk until two weeks old, when it will make a better animal for the purpose you are raising it, if fed sweet skimmed milk with the addition of a very little oil meal or wheat bran—better, in fact, than if fed on whole milk. This manner of feeding will give a growthy calf of large eating capacity, which is very desirable in a cow. We all know that the more a cow eats the more butter she will make. She needs a certain amount to supply her body, and all over and above that she puts into the bucket. Feed a calf on fresh milk and very rich feed, and it will get into the habit of laying on flesh, and it will be hard to get rid of this characteristic in the cow. It is a safe rule to discard any cow that gets fat while in full flow of milk. You may be sure her milk is deficient in butter fats."

JUST WHAT A CORKER IS

A Pointer About a Much-Used Word Well Taken.

The word "corker" is a much-abused one, for the reason that its real meaning is unknown to the vast majority of those who use the word. It is derived from the French word "corquer," and that comes from Latin "corcare," which in turn was born of the Greek word "korka," signifying "incomparable one."

Throughout the Homerian epics the goddess whom we call Venus is referred to as Venus the corker, and the epithet as originally applied seemed to imply not only natural and inherent qualities but also shining and distinguished accomplishments—personal and intelectual beauty, attractions, charms, gifts and arts.

Our word pervented by the ribald usage of the profanely heedless, has come to imply a certain disregard of consequences, so that when one speaks of another as a corker the multitude gathers there from that he who is designated as a corker must necessarily be a well-meaning but heedless pyrotechnist in speech and action. The word "thoroughbred," corrupted by the brutal familiarity of idle tonguez, has come to have a similar meaning.

Standing on His Head.

Wagner, the eminent composer, had the nerves of an acrobat. Once he was climbing a preciptous mountain in company with a young friend. When some distance up and walking along a narrow ledge, the companion, who was following called out that he was growing giddy.

Wagner turned round on the ledge of rock, caught his friend, and passed him between the rock and himself to the front.

His biographer, Ferdinand Praeger, relates an incident of a visit to Wagner at his Swiss home. The two men sat one morning on an ottoman in the drawing-room, talking over the events of the years.

Suddenly Wagner, who was 60 years old, rose and stood on his head upon the ottoman.

At that moment Wagner's wife entered. Her surprise and alarm caused her to run to her husband, exclaiming: "Ah! Richard! Richard!" Quickly recovering himself, he assured her that he was sane and wished to show that he could stand on his head at 60, which was more than Ferdinand could do.—Exchange.

A Brave Woman.

A fire broke out during the night at a hotel on the banks of the Thames at Hampton, the lives of the landlady and the family being placed in jeopardy. The husband being from home, the wife, unaided, lowered her four children, one by one, from the window of her bedroom by means of a rope, which was kept in the apartment in view of such a contingency, and made her own escape in the same manner. The premises were completely destroyed.

Eyesight Saved

After Scarlet Fever, Diphtheria, Pneumonia and other prostrating diseases, Hood's Sarsaparilla is unequalled to thoroughly purify the blood and give needed strength. Read this:

"My boy had Scarlet Fever when 4 years old, leaving him very weak and with blood poisoned with canker. His eyes became inflamed; his sufferings were intense, and for 7 weeks he could not even open his eyes. I took him to the Eye and Ear Infirmary on Charles street, but their remedies failed to do the faintest shadow of good. I began giving him

POISONOUS PERFUMES.

Patchouli and Musk Frequently the Cause of Faintness.

There are some constitutions that cannot stand perfumes. The patchouli, a perfume readily recognized in India ink or the shawls, is to some persons the rankest poison. Ladies have been known to faint after wearing India shawls or painting with India ink, and a sachet which has patchouli as the flavoring essence is to many persons extremely unhealthy. Whether the perfume causes nervous complications or excites nausea cannot be ascertained, will not bear it, and a lady finding herself losing appetite or strength, or having headaches that have no explained cause, might look for the reason to some perfume that she is in the habit of using.

On some persons the musk has a similar effect, others are sickened by some one or other of the volatile oils derived from flowers, while more rarely the odor of apples or of other fruit has an unfavorable effect on persons of peculiar temperament. As a rule whatever perfume is unpleasant to the individual should be avoided, but as exceptions occur to every rule, nervousness or debility which cannot be accounted for may sometimes be explained by the use of a well-known perfume.

A Cat That Eats Asparagus.

"We've got an old Thomas cat at home," said Carl Spangenburg, "that would rather eat asparagus than meat. In fact I think he would eat any kind of vegetable in preference to meat. The other day my folks thought the feline had been poisoned, and finding that the animal became drowsier each minute, resorted to the use of castor oil as an antidote. Thomas relished the liquid as though it was a favorite delicacy, and it did not seem to cause him to vomit. When I went home to dinner the next day the folks told me about it."—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Model Locomotive Engines

The Baltimore & Ohio railroad has just placed in service on its Chicago division three new passenger engines, built at the Baldwin Locomotive works, after new designs furnished by the general superintendent of motive power of the Baltimore & Ohio company. The engines weigh 113,000 pounds, have driving wheels six feet six inches in diameter, cylinders nineteen by twenty-four inches, and are without doubt the finest passenger locomotives running into the city of Chicago to-day. Companions of these new engines have developed wonderful power and speed in hauling the famous Royal Blue Line trains, which run between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington over the Philadelphia division of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. The Baltimore & Ohio has added over forty new, high class engines to its motive power equipment within the last sixty days, and others are under construction. While constantly adding engines of approved design and highest grade to its motive power, and passenger coaches of Pullman standard to its rolling stock, the Baltimore & Ohio is also expending large amounts for additional second and third tracks and sidings, and improved facilities at terminal points. By the time the world's fair is opened for the reception of visitors, the Baltimore & Ohio will be well equipped to handle, expeditiously, the large volume of passenger traffic which will naturally seek this picturesque route from the Atlantic sea-board to Chicago.

WASHINGTON.

E. S. LACEY, controller of the currency, has resigned.

AGREEMENT is found impossible by the conferees on the river and harbor bill.

MANY congratulatory telegrams continue to be received by President Harrison.

THE house naval committee has ordered a favorable report on a bill providing for the transfer of the revenue cutter service from the treasury department to the navy department.

THE president appoved the act making appropriations to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year 1892. Commissioner Raum made a requisition for $7,250,000 for the payment of pensions and expects that the money will be available.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

MANY deaths result from the Illinois storm.

FLOODS in Montana cause much loss of livestock and damage to railroads.

A STORM in Chicago causes the death of several people and partially destroys the Democrat wigwam.

TWENTY men are killed and many others hurt by the fall of a bridge near Cincinnati.

THREE persons are killed, others injured and the Grant monument struck by lightning in Lincoln Park, Chicago.

A HURRICANE at Badalona, northern Spain, scattered two factories. Eight dead have been found and many terribly injured, have been removed from the ruins.

TWELVE naval men are instantly killed and others injured by the explosion of a shell in the Mare Island navy yard at Vallejo, Cal.

A CASK of benzine was ignited accidentally in a shop in Rome recently. The cask exploded, the house collapsed and the beds caught fire. Four persons were killed and five injured. The fire was extinguished shortly.

THE entire plant of the Crescent paper mills, at Hertford City, Ind., one of the largest in the state, was destroyed by fire. The works were the property of Fort Wayne parties. Loss, $88,000; insurance, $50,000.

A BODY was found floating face downward in the harbor at Marquette, by a policeman. It proved to be the body of John Pallam, who mysteriously disappeared a few weeks ago and for whose body the harbor was dragged two days without success.

AN inquest has been held upon the bodies of the fourteen men of the United States cruiser Boston who were killed in the explosion at the Mare Island navy yard. Nothing new was developed, as there was no one to give direct testimony, fourteen of those who were at the scene of the explosion being dead and the other being in a dying condition. A verdict of accidental death was found for all.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Father Mollinger, the noted faith cure priest, dies at Pittsburg.

Mrs. Vilas, mother of Senator Vilas, dies suddenly at her home in Madison, Wis.

The Lottery Obeys the Law.

In view of the contradictory rumors circulated regarding the intentions of the Louisiana State Lottery Company and in order to accurately answer numerous inquires, a representative of the Times-Democrat yesterday interviewed Mr. Paul Conrad, the president of the company, with the result expressed below.

Reporter—Mr. Conrad, it was asserted some weeks ago in the Northern newspapers, and the statement has since been revived recently, that the company is about to remove to Nicaragua, and there, under a government franchise, open up the business on a grander scale than ever.

President Conrad—I have heard something of this, but there is no foundation for it. The company has officially stated that it bows to the decision of the Supreme Court and will respect the laws.

Reporter—Then you have no plans of future action?

President Conrad—I cannot state the case more strongly than was done at the time the company decided not to attempt to obtain a renewal of its charter. I can only repeat that the company will continue in business until the expiration of its present charter and then cease to exist. I cannot understand, after all that has been said, why there should be any confusion in the public mind about the matter.

Reporter—Have you any objection to my stating this as a finality for the satisfaction of the public?

President Conrad—None whatever.

Reporter—Some of the Eastern papers, Mr. Conrad, persistently assert that the lottery company continues to use the United States mails in the prosecution of its business; will you kindly tell me if that is true?

President Conrad—It is utterly untrue. We are obeying the law in its letter and spirit, and our agents everywhere are instructed to obey it. We are using the express companies only in our business, and if you call at our general agency you will see the great mass of printed instructions to all persons dealing with us to avoid the mails.—Times-Democrat, New Orleans (La.) President Harrison Sends an Important Document to the Upper House.

Negotiations for Reciprocity With Canadians Now Off for All Time.

WASHINGTON, June 20.—In a state paper sent to the senate to-day in answer to a resolution of Feb. 4 last, calling for information relative to reciprocity negotiations with Canada, the president sounds the death knell of the project and plants a mile post in American history by deliberately, in effect, recommending that congress proceed to retaliate upon the dominion for its persistent denial of the rights of American citizens, guaranteed by the treaty of Washington, in connection with the navigation of Canadian canals. The president in his communication says that his answer to the resolution was delayed at the suggestion of the secretary of state until the conference of the 3d instant took place between the secretary and the British minister and Hon. McKenzie Bowell and Hon. George E. Foster. Hon. J. W. Foster also appeared on the behalf of the government of the United States at the request of the secretary of state. The president says:

The result of the conference as to the practicability of arranging a reciprocity treaty with the Dominion of Canada clearly stated in the letter of Mr. Blaine and was anticipated, I think, by him and every thoughtful American who has considered the subject. A reciprocity treaty limited to the exchange of natural products would have been such only in form. The benefits of such a treaty would have inured almost wholly to Canada. Previous experiments on this line had been satisfactory to this government. A treaty that should be reciprocal in fact and of mutual advantage must necessarily have embraced manufactured articles and secured to the United States free or favored introduction of these articles into Canada as against other nations; but it was not believed that the Canadian ministry was ready to propose or assent to such an arrangement.

THE CANADIAN CONCLUSION.

The conclusion of the Canadian commissioners is stated in the report of Mr. Blaine as follows: "In the second place, it seemed to be impossible for the Canadian government, in view of its present political relations and obligations, to extend to American goods a preferential treatment over those of other countries. As Canada was a part of the British empire, they did not consider it competent for the dominion government to enter into any commercial arrangements with the United States from the benefits of which Great Britain and the colonies should be excluded."

It is not for this government to argue against this announcement of the Canadian official opinion. It must be accepted, however, I think, as the statement of a condition which places an insurmountable barrier in the way of the attainment of that large and beneficial intercourse and reciprocal trade between the United States and the dominion. Mr. Blaine reports as one of the official results of the conference, "An informal arrangement to repeal and abandon the drawback of 18 cents a ton given to wheat (grain) that is carried through Montreal and shipped from there to Europe. By the American railways running from Ogdensburg and Oswego and other American ports the shippers paid the full 20 cents a ton, while in effect those by the way of Montreal is only 2 cents. It was understood that the Canadian commissioners, who were all three members of the cabinet, would see to the withdrawal of this discrimination."

From the report of the recent conference by Mr. Foster it will be seen that the Canadian commissioners declare that this statement does not conform to the understanding, and that the only assurance they had intended to give was that the complaint of the government of the United States should be taken into consideration by the Canadian ministry on their return to Ottawa. Mr. Foster, who was present at the first conference, confirms the statement of Mr. Blaine. While this misunderstanding is unfortunate, the is that instead of rescinding the discriminating canal tolls of which this government complains the Canadian ministry, after the return of the commissioners from their visit from Washington on April 4, reissued without any communication with this government the order containing the discrimination by which a rebate of 18 cents a ton is allowed upon grain going to Montreal, but not to American ports, and refusing this rebate even to grain going to Montreal if transshipped at an American port. The report of Mr. Partridge, the solicitor of the department of state, which accompanies the letter of the secretary of state, states these discriminations very clearly. These orders as to canal tolls rebates are in direct violation of article 27 of the treaty of 1871, as seems to be clear. It is wholly evasive to say that there is no discrimination between Canadian and American vessels, that the rebate is allowed to both without favor upon grain carried through to Montreal, or transshipped at Canadian ports to Montreal. The treaty runs:

"To secure to the citizens of the United States the use of the Welland, St. Lawrence and other canals in the dominion on terms of equality with the inhabitants of the dominion."

It was intended to give to consumers in the United States, to our people engaged in railroad transportation, and to those exporting from our ports equal terms in passing their merchandise through these canals. This absolute equality of the statement was considered for concessions on the part of this government made in the same article of the treaty, and which have been faithfully kept. It is a matter of regret that the Canadian government has not responded promptly to our request for the removal of these discriminating tolls. The papers submitted show how serious the loss inflicted is upon our lake vessels and upon some of our lake ports. In view of the fact that the Canadian commissioners still contest with us the claim that these tolls are discriminating and insist that they constitute no violation of the letter and spirit of article 27 of the treaty, it would seem appropriate that congress, if the view held by the executive is approved, should with deliberation and yet with promptness take such steps as may be necessary to secure the just rights of our citizens. In view of the delays which have already taken place in transmitting this correspondence to congress I have not felt justified in awaiting the further communication from the government of Canada which was suggested in the recent conference. Should any proposition relating to this matter be received, it would immediately be submitted for the consideration of the senate, and forwarded within the time suggested will undoubtedly anticipate any final action of congress."

The president encloses a report from Secretary Blaine and also one from Mr. Foster on the same subject.

A Frightful Fall.

While driving down Third street north, Minneapolis, this morning at 12:30, Levi N. Patterson, the Twelfth street druggist, met with a frightful accident. He drove over the stone abutments at the intersection of Third street and Fourth avenue south. He was precipitated, together with his horse and carriage, to the railroad tracks below. The horse was killed and the carriage smashed, but Mr. Patterson was picked up shortly afterward still breathing. He was taken to his home at 1531 First avenue south, and will probably die.

HURON, S. D., Special, June 20.—Last night fire totally destroyed the Hyde county court house at Highmore. Most of the furniture and all the county records were saved.

BECOMING EXCITING.

Opinions of Norwegian Lutherans Differ on Some Points.

DAWSON, Minn., Special, June 21.—When President Herman called the meeting of the Lutheran conference to order to-day everybody expected to see a lively discussion and a big day's work accomplished. The convention proceeded to elect the following trustees of the united churches; Nels Jacobson, Hon. Ole Nelson, Olaf Hoff. The committee on translation appointed to translate opinions of lawyers on points of law, Prof. G. Lund, N. C. Brun, Rev. A. C. Anderson. A motion to order opinions of Attorneys W. S. Pattee and Seldon Bacon translated as to the legality of transferring Augsburg seminary and St. Olaf's school to the United Norwegian Lutheran church was lost. Prof. Oftedahl called for the ayes and nays, the first direct test of relative strength of the factions. The motion was again overwhelmingly defeated. The delegates denounced the proceedings as filibustering to delay business. The discussion over school matters waxed warm in the afternoon. The remaining three days will be interesting.

Unable to Agree.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—The conferees on the river and harbor appropriation bill are not making progress towards an agreement. A far-reaching and amicable understanding relative to nearly all of the important points of disagreement between the two houses the conference failed completely to agree upon the two senate amendments embodying the Lake Washington canal and the Dalles boat railway projects. They reported this disagreement to their respective houses and were instructed to insist upon the disagreement. They have carried out this instruction to the letter and, indeed, so faithfully that the idea of a free conference with the intention to reconcile the differences seems to have cut no figure, for the other side was not willing to surrender a single point. So the prospect of speedy action upon the bill is not particularly encouraging.

Weaver a Favorite.

HURON, S. D., Special, June 21.—A car load of delegates to the Independent state convention at Redfield to-morrow were here to-day. Weaver of Iowa is their choice for president and Loucks of this city for vice president, provided he will not accept the nomination for governor. Both will be in Redfield to-morrow. Not one of the crowd talked in favor of fusion.

Trainmen Killed.

MONTREAL, June 21.—A local passenger train was ditched near Hillhurst on the Grand Trunk to-day. A washout, caused by a cloud burst, was the cause. The engineer, fireman and Express Messenger Baron were killed. The mail clerk, a passenger named Clement, two section hands and two brakemen were injured.

Murray County Alliance.

SLAYTON, Minn., Special, June 21.—The Murray county Alliance held its annual convention to-day and elected L. Mason president and A. Baker secretary. H. F. Pfeifer was elected to represent the county at the People's party state convention and instructed to vote for Donnelly for governor. Donnelly was present and delivered an address.

Placating Platt.

NEW YORK, June 21.—The Herald says that ex-Senator Thomas C Platt received his first overture from the Harrison administration yesterday. Secretary Tracy met him at the Manhattan Beach hotel. The conference was a satisfactory one. Just what was asked of Mr. Platt and what was promised to him it will be impossible to say until these things develop during the approaching campaign.

Held for Manslaughter.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, Wis., Special, June 21.—Doctors Nusle and Merkel, whose preliminary examination on the charge of manslaughter has been continued two days, were this afternoon held to the circuit court for trial, and bail fixed at $2,000 each.

Was It All a Farce?

CHICAGO, June 21.—In Judge Hutchinson's court to-day the indictment against ex-Ald. Michaelson, of the Fifteenth ward charge with conspiracy to bribe, was nolle prossed. It is believed that similar action will be taken in the case of Ald. Bowler. These are the last of the so-called aldermanic boodle cases, of which all have been dismissed.

Oct. 21 a National Holiday.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—In the senate today, on motion of Mr. Pettigrew of South Dakota, the house amendment to the senate bill authorizing the president to issue a proclamation making Oct. 21, 1892, a national holiday, commemorative of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America, was concurred in. The amendment substituted Oct. 21 for Oct. 12.

Trains Abandoned.

RAPID CITY, S. D., June 21.—Business in Western Dakota towns on the Elkhorn line is seriously embarrassed by the delay of mail, due to washouts. No through trains have arrived since the 15th and none are expected before Wednesday.

Against the Police.

New York Advertiser: The political campaign in Ireland is growing hot, and the shillalah and cobblestone arguments of the factions are leaving deep impressions upon the minds of the voters. It is cheering to observe that when these debates are at their height the appearance of the police is a signal for all hands, of whatever faith, to fall to and demolish [illegible] "dogs." There is a unity of purpose, it seems, on the part of the Parnellites and anti-Parnellites in their hatred of the constabulary as a condition precedent to a free discussion of the issues. Arragh!

Medary; secretary, L. F. Easton. W. E. Sawyer was substituted for F. A. Copeland as a director. The proposition to build two store rooms in the front of the theater was argued but no action taken.

Messrs. Quinby and Ormes of Duluth, and L. T. McCarty, manager of the Columbus Hocking Coal, Ashland, secured a twenty years lease of a tract of land on the Redcliff Indian reservation thought to have as fine brown stone as exists along the shores of Lake Superior. The lease was obtained some time ago by Tomkins, Merrill & Smith, of Ashland, Nelson Bach and S. D. Bouton and other parties of Bayfield. The new lessees secured an assignment from those parties. The property belongs to the heirs of the Deragon estate. The Deragons are of French and Indian descent and while realizing for many years that the property was valuable have been unable to develop it. The new concern will at once put in machinery costing $20,000, and all necessary docks for handling a large amount of stone.

IOWA.

Wm. Bain, the abductor, at Independence, secured the necessary $2,500 bail and was released.

William Humphrey, a wealthy prominent farmer near Brush Creek, was found dead in his barn; heart disease.

James Murray, a wealthy farmer living near Lawler, fell from a load of hay, striking on his head, producing concussion of the brain.

The town of Moville, twenty-two miles east of Sioux City, was almost wiped out by fire. Twenty-two business houses and several residences were destroyed. The loss is $90,000 partially insured.

The semi-annual meeting of the Iowa Union Medical Society was held at Cedar Rapids, with a large number of prominent physicians in attendance. Several valuable papers were read.

Contracts were signed for the construction of shops for the Rock Island Railroad Company in the western part of Des Moines. The estimated cost is $125,000 and work will begin at once. Their completion is expected to work some important changes in the divisions in Iowa.

A Mason City special says: Three days of excessive hot weather has brought out the corn in good shape, and there is every reason to hope that the yield will be equal to that of last year. The thermometer for the past three days has registered up in the nineties and farmers are not at all discouraged at the prospects.

Reverend Father Burke, pastor of the Cathedral at Dubuque; and Fred W. Carberry had a narrow escape from death. They were returning from Sinsinaw Mound Academy during the storm, and as they passed a tree a bolt of lightning struck it and descended within a few feet of the carriage wheels. Both were badly shocked, as was the team they were driving.

Coleman and Ryan, the Chicago safeblowers held at Dubuque for burglarizing the New Albin postoffice May 31, will be arraigned for burglarizing the Dickeyville, Wis., postoffice May 23. Postmistress Longbathad has identified as her property the watch Coleman mailed from Houston, Minn to his mistress, Mike McDonald's divorced wife, in Chicago, together with the New Albin stamps.

THEY GLORY IN A GOAT.

A Welsh Regiment Has One That Marches Ahead of the Soldiers.

The Welsh fusileers, the old Twenty-third, are a very ancient corps. They were embodied in 1689, and it was, the Pall Mall Budget believes, at an early period of their existence that the custom of having a goat, with a shield and garland on its horns, to march at the head of the drums, first obtained. Grose, in his "Military Antiquities," mentions this custom as follows:

"The royal regiment of Welsh fusileers has the privileged honor of passing in review, preceded by a goat with gilded horns, and adorned with ringlets of flowers; and, although this may not come immediately under the denomination of a reward of merit, yet the corps values itself much on the ancientness of the custom. Every 1st of March, being the anniversary of their tutelar saint, David, the officers give a splendid entertainment to all the Welsh brethren; and after the cloth is taken away a bumper is filled round to H. R. H., the prince of Wales, whose health is always drunk the first on that day, the band playing the old tune of "The Noble Race of Shenkin." At that time a handsome drummer boy, elegantly dressed, mounted on the goat, richly caparisoned for the occasion, is led thrice around the table in procession by the drum major. It happened in 1775, in Boston, that the animal gave such a spring from the floor that he dropped his rider, upon the table, and then, bounding over the heads of some officers, he ran to the barracks with all his trappings, to the no small joy of the garrison.

In 1884, the then regimental goat died, and to compensate the Twenty-third for their loss, her majesty presented the regiment with two of the finest goats from a flock—the gift of the shah of Persia—in Windsor park; and since that date the queen has continued to supply the royal Welsh fusileers with goats as the occasion has required.

A meeting was held in the village hall last Monday evening to make arrangements for celebrating the 4th of July at this place. A large number of citizens attended and over $100 was raised. The various committees were appointed and, judging by the way they have gone to work, we will have the best celebration ever held here.

The People's party Congressional convention for the seventh congressional district, was held at Moorhead yesterday. 151 delegates were present every county in the district being represented. H. E. Bowen, of Otter Tail county was nominated for congress on the first ballot. Andrew Steenerson, E. E. Lomen and G. W. Swift of this county were also candidates. If Polk county had presented a solid front and united on one man the result might have been different.

A man who stops his paper because there is something in it he does not like should be consistent; get up and leave a hotel table if he happens to discover on the bill of fare something that does not suit his taste. He would be just as consistant in one act as the other, A good newspaper is a bill of mental food for as many tastes as possible, and the reader ought to know that the article which doesn't suit him is just to the taste of nearly every reader of the paper The man who insists on baying everything exactly to his individual taste should buy the material, edit and print one for himself and permit no one else to read it.—Cheney Sentinel.

TO MY PATRONS.

The SPECTATOR, which from its inception to the present, has been published as a Republican paper, for reasons to be stated in our next issue, has severed its connection with that party and will hereafter be found in the ranks of the People's party. In our issue of June 15th inst. we stated our objections to the Republican nominees for president and vice president; and as soon as the season of conventions and political gatherings is over and we are again allowed to give our attention to business, we will furnish you the reasons why we could no longer remain with the old party, and why we were induced to cast our lot with the new. The SPECTATOR, in the future will maintain the principles of the People's party and will fight its battles as vigerously as it has fought those of the party it has left.

O HELEN, HELEN DEAR!

How lightly up the winding stair
We ran together, she and I;
And still I see her lovely face
Look downward from the landing place;
For she outsped me. Through the gloom
Of the great hall, into her room,
She led me on that summer day,
In years that fled too quickly by.

I pray you, if you ever pass
This sunken grave within the grass,
Touch tenderly the crumbling stone,
And say, for me, in undertone—
"O Helen, Helen dear!"

How fair she was, how straight and tall,
My Helen in that far off day!
Like living things that longed to go,
The curtains fluttered to and fro,
As up and down the room we walked,
Perhaps of love and lovers talked,
As girls have always done, and will,
And nothing whispered "yea" or "nay."

I pray you, if you ever pass
This sunken grave within the grass,
Touch tenderly the crumbling stone,
And say, for me, in undertone—
"O Helen, Helen dear!"

What trifling things the heart will keep!
They seem too simple to be told.
That day she lifted from its place
A dainty thing of flowers and lace,
And held it up that I might see.
Oh, little bonnet, plain to me,
Your ribbon streams across the mist,
A shadowy streak of palest gold!

I pray you, if you ever pass,
This sunken grave within the grass,
Touch tenderly the crumbling stone,
And say, for me, in undertone—
"O Helen, Helen dear!"

The German Empire.

The case of the Grand Duke of Hesse and his brother potentates forms one of the most interesting phases in the German situation of today, and one must know something about it in order to understand the current of German affairs. Germany, as well as the United States, has a dual system of government, though hers is in other respects very unlike ours. There the big state of Prussia has three-fifths the area of the whole, and in round numbers about thirty millions out of fifty million population.

Her king is at the same time German emperor. Consequently Prussia is the cock of the walk in Germany, and behind her come tagging along with a more or less degree of dignity some twenty-five states, of which three are kingdoms, ranging in importance from Bavaria, which has the population of Belgium or Holland and the area of both, whose capital, Munich, is one of the finest cities in Europe, down to the principality of Schaumburg-Lippe, which an active Kentuckian could come very near jumping across.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The Grave of Penn's Surveyor.

In a little clump of woods just off the line and to the eastward of the Bustleton branch of the Pennsylvania railroad, one mile from the village of Holmesburg, lies the body of Thomas Holme, the man who, as surveyor general for William Penn, laid out the city of Philadelphia. The little cemetery in which the body of Holme lies is so isolated and so unfrequented that a stranger could not well find it without the aid of a guide. In it, besides the body of the great surveyor, there are a hundred or more graves of those of his descendants.

In the center of this acre and a half devoted by the Holme family to the burial of their dead stands a little white marble monument, erected by private subscription in 1863. The inscription on this monument reads: "In memory of Thomas Holme, died 1695, aged seventy-one years. Surveyor general of William Penn. He drafted the plan and laid out the city of Philadelphia."—Philadelphia Record.

Lightning Doesn't Strike Indians.

In the course of his New Haven lecture Rev. Thomas S. Dana, an educated Indian, made this singular statement: "The Indians never cook anything in the house. They always cook outside, giving as their only reason that if they cook inside the steam will collect in their clothing and draw the lightning. Whether this is truth or not I do not know, but I do know this: No Indian wigwam has been struck by lightning since the dawn of history, and no Indian has been killed by lightning for more than 100 years."

The Value of Walking.

A sharp walk every morning at daybreak is excellent. Indeed walking is the very best form of exercise. It puts all the muscles of the body in play. It is far better in this respect than horseback riding or driving. Carriage riding is not a form of exercise at all. It is merely easy airing. It is good for the health and spirits, but it is no aid to muscular development. Running, jumping, swimming, climbing are all excellent forms of athletic exercise.—New York Tribune.

Imported Negroes.

In the suburbs of Mobile reside a number of negroes, the decendants of and part of the last cargo of slaves brought into the United States in 1861. They have never associated with other negroes, are but partially civilized, still use their native language, and are ruled by a queen of their own choosing. They enjoy a good reputation for industry and honesty, and their colony is one of the curiosities most eagerly viewed by sightseers.—Exchange.

Rathite, a New Material.

Rathite is the name of a new rubber preparation that comes from France. It is made of vulcanized caoutchouc and silk and has, it is said, high elasticity with great durability.—New York Journal.

A Story That Illustrates the Amenities of Life in a Flat.

The boy in the second flat has friends, and he and his friends make so much noise that they keep the baby in the first flat awake. Consequently the mother of the baby in the first flat made complaint to the people in the second flat, and that availing nothing studied deeply to devise some way of stopping the racket.

And as she debated with herself there was a rattle above her head as some one rang the doorbell of the second flat, and looking up she saw that the doorbell wire ran through the corner of the room she was in. There was a look of triumph on her face as she got out a cane with a curved handle and sat down to await developments.

The next time that the boy above tried to jump over the dining room table she hooked the cane on the wire and gave it a jerk. The noise ceased and some man came down to the door. There was evidently a consultation when he went back, and it was fully ten minutes before the boy and his friends started in for a game of "tag." When they did the little woman in the flat below gave the cane another jerk and there was another trip to the door.

The people in the second flat seemed to be troubled when the man came back and, after a council of war he crept quietly down the stairs again and waited just inside the door, while the others took positions at the top of the stairs, where they could see the fun. Ten or fifteen minutes tired them all, and with the remark, "Well, I guess those kids are not coming back," he started up the stairs. As he did so the boy's spirits overcame him again, and he gave a war whoop and tried to turn a handspring.

The little woman in the flat below promptly jerked the cane again, the bell tinkled, and the man on the stairs rushed down, threw the door open and chased the boy who happened to be passing half a block.

"I guess that'll settle it," he said, when he returned, all out of breath. "I'd have licked that boy if I could have caught him."

"Ought to have jumped on him with both feet!" said the boy who made the noise, and as he tried to illustrate his remarks the little woman in the flat below pulled on the cane again.

There was a wild scramble down the stairs, and two men started around the block in different directions. When they came back one of them rapped on the door of the little woman's flat.

"I beg your pardon," he said courteously. "Have you noticed anything wrong around here tonight?"

"Why, yes," she returned pleasantly, "the doorbell"——

"Do you know who's doing it?" he interrupted.

"The boy upstairs," she replied. "He plays football or something and shakes the house so that he rings all the bells in addition to waking up my baby."

The boy isn't so noisy now.—Chicago Tribune.

A Remarkable Clock.

Japan possesses a remarkable timepiece. It is contained in a frame three feet wide and five feet long, representing a noonday landscape of great beauty. In the foreground plum and cherry trees and rich plants appear in full bloom; in the rear is seen a hill, gradual in ascent, from which apparently flows a cascade, admirably imitated in crystal. From this point a threadlike stream meanders, encircling rocks and islands in its windings, and finally losing itself in a faroff stretch of woodland.

In a miniature sky a golden sun turns on a silver wire, striking the hours on silver gongs as it passes. Each hour is marked on the frame by a creeping tortoise, which serves the place of a hand. A bird of exquisite plumage warbles at the close of each hour, and as the song ceases a mouse sallies forth from a neighboring grotto, and scampering over the hill to the garden is soon lost to view.—Iron.

Points in Pronunciation.

"Viola," Grinnell, Ia., asks, "What is the correct pronunciation of 'New Orleans?'" Over toward Boston they follow the Websterian style and mince it into four syllables, with the accent on the antepenult. In New Jersey, Missouri and states of like culture they speak it in three syllables, with the accent heavily on the last. In the Crescent city, where they are supposed to know how to lisp it in its purity, they cut it down to two syllables, "Nor-lins," with the accent on the first. So with the name of the Alamo city, San Antonio. Webster gives it five syllables. But "San-tone," with the accent on the "tone," seems to be the popular way of pronouncing it in Bexar county.—Chicago News.

Just a Shade of Difference.

When a man shrugs his shoulders (a very feminine accomplishment) at the mention of another man's name, what conclusions are drawn by the generality of people? Is the maligned man thought less of? Rather people begin to delve and wonder what the cause, what the motive for this detraction.

They wonder if it is malice; if the slandered one has been more successful in business or perhaps, having good judgment, has found the real character of the pretender, and consequently spurned him; perhaps the injured man has been a rival for some fair girl's affection and won. These are some of the thoughts which come to us when, contrary to all manly principles, one man slanders or even detracts another man's reputation. I suppose you know the difference between detraction and slander. There's a shade of difference, you know, only a shade.—Philadelphia Music and Drama.

THEY GLORY IN A GOAT.

A Welsh Regiment Has One That Marches Ahead of the Soldiers.

The Welsh fusileers, the old Twenty-third, are a very ancient corps. They were embodied in 1680, and it was, the Pall Mall Budget believes, at an early period of their existence that the custom of having a goat, with a shield and garland on its horns, to march at the head of the drums, first obtained. Grose, in his "Military Antiquities," mentions this custom as follows:

"The royal regiment of Welsh fusileers has the privileged honor of passing in review, preceded by a goat with gilded horns, and adorned with ringlets of flowers; and, although this may not come immediately under the denomination of a reward of merit, yet the corps values itself much on the ancientness of the custom. Every 1st of March, being the anniversary of their tutelar saint, David, the officers give a splendid entertainment to all the Welsh brethren; and after the cloth is taken away a bumper is filled round to H. R. H., the prince of Wales, whose health is always drunk the first on that day, the band playing the old tune of "The Noble Race of Shenkin." At that time a handsome drummer boy, elegantly dressed, mounted on the goat, richly caparisoned for the occasion, is led thrice around the table in procession by the drum major. It happened in 1775, in Boston, that the animal gave such a spring from the floor that he dropped his rider upon the table, and then, bounding over the heads of some officers, he ran to the barracks with all his trappings, to the no small joy of the garrison.

In 1884, the then regimental goat died, and to compensate the Twenty-third for their loss, her majesty presented the regiment with two of the finest goats from a flock—the gift of the shah of Persia—in Windsor park; and since that date the queen has continued to supply the royal Welsh fusileers with goats as the occasion has required.

Cooking Dried Fruits.

Every one does not know how to cook dried fruits properly. This is oftentimes the reason why more people do not like them. Prunes and apricots are delicious, if prepared in the right way. They should be washed and soaked in cold water for twenty-four hours; then the kettle with its contents should be placed on the stove and heated to a boiling point. Let this simmer for three or four hours, not adding the sugar until half an hour before the fruit is taken up. It will be almost jellied, and when served with cream it makes a delicious desert.—Food.

All gone—woman's suffering and woman's weakness. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription puts a stop to it. It's a remedy for all the delicate derangements and disorders that make her suffer, and a cure for all the diseases and disturbances that make her weak. It's a legitimate medicine, that corrects and cures; a tonic that invigorates and builds up; a nervine that soothes and strengthens. For bearing-down pains, displacements, all the functional irregularities peculiar to the sex, it's a safe and certain remedy.

Other medicines claim to cure? That's true. But they don't claim to do this: if the Favorite Prescription fails to give satisfaction, in any case for which it's recommended, the money paid for it is refunded.

THE GREAT HESPER.

TALE OF A BIG DIAMOND

How an Immense Gem Was Lost, Recovered, and Lost Again.

CHAPTER XX.—Continued.

What was I to do? I dared not try to pull myself hand over hand up the wet rope, for the slightest relaxation of my hold might allow the rope to slip, and I should be lost assuredly.

"Dear, are you there still?" Lola called from above.

"Yes," I replied.

"Here is the rope,—when I call, you can trust yourself to it."

At the same time I felt the knotted rope dangling against my shoulders.

"Now she called.

It was not an instant too soon. I felt the wet rope slipping through my hands. Leaving go with one hand, I clutched out wildly for the knotted rope, and by the happiest chance succeeded in seizing it.

I got a cross-piece between my feet, and I was comparatively safe, if Lola had strength to hold on for a few moments. But that I might not tax her too greatly, I still grasped the wet rope.

"Saved," I called out to her.

"Not for long," shouted Van Hoeck from the opposite side, and I heard the snap of the spring as he closed the breechloader, and then the "click" as he cocked the piece.

Would he shoot me or the girl? I asked myself in that moment.

He fired, and the ringing shot was followed by a sharp cry of pain from above, and the cross-piece on which I stood gave a little jerk, but no more. She must have escaped, despite that cry, or she could not still have held on to the rope.

But terrible as these thoughts that passed though my mind in those brief moments were, they were banished from my mind by a yet more terrific appeal to my senses.

Following almost immediately upon the crack of the rifle and Lola's cry, a mass of rock, probably disintegrated by the frost, and started from its place by the vibration of the shoot, slid down the face of the precipice, hurtled against a rock, and some moments after fell with a deep "pong" into the water below.

But, as if this had been the keystone of the fabric that upheld the mighty weight of the enormous rock that covered the chasm, its fall was followed by the crumbling away and precipitation of others at intervals rapidly decreasing, their fall eventually becoming a continual down-pour, marked now and then by a louder crash as some larger block gave way.

The roar of artillery, the peal of thunder, was not to be compared with the awful din as the great rock jerked downward as the quartz splintered and gave way under it, shattering and grinding the opposing rocks, and brusting away huge fragments that struck from side to side as they hurtled down, tearing and splitting the very heart of the mountain, as it seemed.

The fall was most violent at some distance away from us further down the ravine; only an occasional block, ground under the great mass as it jerked down, was shattered to pieces, and fell in dust and rubble about us.

But our turn was at hand.

It seemed to me as if the last day had come, and the world were crumbling to pieces. To the terror of an earthquake was added the horror of impenetrable darkness, and the consciousness that the gigantic rock that vaulted the abyss was slowly jerking down upon us. I must have kept my hold upon the rock by instinct: I had no consciousness of volition.

The awful eruption had continued for some moments—scarcely so long as one might take to read this description—with increasing intensity, when suddenly, with an appalling crash, the great roof tilted up. I saw the earth slowly gape above me, letting in the blinding sunlight; and then the upper lip of jagged rock, reaching its highest elevation, shot sidelong away, making visible the long strip of blue heaven between towering peaks of the mountain.

One last "pong" as the rock wedged itself afresh lower down the precipice, and then all was still. The sight of the blue sky, the sense of the relief, were too much for me. I trembled violently, and, for a moment, I thought I must relinquish my hold. But a piteous cry from Lola nerved me to fresh effort.

I saw now the two cut ropes, and, grasping one in each hand, I drew myself up, using the knotted ropes as I could; and so presently I scrambled upon the ledge.

Lola was lying upon the ground, drawn against the rock around which she had passed the knotted cord. The ball had struck her, and she had fallen; but the devoted girl had passed the noose around her body, and so saved my life for the second time. I knelt beside her, and raised her head. She opened her beautiful eyes, and smiled, as she took my hand. She could do no more.

CHAPTER XXI.

"I knowed it must go one day. How fares it, pardner?" called Brace from the opposite ledge.

Looking across, I saw him sitting on the boulder binding his arm with his neckcloth.

"Lola is hit. The villain has done his work." I said.

"He'll never do no more," Brace answered, pointing up the ledge.

Van Hoeck had tried to escape the way he came, after shooting Lola, and had got some distance along the ledge, when the great rock opened and slid away.

He stood on the narrow path now, a ghastly spectacle. A piece of quartz had struck him on the head; a thin stream of blood was trickling down his cheek. In one hand he held the Great Hesper; in the other he grasped his rifle.

But he dared not move from the position he had reached when the roof tilted up; for the light that burst in had blinded him once more. The pupils closed over the sensitive retinas, and the blank, sightless eyes stared wildly round, incapable of seeing.

It was possible for Brace to reach him by going along the ledge.

"Will you save him?" I asked.

"Not I, pardner," he replied. "I leave him to Providence, be his end what it may. The shot he fired at my poor youngster started the consarn, and brought the whole thing down. 'Tis God Almighty's judgment. Let it be."

Van Hoeck let the rifle slip from his hand; how insignificant to us seemed the sound that came up from below, as the weapon struck a rock, after the mighty discord that had thundered in our ears, and yet to him how terribly significant!

We could see his hand quivering as he groped along the edge of the wall.

In vain now he strained his eyes to see the ledge by which he had followed us. Yet he could not stand forever there.

He found a crevice for his fingers, and made a step forward; he advanced again, but the rock he put his foot on was a piece of the debris that had fallen upon the ledge. It rolled under his weight. He staggered back, swinging his arms in the vain attempt to gain an equilibrium, then he shot forward, and fell headlong down, down, down into the abyss.

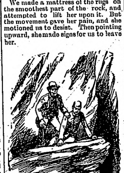
I held my breath; it seemed minutes before that hollow "pong" reached our ears, telling us that Van Hoeck was gone forever, and the Great Hesper with him.

* * * * * * * *

There was cord, and to spare, in the coils. Weighting one end with a stone, I threw an end across to Brace; and, when the cut ropes were knotted, and a bridge once more formed, he crossed and knelt down by me over poor Lola.

He examined her wound, and shook his head in silence: there was no hope.

We made a mattress of the rugs on the smoothest part of the rock, and attempted to lift her upon it. But the movement gave her pain, and she motioned us to desist. Then pointing upward, she made signs for us to leave her.



"THE KID'S GONE."

"Not while you are with us, my poor gel," said her father, with more tenderness than I had ever heard in his voice.

We had the flask, and some food in a wallet. We ate when we were hungry, seated beside Lola.

Then exhausted with fatigue, and the terrible strain we had been subjected to, we unconsciously fell asleep, with our backs resting against the rock. The last thing of which I was conscious was the pressing of Lola's lips upon my hand.

* * * * * * *

Brace touched my arm.

"Pardner," he said, in a tone of awe, "the Kid's gone."

I looked where I had seen her lying with her face to my hand. She was gone literally. There was a little stain of blood upon the rock,—a drop further on, another close to the edge of the platform. She had kept her promise,—she had been good; and now the sufferings of her short life were ended.

"She knew it was no good our waitin'; poor little cuss."

I felt something in my hand; opening it, I found a ring I had bought for Lola. She had slipped it there before she went.

* * * * * * * *

Sir Edmund and Edith came to San Diego in June, the loveliest season of that lovely land. The air from the sea tempered the sun's heat. The plantations were already burdened with fruit, everywhere there was a redolence of orange blossom,—"a very suggestive fragrance, my dear fellow," said the Baronet, pressing my hand.

Edith was charmed with all she saw.

"Is this my home?" she asked.

I turned to Sir Edmund,

"Well, we must go through the formality of looking at the books, my dear," said he.

I had no hesitation in showing them, and when he had seen the splendid results they already showed, he formally sanctioned a renewal of our engagement; but we had not waited for that consent to let our hearts join in unconstrained delight.

Our second engagement was happily longer than the first, but we were married the week after the vines were cleared.

Brace was at our wedding breakfast. When it was over, he took some of the flowers from the table and disappeared for some days. I knew how he had spent the brief holiday. If I had entertained any doubt, it would have been dispelled when, on his return, he took the old agreement from his pocket and pointed to the postscript:

It is understood between the above partners that, in the event of a lucky find, the Kid shall not be forgotten."

And, indeed, in my wife I had found a dearer prize than any I had dreamed of when I signed the compact.

THE END.

Not an Enemy in the World.

When Narvaez, Duke of Valencia, lay on his deathbed, the arch-bishop of Granada stood by his side, endeavoring to prepare him for the great change.

"I trust that you have pardoned all your enemies, that you also may receive forgiveness."

"I have no enemies," said the dying man.

"But, your Excellency, a man who has been so long in office as you have——"

"I haven't one, I tell you."

"Still, it is just possible——"

"Not one, I repeat."

"Pardon me, your Excellency——"

Losing his patience Narvaez raised himself up with what strength he had left and said to the archbishop:—

"Look here, I have no enemies; I had them all shot, and there's an end of it!"—La Illustracion.

CAN'T CATCH HIM.

He's the right man for the office—it's been seeking him for years.
Has traced him from the basement to the highest flight of stairs;
From the city to the village it has followed him with tears—
Has sighed for him and cried for him with pleadings and with prayers.
But somehow it can not find him
With his country's wreath to bind him:
It is always miles behind him—
So elusive he appears!

He's the right man for the office for his cash he doesn't care,
For he wants to serve his country as a patriot sincere;
He would perish in her service—hold her beautiful and dear—
If he didn't get a nickle for his labor in a year!
But his country can not find him,
With her chains of love to bind him;
It is still long miles behind him,
And he's running like a deer!

—Atlanta Constitution

THE BATTLE.

The night had passed, the day had come,
Beam-horn, into a cloudless sky:
We heard the rolling of the drum,
And saw the war-flags fly.

And noon had crowded upon morn
Ere conflict shook her red locks far,
And blew her brazen battle horn
Upon the hills of war.

Noon dwindled into dusk—one blot
Along the west, of phantom suns;
We heard the scream of shell and shot,
And booming of the guns.

On batteries that belched their grape,
We saw the thundering cavalry
Hurl headlong; iron shape on shape
Launch spear-like on and die.

And dusk had settled into night,
Rain-riddled; and I slept again.
To dream of many a bivouac-light
And vast fields heaped with slain.

MYRTLE'S MARRIAGE;

Or, Almost Sacrificed.

MR. DIGBY LAWSON, a young traveler, was driven to take shelter during a snow-storm in a lonely house. There were two women there when he entered, one elderly and sullen-looking, who prepared his supper for him, and a slender, black-eyed creature rocking slowly in front of the fire, whom the former addressed as Myrtle.

He found out in the course of the evening that the younger of the two was the step-daughter and that she was insane. There seemed to be a settled antagonism between them, and Lawson could not help wondering what the mystery was of that lonely house and if the step-daughter really was insane.

When he was with Myrtle alone a few minutes he questioned her and found she spoke rationally and sensibly. The step-mother returning again, she questioned him eagerly about what the daughter had said to him, but he only shrugged his shoulders, for he did not like her looks.

Before he drove away he was introduced to the woman's son, Stephen Bird, a red-face, coarse-looking man, who seemed to take a great interest in Myrtle.

He found, on reaching the village and making inquiries, that the woman who entertained him was named Phebe Andros. She had been housekeeper to Myrtle's father, who finally married her, and, dying soon afterward, left her guardian to his daughter and her large property.

She was now trying to marry the girl to Stephen Bird, and it was hinted some coersion was used.

All the rest of his journey Lawson thought of that girl's hard fate, and pitied her. When business brought him around again over the same route he could not resist the impulse of calling at the lonely house.

He had no very sufficient excuse for calling, but he found it difficult to pass. The sight of a face at one of the sitting-room windows, which might be Myrtle's, decided him.

He got off his horse, and went slowly up the path to the house.

The face disappeared from the window and presented itself at the door before he had time to knock. It was Myrtle's but it had grown thinner to haggardness, and the great black eyes, circled with shadows, seemed to have absorbed all the vitality of the small, slender figure.

"Miss Myrtle," he exclaimed, "are you ill?"

She laughed.

"If I am, my disease is named Stephen Bird. Have you come back, sir, to test the tender hospitalities of my step-mamma?"

"I was passing, and seeing your face at the window, thought I would call a few moments. Aren't you going to invite me in?"

"Not I. I shall be locked up again if you come in."

"Again?"

She nodded. "Step-mamma turned the key upon me when you were here before. That is nothing uncommon. People who have such limber tongues as mine often have to be locked up, step-mamma says."

The mockery of her tone and the look was something indescribable. She had the air of one goaded to desperation. Digby noticed that her little hands, as she held them loosely clasped before her, trembled with nervousness.

He looked at her anxiously. "Miss Myrtle," he said, "I may be presumptous, but it seems to me you are in trouble. You have spoken to me with a frankness for which I may be indebted both to circumstances and your whim. But it appears to me that you have spoken out of a full heart. I should like to be of service to you."

The dark face lighted electrically, and clouded again.

"I don't know how you can," she said, gloomily.

"Tell me just what the trouble is."

She glanced over her shoulder.

"It is a wonder step-mamma is not here before now. I haven't any trouble but Stephen Bird," she said, jarringly. "He'll be the death of me, if I live long enough."

"Do they want you to marry him?"

She nodded.

"And you wont?"

"And I wont, most emphatically!"

"Have you said so?"

"About twenty-four times a day for the past year."

"Why don't you run away?"

"Where would I run to? Everybody is on her side."

"I am not. Will you marry me, Myrtle—that is, if I give you satisfactory evidence of respectability?"

Myrtle shrank a little, and her face turned scarlet, but she said simply:

"I like you; I did from the first. It would not be very hard to marry you, and be forever free of Stephen Bird."

"Be at the gate, then, at dusk. I will come by in a carriage."

Myrtle gave him her hand on it, and went in just in time to intercept her step-mamma in the hall. But she came from the back part of the house, and had seen nothing.

At dusk Digby Lawson drove slowly past the Andros gate. It swung wide as he did so, and Myrtle ran out.

They were married within a few hours, and the intensity of the chagrin and amazement of Stephen Bird and his mother it would be impossible to portray.

A BAD COMBINATION.

A Young Lady's Face Turned Black by Arsenic and Antidotes.

Among the passengers waiting for the Detroit steamer, recently, says the Journal, was an aged couple, seated between whom was a young woman of graceful figure, but whose face was thickly veiled. Her action attracted the attention of one of the employes of the company and he observed her lift her veil for a moment. He was astonished to catch a glimpse of a face as dark as Erebus, though the features were perfect.

The old gentleman near whom the young lady was seated moved away for an instant and the employe whose interest was now thoroughly aroused, asked the reason of the young woman's disfigurement. Tears welled up into the old man's eyes as he replied in broken sentences that she was his daughter, and a year or two ago had been the belle of a small town near Detroit. One ill-fated day she had commenced to use arsenic for her complexion and, becoming ill from the use of it, had taken other medicine to counteract its influence, with the result that her face became quite swarthy. The old man said he was taking his daughter from a hospital where she had been undergoing treatment.

Liked the Hat.

A man may be born great, or achieve greatness, or have greatness thrust upon him; but if he has no sense of humor, he will sometimes fail to adjust himself to his surroundings. Mr. Boyd, in his "Twenty-five Years of St. Andrews," tells a story of a Englishman, which illustrates this fact.

He was a prodigy at the university. Whatever could be learned, he learned. But he had no sense of humor. He thought that men's eyes suffered through not wearing hats with brims of sufficient breadth; so he wore a hat with an immense brim. One day, after visiting a great city, he said to a friend:

"I have had convincing proof of the English people's readiness to accept improvement when placed in their view. I had not been out of the railway station five minutes, when I was surrounded by a crowd of people all exclaiming, 'Who's your hatter?' You see they discerned the advantage of this valuable hat, and wanted to know where they could get hats like it. But most unfortunately, I had forgotten, and had to tell them I could not remember who my hatter was. They gave me three cheers, and went away."

Cycling Dress for Women.

Now that women are taking more to riding safety bicycles, the vexed question of feminine cycling costumes becomes increasingly important. In France they dress very much like the men, that is to say, in tunics and cloth knickerbockers or knee breeches, the chief difference between a man and woman a wheel being in the rather longer cut of the lady's tunic. In America the dress is much the same as in England, although there also has been a deal of discussion on the subject. A Cincinnati paper recently offered a prize for the most convenient and becoming lady-cyclist costume. The costume which won the prize consists of a divided dress-skirt supported from the shoulders by suspenders; a light silk blouse, held in position at the waist by a rubber band inserted in the lower edge; a Windsor tie at the neck; a jacket of the same material as the dress-skirt, cloth or flannel, and suitable material in black, grey, navy blue or brown; a yachting cap and gauntlet gloves; and for underwear a "union suit."

Company to Tea.

Little Boy—"Mamma, may I invite Jack an' Joe an' Jim to stay to supper?"

Mamma—"Horrors! We haven't a thing for supper, but some scraps left over from dinner."

Little Boy—"Yes'm, that's wot I noticed."

Mamma—"Then why do you want them to stay?"

Little Boy—"Why, you see, I can go home with them after supper, an' they'll tell their mother they didn't have much to eat, an' then she'll give em' a lot of nice cakes an' things, an' I'll get some, too."—Street & Smith's Good News.

At a Fashionable Dinner Party.

Gent, on the right: "The weather, mademoiselle——"

Lady: "I have already discussed that subject with my neighbor on the left."

Gent, aside: "The mean scoundrel! We had arranged between us that he should talk about the dinner, and I myself about the weather!"

Excess of Caution.

Nervous Passenger, on Southern railroad—Conductor: why are we running at such a frightful rate of speed?

Conductor, reassuringly—There's a rotten bridge, madam, half a mile ahead and we want to get over it with as little strain as possible.—Brooklyn Life.

AMOS B. CARTER, of Elam, Pa., the father of twenty-one children, celebrated his 80th birthday recently. He was married but once, and his wife died two years ago. Upon her tombstone is this poetic inscription, placed there by Mr. Carter's direction: "Some have children and some have none; here lies the mother of twenty-one." Mr. Carter is a very fatherly old man.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured,

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The True Laxative Principle.

Of the plants used in manufacturing the pleasant remedy, Syrup of Figs, has a permanently beneficial effect on the human system, while the cheap vegetable extracts and mineral solutions, usually sold as medicines, are permanently injurious. Being well-informed, you will use the true remedy only. Manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co.

A MOB of 100 negroes in Georgia, caught a black fiend, pounded him to a jelly, and then put him in a tub of hot salt water, causing his death. It was brutal and inhuman, but when it comes into the list of Southern outrages upon negros, it may be well to remember that the perpetrators were not white men.

A Veteran's Story

Jos. Hemmerich.

Mr. Joseph Hemmerich, an old soldier, 629 E. 146th St., N. Y. City, writes us voluntarily. In 1862, at the battle of Fair Oakes, he was stricken with typhoid fever, and after a long struggle in hospitals, lasting several years, was discharged as incurable with Consumption. Doctors said both lungs were affected and he could not live long, but a comrade urged him to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before he had finished one bottle his cough began to get loose, the choking sensation left, and night sweats grew less and less. He is now in good health and cordially recommends as a general blood purifier and tonic medicine, especially to his comrades in the G. A. R.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

A VALPARAISO cable says: Nothing has been definitely presented at Santiago by Minister Egan in the Baltimore claims, although in an interview with Minister Errazuriz, Mr. Egan said that he hoped the matter would be settled at an early date.

AT a conference with Messrs. McCarthy, Dillon and Healy, Mr. Gladstone urged concessions to the Parnellites in order to prevent Parnellite and anti-Parnellite candidates from being arrayed against each other in the general election.

A London cable says:—While the cage was descending the shaft in the Ferndale colliery in the Rhondda valley it was upset and its ten occupants were thrown out. Two of the men were instantly killed and the other eight were badly injured.

COUNT HERBERT BISMARCK'S fiancee, Countess Hoyos, is sylph-like, with dreamy blue eyes and golden hair. She is unmistakably English in appearance, and only the graceful courtesy with which she greets a stranger betrays the fact that she was cradled on the Adriatic.

EMPEROR WILLIAM and King Humbert proceeded to Juterburg, where they witnessed the artillery practice. As they returned to Berlin they were cheered by immense throngs that crowded the route. The cheering was continued until the emperor and his royal guest entered the schloss.

ADVICES from St. Paul de Loando, in the Portuguese colony of Angola, West Africa, state that a large body of Boers has entered the colony and proclaimed a republic. The Portuguese forces are not sufficiently large to repel the invasion, and unless Portugal is able to send reinforcements the Boers will retain the territory already seized and expel the Portuguese from it.

IN the house of commons recently the bill authorizing a settlement of the crofters' difficulties by assisting them to go to British Columbia was opposed by the Radicals, on the ground that there would be plenty of land in Scotland if the game preserves were abolished, Mr. Swineburne thought that Columbia should pay the full interest of the loan, seeing that she heavily taxes British imports. The bill was read the second time.

LITTLE anxiety is expressed in official circles at Ottawa, Ont., over the threatened policy of President Harrison in regard to Canada. The members of the dominion cabinet are very reticent and decline to say what action Canada will take if the policy of non-intercourse is adopted by the United States. From what can be learned in official circles there is little likelihood of the Canadian government modifying the Welland canal toll in favor of American vessels.

THE telegraph operators through Spain have gone on strike. Their grievances are long hours, low wages and irregular payment. They have a thorough organization made with a view to the present strike. The wires in Madrid and some other places are being operated by telegraphers who are in the military service, and must obey orders like other enlisted men, although they sympathize with their fellows. Great confusion prevails owing to the strike.

A DISPATCH received at the Brazilian legation in London, from Rio de Janerio states that no seditious movement has occurred in the state of Rio Grande do Sul, and that peace has not been disturbed by the Republicans. The Republicans, it is said, succeeded without recourse to arms in replacing President Pelotas with Senor Monteiro. The dispatch adds that the electors of Rio Grande do Sul alone have the right to pronounce a verdict on this change.

POLITICAL ECHOES.

The Republican state convention Maine nominated Hon. Henry B. Cleaves, of Portland, for governor by acclamation. The temporary organization was made permanent. One thousand two hundred and twenty-eight delegates were present out of 1,462.

The Vermont Republican state convention met at Burlington, Vt. and nominated Levi F. S. Stranahan for lieutenant governor, and F. W. Baldwin, J. F. Carney, C. M. Wilds and E. A. Park presidental electors.

LABOR CIRCLE.

AT a meeting of the Associated Trades of New York, resolutions were adopted demanding the immediate passage of the five million dollars World's fair appropriation bill now before congress and also protesting against the Sunday closing of the fair.

THE RAILROADS.

THE Soo settles the rate war temporarily by a $6 cut, which the Chicago lines cannot meet.

THE freight agents of the Atlantic coast lines, the New England lines and the lines west of the Mississippi of the trunk line association, held a meeting at New York to consider the question of west-bound freight rates to Missouri river points. The meeting was harmonious, and the general statement was in favor of advancing the tariff, but no definite action was taken.

SPORTING MATTERS.

WALTER WILMOT is hitting the ball hard and often.

THE Pritchard-O'Brien match is off, owing to the serious illness of the latter.

Another raid was made on the saloons and large quantities of liquors were captured by the sheriff and police. Marshall Maxwell cheerfully announced that the fun hasn't really begun yet, but will when County Attorney H. C. Winter arrives from Chicago.

When the state rested in the case at Buffalo of the state vs. Aug. Traeger, the lightning rod man, and one witness for the defense had been sworn, Judge Hicks closed the case suddenly by instructing the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty, and it was so done.

The bodies of the two men, Alfred Lind and Ernest Erns, who, while in an intoxicated condition, were drowned at Lake City while crossing the lake with a skiff, were recovered by the steamer Ethel Howard about a half mile from the shore. Each of the men leaves a wife and one child.

A Red Wing special says:—A cloud-burst in this vicinity did considerable damage, especially along the Cannon valley between here and Cannon Falls. The roadbed of the Minneapolis & St. Louis was washed out in many places. The damage cannot be estimated now.

The annual meeting of the old settlers' society was held recently at Dodge Center and was largely attended. S. L. Pierce of St. Paul delivered the address. Judge E. F. Way was elected president for the coming year. The meeting next year will be at Mantorville.

George Hanson, a young man living in Havelock, about ten miles from Montevideo accidentally shot and killed his aged mother with a musket. She handed the gun to him stock first, and it is thought that the screen caught the hammer and fired the gun. Her head was nearly severed from the body.

A man who has lived at Faribault about three months known as Mont Lean, was arrested charged with forgery. He passed a check to Henry Cromer bearing the name of T. O'Grady. Mr. Cromer ascertained that the check was a forgery and while Mont Lean was endeavoring to pass a $40 check on Geo. Byrnes Mr. Cromer secured his arrest.

Miss Z. Lulu Barney, Pearl May Day, Harriet Gillrup, L. Joe Greene, Lora E. Higgins, Zada A. McMillen, Cora F. Spicer, Jeanie B. Vandegrift and Messrs. Rae C. Blackmer, Henry Carlsen, Joseph H. Dudley, Peter A. Peterson and Victor C. Pickert graduated from the public high school, at Albert Lea. The exercises were held at the opera house.

Alfred Lind and another Swede came over from the village of Stockholm, Wis., in a skiff to Lake City and after indulging in a little "fire-water" attempted to return at a late hour in the evening. They have not been seen since and the supposition is that they were drowned, as the boat which they occupied was discovered floating in the lake about a quarter of a mile from here.

NORTH DAKOTA.

A very light vote for county superintendent was polled at Ellendale. It was a nonpartisan contest. Sheppard (Rep.) was elected by a small majority.

The dry goods and boot and shoe houses of Jacob Yax at Yankton were closed today by the sheriff in the interest of Eastern creditors. The firm has $25,000 in uncollectible bills outstanding.

A half-breed named Frank Premeau fired four shots at Deputy United States Marshal F. W. Schindler at Rolla, without effect. Sheriff McLean and Schindler are in pursuit of the Indian.

In the superintendent of school election at Mandan the present incumbent, Loren, is badly beaten. So far, out of 600 votes heard from, he receives 152. There is doubt as to which of the other two candidates is elected, Shaver or Fleming.

The Heine-Gannon damage suit, which has been on trial in the district court at Ellendale for several days past, was finished recently, the plaintiff getting a verdict for $60. This suit was for $20,000. It is expected that the plaintiff will appeal the case.

A Bismarck special says; The school election was one of the most exciting, ever held in this county, and over 300 women voted, W. T. Perkins was re-elected over Frank Rawlings for county superintendent by over 200 majority, carrying the city by 123. Harris and Michelson were elected members of the school board.

The 10th annual commencement of Yankton College occurred recently, the graduates being Jesse Williamson, Eleanor Swift, Mary Noun and Mabel Scofford. Rev. A. E. Thompson, pastor of the Congregational Church, preached the baccalaureate sermon and Rev. M. Maury, rector of the Episcopal Church, delivered the class address.

The weather crop bulletin for the week ended June 20, issued by the North Dakota weather service, says: Another week of fine weather has prevailed throughout the state, and all correspondents report excellent growth and condition of all crops, although a few complaints are received of the presence of weeds. The temperature and sunshine were both about the normal, while the precipitation averaged .65 of an inch, or 72 per cent below: Although the ground contains sufficient moisture for some time to come, a few light showers would be very beneficial. Normal precipitation for past week, .90 of an inch.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

The Hyde county court house, located at Highmore, was totally destroyed by fire. The records and part of the furniture were saved.

Frank Truedell, convicted for rape on a 12-year-old girl, was sentenced at Mitchell to 10 years in the penitentiary by Judge Henry.

Daniel McMahon, of Buffalo county, who nearly killed his wife a month ago, was indicted by the grand jury, and the case will be tried at the next term of court in this county in August.

A contract involving an expenditure of $94,800 was awarded to E. G. Carter, by the city council of Sioux Falls. It calls for the paving of Maine avenue and cross streets and is the largest contract of its kind ever awarded. The work will begin June 25 and be finished before December 1.

Mrs. Jacob Drey, of Lincoln county, was fatally injured by a bolt of lightning while at Wall lake, a few miles west of Sioux Falls. She had taken refuge under a canvas spread between two wagons. The lightning passed down both her sides snapping the steels of her corset. Her hair caught fire and she was horribly burned.

While two men named James Rickerb and Oscar Landier were timbering at the mouth of a shaft in the Addie tin mine, at Hill City, Rickerb overbalanced and fell, grasping Landier to save himself. Rickerb fell to the 500-foot level. He struck the cage and was killed instantly. Landier dropped seventy-five feet, where he caught upon a timber, sustaining injuries. Both are men of family.

The graduation exercises of the academic department of the State University were held in the university chapel at Vermillion. Many visitors from abroad were present. Orations were delivered by the graduating class and degrees were conferred as follows: Samuel Bennett Hoskins, B. A.; E. Frank Peterson, Ph. B.; August Frieberg, B. S.; Jennie June Blair, B. A., Winifred Blair, Ph. B. Music diplomas were awarded to Kathleen K. Lewis, Sioux City pipe organ; Lillian M. Bower, Vermillion, vocal; Marie Letitia Jones, Olivet, piano. The commercial college sent out no graduates, as its course is so broad that very few care to complete it in all its branches.

WISCONSIN.

Mrs. Anna Hulbert, wife of G. F. Hulbert, proprietor of the Hulbert House, Washburn, died of brain fever. She was one of the oldest residents of this city, was widely known and greatly respected.

Doctors Nusle and Merkel, whose preliminary examination on the charge of manslaughter had been continued two days at Chippewa Falls, were held to the circuit court for trial, and bail fixed at $2,000 each.

Peter Saargard, aged twenty-three years, single, was drowned in the lake at Rice Lake, while bathing. He was a jeweler in Overby's store. It is not known whether he has any relatives in this country or not. His body has not yet been recovered.

John Schaver, ex-city treasurer, in a fit of despondency over business matters, shot himself with a 32-caliber revolver, in his room at Marshfield. Surgeons are probing for the bullet, but as yet are unable to find it.

Angus McDonald, the lumberman from Chippewa Falls, who has been missing for three months, has been found dead in the woods near Ingram. A post mortem will be held and the body brought here for interment.

Andy Bennett, the hack driver at Eau Claire, charged with the murder of Wm. Anderson, was discharged by Judge Bartlett on preliminary hearing. There was no evidence on which to hold him.

Mrs. William Hanson was starting a fire in the kitchen stove at Brasington for getting dinner with kerosene in a can, which exploded, burning her seriously about the face, body and limbs. The house is a total loss. The sewing machine and a few things were saved.

The body of an unknown man, undoubtedly accidently drowned at some point north of Alma, was found floating in the river at Alma. It was badly decomposed and entirely unrecognizable. The body was buried. This makes five persons found drowned here this season.

John Arndt, a married man at Antigo, enticed May Raymond, 11 years old, to get into his buggy for a ride. He took her four or five miles from the city and made improper proposals to her, so she alleges. She jumped from the buggy and ran into the woods and escaped from him. He is under arrest and will have an examination on the charge of abduction.

Mrs. Walter Martel, a comely young woman of Eau Claire asked for the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of her husband who has deserted her. She came from England to marry him only three months ago. They were married at West Superior. She couldn't get a warrant here, but may get one at Superior.

Frederick Prentice, a millionaire brownstone operator, returned to Ashland from New York today to personally superintend the quarrying of the immense brown stone monolith for the Worlds Fair. He has started quarrying operations in three different places on his Wilson Island property. If he fails to secure a solid stone of the proper magnitude, 100 feet long and tapering from a nine by nine feet base, in one location he will try another. He estimates the cost of quarrying the stone at $10,000.

IOWA.

The Buckman county Republican convention instructed its delegates for Hon. D. B. Henderson for congressman from the Third district.

James Maxwell, aged 50, was drowned at Fairfield. He fell out of a boat in a pond and could not swim. The two Kraus boys went swimming in Cedar creek, three miles from Fairfield were also drowned.

W. H. Green, a prominent banker of Hardy, Humboldt county, committed suicide by blowing out his brains. Business troubles are thought to have been the reason for the action.

Frank Kratochvil, employed in the steam lard department of the Sinclair packing house at Cedar Rapids, fell into a vat of boiling water and was fatally scalded before assistance reached him. His wife is prostrated and is in a critical condition.

Emil Haakinson, the 22-years-old son of Ed Haakinson, of Sioux City a millionaire and a leading packer suicided by shooting himself through the head. He had taken the Keeley cure but had relapsed and had been on a fearful spree.

The Ottumwa electric street railway sold $100,000 worth of 6 per cent 20 year bonds at par to Lamprecht Bros & Co., of Cleveland and Boston. This insures a new electric line of two miles in South Ottumwa, with a doubling of the capacity of the plant.

The Eight street electric railway at Dubuque was sold by Sheriff Phillips to satisfy a decree entered in favor of first mortgage bondholders. The property was bought by Doane, of Cincinnati, for $25,000, or one-third the original cost.

The United Gas Improvement Company of Philadelphia, has brought suit in the federal court at Cedar Rapids against the Cedar Rapids Gas Light Company and A. T. Averill, president for alleged infringements of patent for the manufacture of illuminating water gas. Damages are placed at $100,000.

Lightning struck a barn near the Haveland school house, four miles east of Ft. Dodge. A crowd of children had sought shelter in the barn. Harvey and Frank Abernethy, aged respectively fourteen and eleven years, were killed by the shock and others of the children prostrated.

Pocahontas Center, the only county seat in Iowa without a railroad, the nearest station being fifteen miles away, is still having a fuel famine. The roads are impassable, and no freight has been hauled since April 14. Anything that will burn is now being used for fuel. The coal supply was exhausted a month ago.

The 24th annual commencement exercises of Mt. Josephs Academy were held at Dubuque and witnessed by a large audience. The following is the list of graduates: Miss Crawford, Miss O'Connor, Miss Ryan of Illinois: Miss Cunningham, Miss Lennon, of Iowa, and Miss Talnaidge, Wisconsin, of the class of 1892. In the literary course Miss Gallagher, of Iowa.

Fulton, Ill., across the river from Lyons, is having a great awakening. Several enterprises have been secured and a monster mass meeting is being held at the opera house in that city and lots being rapidly sold for the purpose of raising a bonus for a factory to employ about four hundred men. The enthusiasm is great and the town seems to be coming to the front.

BEATING THE EXCISEMAN.

Officers of the Law Cheated by a Simulated Death.

A certain Red John, who was a practiced hand at making illicit whisky in the Highlands, heard that the excisemen were in his neighborhood and were to pay him a visit, says a writer in Good Words. He went in his extremity to a friend of his, a tailor, and promised him a boll of malt if he would allow himself to be stretched on a table as a corpse. This was done. The tailor was decently vested in white sheets, a plate of salt was placed on his breast, and the godly old women of the neighborhood sung their coronachs around the bier. As the excisemen were entering a voice was heard from the tailor: "Unless I get two bolls I'll cry out." The two bolls were promised, and Red John confronted his foes with a sorrowful countenance and an open bible in his hand. "You have come," he said, "to a house of woe. This is my only brother who has just died." The officers apologized and retreated. Some time after they learned that Red John never had a brother, but the information came too late.

Statue of Napoleon.

A curious and hitherto scarcely known statue of the great Napoleon has been acquired by the French government. It is by Rude, and is a plaster model, representing the emperor lying at full length, dead, the head crowned with a laurel wreath and half enveloped in the shroud which covers the body. The bronze casting of this important work is set up in the grounds of a family dwelling near Dijon, descendants of one of Napoleon's officers, who himself ordered it of the great sculptor. Rude was in the habit of destroying his models after they had been executed in their final shape, hence this exceptionally preserved model is regarded with a special interest.

MURDER IN COURT

The Brother of an Injured Girl Kills Her Assailant in a Court Room.

Strychnine Used With Fatal Results by Two Youthful Lovers in Ohio.

NEW YORK, June 28.—Max Clerget, aged eighteen, who had just pleaded guilty of criminal assault upon Sarah Devins, was shot and killed in the general sessions court to-day by the girl's brother, Edward Devins. Judge Martine was trying another case when Clerget was brought to the bar to plead to the indictment against him. The prisoner pleaded and was being led away, when Devins rushed forward and shot him dead. Devins made no resistance when arrested. He was taken before a coroner, who committed him at once. He refused to make any statement, but on the way to prison he continued to call for "Sarah! Sarah!" the dead man's victim. General sympathy is expressed for Devins, whose brain is thought to have been turned by the ruin of his sister, who was his pet and favorite.

Hardly had the excitement caused by Clergett's murder subsided when another scene interrupted a trial in part of the same building. John Hied was on trial, charged with having assaulted eight-year-old Rose Lieber, on March 8, 1891. The case had just been closed when a well dressed man sitting among the spectators sprang suddenly to his feet and yelled: "Who's got a rope?" "Who's got a rope?" He was quickly pounced upon by several court officers and hustled out of the building. He was not arrested. He explained that his little daughter has a charge of the same character pending against a man, and that his feelings were aroused by the summing up of the district attorney.

UNDER WATER.

The Situation at Chicago and Mississippi River Points.

CHICAGO, June 28.—The great volume of water which rolled in upon the suburban settlements of Grand Crossing, Fordham, Dauphin Park and Burnside—all on the Illinois Central railway and below Seventieth street—was unabated to-day. Its rise has stopped, however, and now, with no more rain, nothing remains to be done by the distressed inhabitants but await its natural recession. Grand Crossing residents discredit the story that the big dike was cut. They say the wind was heavy and the force of the water great. These elements alone would have forced the dike. No arrests have been made.

DROWNED IN A STREET.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., June 28.—The entire lower part of the city is under water and the great dyke in the West end is still in danger of breaking at any moment. The Mississippi is now a foot higher than it ever was before. The town of Milan is completely engulfed. James Post of that place was drowned to-day while attempting to ford a street near the river.

A RECORD BREAKER.

DAVENPORT, Iowa, June 28.—The Mississippi reached a stand to-day nine and a half inches above the highest record. Factories here and across the river are closed. The Milwaukee road got a train in and out of here to-day, the first since last Wednesday. The Rock Island and Emporia road in Illinois is cut off and covered for several miles.

SUICIDE OF LOVERS.

An Ohio Youth and Girl End Their Troubles by Strychnine.

WILMINGTON, Ohio, June 28.—Gilbert Palmer of Jamestown, about twenty-one years old, procured a horse and buggy at a livery stable here Saturday evening, as he said, to go to Port Williams, four miles north. He was last seen at the above named place in company with Mary Conklin, aged sixteen, the daughter of a widow living in Port William. Miss Conklin's mother strenuously objected to her association with Palmer. To-day Palmer and Miss Conklin were discovered on the roadside, both dead. They had taken the robe out of the buggy and spread it down on the ground and placed the buggy cushion on it for a head rest. Near them were found glasses and papers that contained strychnine. A note was found written on one of the labels reading as follows: "Bury us as close together as possible. Good-bye."

The Presidential Household.

WASHINGTON, June 28.—Mrs. McKee and her two children left to-day for Beverly, Mass., where they will spend the summer. The president and Mrs. Harrison will leave here next week for the Adirondacks, where Mrs. Harrison will remain for several weeks. The president will spend the summer at Cape May Point with Mrs. Russell Harrison. The latter will have charge of the cottage there. The president will go there as often as he can, but will not take up his quarters there permanently for the summer until after the adjournment of congress.

Washington Waifs.

WASHINGTON, Special, June 28.—Representative Lind has secured the establishment of mail service from Bellingham to Odessa, Minn., six times a week, commencing from July 1.

Mrs. R. G. Evans arrived to-day and will remain until her husband departs for home.

W. H. Savings and wife and George Harrison of Minneapolis arrived to-day.

A Cashier Missing.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., June 28.—The Goshen National bank did not open for business today. William Murray, the cashier, who is also county treasurer, has been missing since Wednesday. It is said there is enough unsecured paper of the cashier and W. T. Russell, the president, already discovered in the bank to use up the surplus and impair the capital. The last report of the bank, May 27, showed a capital of $110,000, surplus $20,000.

Indians Killed by a Cyclone.

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, June 28.—Capt. Mariner, of the steamer Rosebud, in to-night, reports a cyclone at Fort Yates, S. D., June 18, that killed four Sioux Indians and crippled a number of others.

Electric Light for Trains.

LANSING, Mich., June 28.—Prof. J. F. McElroy has invented a cylindrical dynamo for lighting passenger trains. The armature is fastened to the axle of the engine. It will run for weeks without attention. The wires are connected to each car by couplers similar to the steam coupling. In each car a small, powerful battery is placed. While the train is in motion these batteries become charged. When the train stops at a station the power from the dynamo ceases, but automatically the batteries come into play and light the train. A car may be cut off and thrown on a side track to await a connection and the lights will be in service for six hours.

CONGRESS

Proceedings of the House and Senate.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 22.

SENATE.

After disposing of the bills on the calendar the senate spent the three subsequent hours on the free silver bill. Mr. Rollins made a speech against the bill in the course of which he questioned the statements of his colleague Mr. Peffer, and of Mr. Morgan in their speeches sometime ago as to the impoverished condition of the farmers and the country, and the high rates of interests charged on farm mortgages. This started a discussion participated in by more than half a dozen senators and which lasted till about 5 o'clock when the bill was laid aside.

HOUSE.

Representative Otis (Farmers' Alliance), of Kansas, author of three bills introduced in the house today, the first of which places lumber on the free list, the second is to limit the compensation of government officials to not exceeding $5,000 per year, and the third to abolish the office of postmaster general and create one of secretary of transportation.

THURSDAY, JUNE 23.

SENATE.

The agricultural appropriation bill was disposed of by the senate today except as to one amendment, while action has been reserved till the senate meets again Monday. That amendment gave rise to so much discussion and to so much opposition that a yea and nay vote upon it could not be dispensed with, and such a vote would have disclosed the absence of a quorum. It was in relation to the provision as to monthly crop reports. The bill as passed by the house required them to be strictly confined to percentages and to be without comment. The senate committee on appropriations recommended the striking out of the restrictive word, and it was that recommendation which Mr. Vest, aided by Mr. Washburn and others, fought and which still remains to be voted upon.

HOUSE.

Representative Heath, of Illinois, to-day introduced in the house a preamble and resolution on the subject of the inspection of merchandise transported in bond through the United States. The resolution instructs the foreign affairs committee to inquire whether further legislation on the subject is necessary, and especially whether a careful inspection of such merchandise should be had at the frontiers of the United States upon the departure and arrival of such merchandise, and whether the interests of the United States do require that each car of such merchandise while in Canadian territory shall be in the custody and under the surveillance of an inspector of the customs department, the cost of such surveillance to be paid by the foreign carriers transporting such merchandise.

HOUSE.

The house appropriation committee today completed the last of the appropriation bills and the general deficiency, and reported it to the house. The whole amount appropriated by the bill is $4,870,535, of which amount 910,000 is for the census bureaus during last fiscal year.

MONDAY, JUNE 20.

SENATE.

The senate was in session for four and a quarter hours to-day, although the attendance was small. Part of the time was given to the consideration of bills on the calendar, part to executive business, and the chief portion to a speech by Mr. Call in support of a resolution heretofore offered by him for an investigation of railroad corporations and their interference in politics and elections.

HOUSE.

Not in session.

TUESDAY, JUNE 21.

Owing to the absence of so many members no business was transacted in either house to-day.

The Potato Rot.

The potato rot fungus attacks both the foliage and the tuber of the plants, causing in the one case what is called blight of the vines and in the other what is best known as potato rot. The first appearance on the leaves is seen in yellow spots and a powdery substance on their surface. These spots soon turn brown, and finally the whole plant becomes infected and dies.

If the leaf spines come in contact with the tubers or if the fungus reaches them through the stems, rotting of the tubers ensues, provided there is a continuance of warm, moist weather, which seems to be a condition attending the prevalence of the disease. In seasons when the atmosphere is cool the tops are not attacked, and if the soil remains cool the tubers will often escape when the tops are destroyed.

Unfavorable climatic conditions of course cannot be prevented, but it should be remembered that a loose, light soil does not promote the decay like one in which water is held and the air enters with difficulty. Deeply planted potatoes may escape, while tubers lightly covered may more readily contract the disease from the vines. As a rule potatoes should be dug as soon as the vines show that they have been struck by the rot.

As an applied preventive, some of the experiment stations have reported favorably on spraying the vines three or four times with the Bordeaux mixture. Used at half strength and with Paris green, beginning with the appearance of the potato bug, it may be made to serve two purposes. Early planting and early harvesting are also in the line of safety against the potato rot.

Mr, Kellogg was a good man and we were sorry to see him go, but what was Stephen's loss was Fargo's gain.—Marshall County Leader.

A Newspaper is always printed in a rush, says the New York Sun. There is always something in it that should be left out; and something left out that should be put in. It is sometimes too quick to act, but with all its faults and shortcomings, there is more education in a bright newspaper than there is in a novel. You will find the brightest boy on practical, sensible every-day questions is the boy who reads the newspapers.

We learn that the last issue of the Red River Dalen gives the editor of this paper a "seal brown roast" and among other things claim that the SPECTATOR and its editor are Republican and always will be. We are of the opinion that if the Dalen would spend its energy and the use of its columns in trying to win votes for the People's party instead of abusing those now in the ranks, it would come nearer fulfilling its mission. The SPECTATOR has declared for the People's party and will hereafter be found in the ranks fighting for its success. We hope the Dalen will do the same.

Council Proceedings

Regular meeting of council, all members present.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved.

On motion M. E. Bjerk and Fritz Eikhof were granted a license to sell intoxicating liquors for a period of one year commencing July 1st. 1892.

At the board of equalization the following changes were made.

On motion M. Williams' taxes were raised $80,

J. J. Brannum having refused to list his property was assessed at $378.

Munson Bros., assessed on stallion $250.

Moved to adjourn until the next regular meeting.

J. L. Johnson
Village Recorder.

It has been the custom of the Republican and Democratic papers in this part of the country for several months past to publish articles and interviews to the effect that the Alliance or Peoples party was losing strength. A person would be lead to believe, if he believed the articles, that the voters were leaving the Peoples party like rats from a sinking ship, and that in all parts of the country the people were flocking back to the old parties, The SPECTATOR, to solve the question as far as this vicinity is concerned has been interviewing the citizens of St. Hilaire the past week about politics, We find that the people who voted the Alliance ticket two years ago, will to a man vote the Peoples party ticket this fall. As to the Democratic party, we find that they are all well pleased with their party nomination for president although many state that they may not carry party lines much farther, Something is decidedly wrong, however, with the Republicans. St. Hilaire had quite a number of Republican voters two years ago but they don't seem to materialize to any alarming extent this season. The following interviews are from men who have to our personal konwledge voted nothing but the Republican ticket for several years past including the last state election.

S. M. Dainard: "Harrison will never get my vote. I do not know who I will vote for, for president.

E. M. Hoff: "I will not vote for Harrison and Reid. Think I will vote for Victoria Woodhull, Andrew Berg: I do not know who I will vote for.

M. E. Bjerk: "I will not vote for Harrison."

O. F. Post, ass't. P. M. Do not think I will vote for Harrison. Do not know who I will vote for."

C. A. Brink: "I will never vote for Harrison under any circumstances,"

O. H. Peters: "I will not vote for Harrison. Do not think I will vote for President,"

O. W. Brink. "I will not vote for Harrison. Have not decided who I will vote for,

Daniel Patterson. "I will vote for Harrison."

Mr. Patterson is the only man in town who openly declares that he will vote for the Republican nominees. St. Hilaire at the last election cast twenty votes for Governor Merriam,

The Agawam Alliance of Rocksbury, No, 464 of Polk County held a meeting on the 24th and elected C. A. Johnson delegate to the Peoples party state convention, and C. F. Gustafson alternate. A resolution was passed asking all Alliances in the vicinity to contribute and help defray the expenses of the delegate to the state convention.

C. A, Johnson.
Sec'y.

Harry Ives, poor boy, comes out in his paper, the St. Hilaire Spectator, against the nominees of the Minneapolis convention. Harry wants something and don't know exactly how to go to work to get it, There were a number of men just like him at Minneapolis and they were all opposed to President Harrison.—Battle Lake Review.

Had we, like you, Bro. Strain, been after a large, fat and juicy slice of the Republican campaign fund, we would now have been, without a doubt, following in your foot-steps with precise regularity.

"The St. Hilaire Spectator is the first republican paper in this county that refuses to support President Harrison for re-election. "Boodle and federal patronage controlled the convention that nominated him,' says the Spectator, 'and he is bound to be defeated.'"

The above from the Saturday evening Crookston Times not only shows the tendency of that paper to misrepresent but also proves to what desperate measures Democracy is forced. The St. Hilaire Spectator is not a Republican paper, and as far as the Press knows has not been since its editor failed to receive the endorsement of that party for the legislature two years ago. The editor of the Spectator was a delegate to the People' party convention held in Crookston long before the National Republican convention and to our knowledge his paper has advanced the ideas of that party since his father first conceived the idea that through some error in judgement his name migh adorn the people's ticket as a candidate for judge of this district.—Thief River Falls Press.

The editor of this paper will state for the benefit of the Thief River Falls Press that the SPECTATOR is not a Republican paper. We also wish to inform the editors of the Press that their statement in last week's issue, that the editor of this paper was a candidate for the legislature two years ago, is a deliberate and malicious falsehood. The Press has heretofore been a respectable paper and free from personal abuse and falsehood but it would seem that the new editor has been educated in the belief that falsehood and personal abuse was an indication of progressive journalism. If this is to be considered a fair sample of the policy of the paper, we predict that it will prove a glaring success among the Indians and half-breeds on the reservation but will hardly meet with the approval of its white readers

BEHIND THE FOOTLIGHTS.

Modjeska will produce "Henry VIII" at the Garden theater, New York, Oct. 10.

Marie Jansen may go out at the head of an opera company of her own next season or return again to her old post at the Casino.

"No Man's Land," a melodrama by John Douglas, the author of "A Dark Secret," is to be staged at once in London. It will be produced in America next season.

Lillian Russell will sing in "The Mountebanks" in London, and will return from there in time to appear in the same opera in New York. Hayden Coffin will be the baritone of her company.

"Baroness" Blanc has had a bewildering series of offers from irresponsible theatrical speculators to go out on the road, but she is said to be firm in her intentions at present not to go on the stage.

"Doctor Jo Jo" is the title of the latest play by Albert Carre, author of "Dr. Bill" and co-author of "Mr. Wilkinson's Widows." It is now running at the Cluny theater, Paris, and it is said to be a very jolly comedy.

Pauline Hall, who has been out of New York for three years, will go back again next winter to run in opposition to Lillian Russell. The Pauline Hall Opera company will sing for three months at the Fifth Avenue theater.

The wealth of leading American actors is thus estimated by Jerome H. Eddy: Edwin Booth, $750,000; Joseph Jefferson, $1,000,000; Stuart Robson, $400,000; W. H. Crane, $400,000; Denman Thompson, $250,000; Joseph Murphy, $800,000; Roland Reed, $150,000; Oliver Byron, $150,000; Edward Harrigan, $100,000; Clara Morris, $250,000; Fanny Davenport, $200,000; Lotta, $500,000; Maggie Mitchell, $250,000, and Sol Smith Russell, $400,000.

TURF TOPICS.

Rarus, 2:13¼, once the king of the trotting turf, is dead.

Kingman has done with racing and will be sent to a ranch in Mexico.

The Year Book index of trotting and pacing last season shows that over 16,000 performers took part in races and contests against time.

"As there are few great men without great mothers, so there are few great horses without great dams," says a prominent turf writer.

An attempt to drive a horse thirty-six miles in three hours at Seaside park, Bridgeport, Conn., was stopped by the Connecticut Humane society.

In a book published in 1614, it is stated that Queen Anne, wife of Richard II, first taught Englishwomen to ride on sidesaddles, when heretofore they rode astride.

W. P. Taylor's Maxcel, 2:11½, and C. F. Dunbar's Johnson, 2:06¼, have been matched. The contest will take place at the Buffalo Driving park Aug. 2, the first day of the grand circuit meeting.

Seventy-two races were run during the recent Brooklyn Jockey club meeting. The added money was $107,910. The Oneck stable was the largest winner, winning $19,680. Green Morris came next with $19,530.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

There will be three observation towers about 800 feet high for the accommodation of visitors who want to take a birdseye view of the grounds and buildings.

A $50,000 monument to Columbus, designed by Sculptor Howard Kretschmar, of Chicago, will be erected in Lake Front park, which has been termed the "Gateway to the Exposition."

In the women's exhibit from South Dakota will be a life size statue of Minnehaha, the eighteen-year-old daughter of Sitting Bear, who was prominent in the engagement with General Custer's troops on the Little Big Horn.

The World's fair commissioners of New Jersey adopted the design of Charles Allen Gifford, of Newark, for the state building at the Chicago exposition. It will be a reproduction of the Washington headquarters at Morristown.

At least thirty different religions will be represented in the "congress of all religions" that is to form part of next year's industrial exhibition—10 Asiatic religions, including Buddhism; 4 European, including Greek orthodoxy; 4 African, including fetichism, and 12 American, including Mormonism.

RAILROAD JOTTINGS.

The train service on the New York Central has been materially benefited by the recent addition of several hard coal burning engines.

The Cleveland, Canton and Southern Railway company, of Ohio, has increased its capital stock from $1,000,000 to $16,000,000. The road is to be extended to the coal fields in southern Ohio.

Under the provisions of a bill signed by Governor Flower, ten hours' work performed within twelve consecutive hours shall constitute a day's labor on every steam surface road in the Empire State.

M. Zook, formerly superintendent of the Indianapolis division of the Monon, has been appointed roadmaster of the Alabama Great Southern road, with jurisdiction from Chattanooga to Birmingham.

The Missouri, Kansas and Texas will build a twenty-six mile branch from Elgin to Austin. Citizens of Houston have raised a guarantee fund for an extension of the main line from Boggy creek tank to that city.

CHATS ABOUT MEN.

Senator Manderson plays a strong game of chess.

Carlyle's two brothers reside on farms near Grand Rapids, Mich.

Joseph Arch, the pioneer in the agricultural laborers' movement in England, is only sixty-six, but is said to be quite broken down.

Roch and Ruhm, two American cadets, carried off first honors in naval architecture at the last commencement of the University of Glasgow.

Mr. Gladstone is very much attached to a little black Pomeranian dog, Pete by name, which was given him some years ago by a friend in Germany.

The largest child ever born, it is said, was the son of Bates, the "Kentucky Giant," and his wife, the "Nova Scotia Giantess." This infant Hercules weighed 23¾ pounds.

Roscoe Conkling's fine portrait, by Cuyler Ten Eyck, has been placed in the vice president's room at the Capitol in Washington, and obtains as much praise as attention from visitors.

Frederick L. Ames is said to be the richest man in New England, and there is no man in any part of the country who gets more comfort out of his home or takes greater pride in its surroundings than he does.

A gentleman whom scarcely any one recognized had the privilege of the floor of the senate chamber on the day of Senator Barbour's funeral. He looked about sixty years of age. He proved to be the ex-senator from Iowa, Mr. Jones, who has reached his ninetieth year.

The late historian Freeman had a great liking for architectural sketches, and at his death had accumulated a large collection of drawings made by himself of notable buildings in England and on the Continent. But he cared nothing for paintings, and never on his journeys through Europe went into a picture gallery.

THE NEWEST NOVELTIES.

In receptacles of all sorts the shel takes the lead.

Column clocks are for boudoirs and Louis XVI rooms.

Lamps of glass are six feet high and mounted in brass.

Three swans—blue, pink and white—with linked necks, form a new table ornament for flowers.

A great deal is done in faience with appliques of metals. There are flower ornaments or grotesquerie.

Small articles, as vases, cups, bowls covered with flowers with spread petals such as daisies have been brought over.

The English gold ornamented glass is having great vogue. The German glass is much more finely ornamented. The contours in the English glass are bolder.

Onyx clocks in the shape of green porticoes, with round columns supporting pediments, are exquisite. Some clocks have the pillars and pilasters covered with gilt and colored tracery.

There are numerous displays of ornamental glass. The Webb cameo glass is striking, but has many successful imitations in cheaper glasses which would deceive all but the cognoscenti.

There are new mechanical clocks. One represents the engine of a ferry-boat, another a pile driver with the figure of a man. The materials are silver and bronze, and the workmanship is exquisite.—Jewelers' Circular.

AROUND THE THRONES.

The Princess of Wales fits and makes gowns for herself and family.

There are fourteen great gates to the Escurial, the palace of Spanish kings, and the building is lighted by 1,110 outer and 1,578 inner windows.

No nihilist will ever get a chance at the czar of Russia with a razor, at least in the guise of a barber. The autocrat has his whiskers carefully trimmed, but with scissors.

Emperor William has given 15,000 marks to aid the publication of an elaborate literary souvenir of the 400th anniversary of the discovery of America. The work will be edited by the Berlin Geographical Society.

The Shah of Persia has more than $35,000,000 worth of ornaments, gems and precious stones in one strong room, 20 by 14 feet. There are scabbards in this treasury said to be worth $1,000,000 each. When leaving home the Shah, it is said, locks up his jewelry and travels "in paste."

Tip-O-Tip, son of the late Zulu King Cetewayo, is in this country and aims to secure an education here before returning to his own people. To pay his expenses in college he is giving small entertainments of native songs, chants, translations of the English to the Zulu tongue and in answering questions.

ODDS AND ENDS.

It is said that three-fourths of the entire manufacturing capital of the United States is based on patents.

France has had thirty-eight embassadors to England since 1814, while in the same period the queen has had but eight representatives at Paris.

More than a fourth of the gold and more than a third of the silver produced throughout the world in the year 1891 was mined in the United States.

A mob of seventy-five women prevented a wedding in a town in Kentucky recently, for the reason that the bride's husband had been dead but two weeks.

The next lord mayor of London will be a Roman Catholic and he will appoint a Catholic priest as his chaplain. It will be the first instance of a Roman Catholic holding the latter position since the Reformation.

The streets of London are cleaned between 8 in the evening and 9 in the morning. Many of the carriageways are washed daily by means of a hose, and the courts and alleys inhabited by the poorer classes are cleaned once a day.

The Sex in Business.

Cobwigger—Your wife seems to think that women would make good financiers.

Brown—Yes, indeed. If she wanted a five cent tumbler she'd buy a pound of tea so as to get the glass for nothing.—New York Evening Sun.

Mutual.

Miss Palisade (greeting Miss Summit)—I am so surprised to see you today.

Miss Summit—So am I to see you. I had no idea you would be at home.—New York Herald.

An Evil Prophecy Fulfilled.

"Beautiful Queen Darinka" leaves a void in the hearts of the Montenegrins which will not soon be filled. Beautiful she would always be to them, although she has just died at 54, thirty-three years after the death of the husband she loved so much. Apropos of this there is told a queer story. Shortly after the marriage of Darinka and Prince Danilo, when the Montenegrins were fighting against the Turks, the women of the Black Mountain caused a magnificent flag to be embroidered for the warriors. The face of the "beautiful Darinka" was reproduced on the flag, and the wild Montenegrin warriors fell down before it and called out, "Be thou our patron saint in the holy war." During the battle of Grahover three bullets tore the flag; one went through the forehead, one through the heart, and one through the finger on which the figure of the Princess wore her wedding ring. The priests and the old women of Montenegro whispered, "It is an evil omen, and signifies that the Veliki Knyas, the great Prince, will die young." A few years later the prophecy was fulfilled."—New York World.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured,

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

The wrong way, with Catarrh, is to stop it without curing it. The poisonous, irritating snuffs, strong caustic solutions, "creams," balms and the like may, perhaps, palliate for a time. But they may drive the disease to the lungs. The wrong way is full of danger.

The right way is a proved one. It's with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It cures, perfectly and permanently, by its mild, soothing, cleansing and healing properties, the worst cases of Chronic Catarrh. It has proved itself right, thousands of times, when everything else has failed.

A Brief Synopsis of the Proceedings of the Democratic Convention.

FIRST DAY.

The National Democratic Convention convened at Chicago on Tuesday, June 21.

The convention was called to order by Chairman Brice of the National committee who introduced Rev. John Rouse, who offered prayer after which the national committee reported the following list of officers for the temporary organization:

Chairman, Hon. William C. Owens of Kentucky; secretary, Simon P. Sheerin of Indiana; assistant secretaries, Edward L. Merritt of Illinois, H. Doyle of Pennsylvania, Hambleton Shepard of Virginia, Clinton Tillery of Missouri, L. E. Rowley of Michigan, Robert E. Wilson of Mississippi, Charles R. Defreest of New York, James C. Strain of Illinois; principal reading clerk, Hon. Nicholas M. Bell of Missouri; assistant reading clerks, Martin Morrison of Indiana, C. A. Tossels of Iowa, Bernard Broman of Montana, William E. Thompson of Michigan, Henry J. Lynn of Tennessee; sergeant-at-arms, Richard J. Bright of Indiana; official stenographer, Edward B. Dickinson of New York.

The nominations were confirmed without a dissenting voice and a committee appointed who escorted Mr. Owens to the chair.

After a greeting of applause Mr. Owens acknowledged the honor conferred upon him in a very graceful speech.

The committees on credentials, permanent organization, rules, and resolutions were appointed.

SYMPATHY FOR BLAINE.

Mr. Cable of Illinois offered the following resolutions:

"That this convention tender its profound sympathy to that distinguished American, James G. Blaine, in the many afflictions that have befallen him."

The resolution was received with great enthusiasm and was unanimously carried.

Edward C. Sweet, of Maine, briefly thanked the convention on behalf of the state of Maine for its resolution of sympathy.

An invitation from President Baker, of the world's Columbian exposition, was read, inviting the delegates to visit the grounds of the exposition. On motion of Delegate Bragg of Wisconsin the convention then at 2 p. m. adjourned until 11 o'clock next day.

SECOND DAY.

The convention was called to order by temporary Chairman Owens and Rev. A. H. Henry introduced who opened the proceedings with prayer.

The committees not being ready to report the time was taken up in short speeches by prominent Democrats.

Mr. Bronson of Kentucky here appeared and announced that the committee on credentials was now ready to report. Mr. Lamb of Indiana, chairman of the committee on credentials, then said:

I am directed by the committee on credentials to make the following unanimous report. In the contest from the State of Alabama the regular delegation as recommended by the Democratic national committee is seated and given the right to vote, while the contesting delegation is given seats upon the floor of this convention. In the Twenty-third and Twenty-sixth districts of Pennsylvania the regular delegates as recommended by the national committee are given the seats and the votes upon the floor. In the state of Ohio, the First district, the regular delegate, Mr. Bernard, is seated. In the Territory of Utah the regular delegation recommended by the Democratic national committee, Messrs. Henry B. Henderson and John T. Caine, are given the seats and the votes upon the floor. In the Territories of New Mexico and Arizona it was recommended by the national committee that each be given six seats upon the floor of this convention. In view of the fact that these two territories have been barred from the sisterhood of states in this Union upon the sole ground that they were Democratic, and the further fact that a Democratic house has already passed an enabling act to make them states of this Union, your committee unanimously adopts the recommendation of the national committee and submits it for the approval of this convention. Mr. Chairman, I move the adoption of the report of the committee.

The reading of the report was greeted with frequent cheers, and especially that part of it relating to the admission of the states referred to through the enabling act of congress was cheered to an echo.

The report was adopted.

The next business was the report of the committee on permanent organization. The report was ready, and was read by the secretary as follows:

For chairman, Hon. William L. Wilson, West Virginia; secretary, Simeon P. Sheerin, of Indiana; assistant secretaries, Edward L. Merritt of Illinois; W. H. Doyle of Pennsylvania; Hamilton Shepard of Virginia; Clinton Galloway of Missouri; L. E. Rolls of Michigan; Robert E. Wilson of Mississippi; Charles R. Depres of New York; James C. Strain of Illinois; Thomas Brady of Minnesota. Reading secretary, Hon. Nicholas M. Bell of Missouri. Assistant reading secretaries, Morgan Morrison of Indiana, Cato Sells of Iowa, H. S. Martin of Kansas, William F. Thompson of Michigan, William Wilkins Carr of Pennsylvania, Henry J. Lynn of Tennessee, Thomas N. Knapp of Missouri; sergeant-at-arms, Hon. Richard J. Bright of Indiana; assistant sergeant-at-arms, John P. Hopkins of Illinois; official stenographer, Edwin J. Dixon of Illinois; vice presidents, the secretaries from each state.

The report was adopted without division.

A committee escorted Mr. Wilson to the chair and he delivered an appropriate address of acceptance.

On motion the convention took a recess at 1:44 p. m. until 5 p. m.

The committee on resolutions presented the following platform which was after considerable discussion adopted:

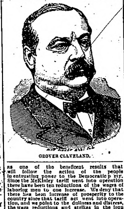
Section 1. The representatives of the Democratic party of the United States in national convention assembled do reaffirm their allegiance to the principles of the party as formulated by Jefferson and exemplified by the long and illustrious line of his successors in Democratic leadership from Madison to Cleveland. We believe the public welfare demands that these principles be applied to the conduct of the federal government through the accession to power of the party that advocates them, and we solemnly declare that the need of a return to these fundamental principles of a free popular government, based on home rule and individual liberty, was never more urgent than now, when the tendency to centralize all power at the federal capital has become a menace to the reserved rights of the states that strikes at the very roots of our government under the constitution as framed by the fathers of the republic.

THE FORCE BILL.

Sec. 2. We warn the people of our common country, jealous for the preservation of their free institutions, that the policy of federal control of elections to which the Republican party has committed itself is fraught with the gravest of dangers, scarcely less momentous than would result from a revolution practically establishing monarchy on the ruins of the republic. It strikes at the North as well as the South, and injures the colored citizens even more than the white; it means a horde of deputy marshals at every polling place armed with federal power, returning boards appointed and controlled by federal authority; the outrage of the electoral rights of the people in the several states; the subjugation of the colored people to the control of the party in power, and the reviving of race antagonisms, now happily abated, of the utmost peril to the safety and happiness of all: a measure deliberately and justly described by a leading Republican senator "as the most infamous bill that ever crossed the threshold of the senate." Such a policy, if sanctioned by law, would mean the dominance of a self-perpetuating oligarchy of officeholders and the party first entrusted with its machinery could not be dislodged from power unless by an appeal to the reserved right of the people to resist oppression which is inherent in all self-governing communities. Two years ago this revolutionary policy was emphatically condemned by the people at the polls; but in contempt of that verdict the Republican party has defiantly declared in its latest authoritative utterance that its success in the coming elections will mean the enactment of the force bill and the usurpation of despotic control over elections in all states. Believing that the preservation of republican government in the United States is dependent upon the defeat of the policy of legalized force and fraud, we invite the support of all citizens who desire to see the constitution maintained in its integrity with the laws pursuant thereto, which have given our country a hundred years of unexampled prosperity; and we pledge the Democratic party, if it be entrusted with power, not only to the defeat of the force bill, but also to relentless opposition to the Republican policy of profligate expenditure, which in the short space of two years has squandered an enormous surplus and emptied an overflowing treasury, after piling new burdens of taxation upon the already overtaxed labor of the country.

TAXATION.

Sec. 3. We reiterate the oft-repeated doctrines of the Democratic party that the necessity of the government is the only justification for taxation, and whenever a tax is unnecessary it is unjustifiable; that when custom house taxation is levied upon articles of another kind produced in this country the difference between the cost of labor here and labor abroad, when such a difference exists, fully measures any possible benefits to labor, and the enormous additional impositions of the existing tariff fall with crushing force upon our farmers and workingmen, and for the mere advantage of the few whom it enriches, exact from labor grossly unjust shares of the expenses of the government, and we demand such a revision of the tariff laws as will remove their iniquitous inequalities, lighten the oppressions and put them on a constitutional and equitable basis. But in making a reduction in taxes, it is not proposed to injure any domestic industries, but rather to promote their healthy growth. From the foundation of this government, taxes collected at the custom house have been the chief source of federal revenue. Such they must continue to be. Moreover, many industries have come to rely upon legislation for successful continuance, so that any change of law must be at every step regardful of the labor and capital thus involved. The process of reform must be subject, in the execution of this to the plain dictates of justice. We denounce the McKinley tariff law enacted by the Fifty-first congress as the culminating atrocity of class legislation; we indorse the efforts made by the Democrats of the present congress to modify its most oppressive features in the direction of free raw materials and cheaper manufactured goods that enter into general consumption; and we promise its repeal as one of the beneficent results that will follow the action of the people in entrusting power to the Democratic party. Since the McKinley tariff went into operation there have been ten reductions of the wages of laboring men to one increase. We deny that there has been increase of prosperity to the country since that tariff act went into operation, and we point to the dullness and distress, the wage reductions and strikes in the iron trade, as the best possible evidence that no such prosperity has resulted from the McKinley act. We call the attention of thoughtful Americans to the fact that after thirty years of restrictive taxes against the importation of foreign wealth, in exchange for our agricultural surplus, the homes and farms of the country have become burdened with a real estate mortgage debt of over $2,500,000,000, exclusive of all other forms of indebtedness; that in one of the chief agricultural states of the world there appears a real estate mortgage averaging $165 per capita of the total population; and that similar conditions and tendencies are shown to exist in other agricultural exporting states. We denounce a policy which fosters no industry so much as it does that of the sheriff.



GROVER CLEVELAND.

RECIPROCITY DENOUNCED.

Sec. 4. Trade interchange on the basis of reciprocal advantages to the countries participating is a time-honored doctrine of the Democratic faith, but we denounce with shame reciprocity which juggles with the people's desire for enlarged foreign markets and freer exchanges by pretending to establish closer trade relations for a country whose articles of export are almost exclusively agricultural products with other countries that are also agricultural, while erecting a custom house barrier of protective tariff taxes against the richest countries of the world that stand ready to take our entire surplus of products and to exchange therefor commodities which are necessaries and comforts of life among our own people.

TRUSTS AND COMBINES.

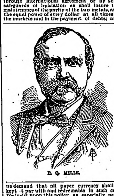
Sec. 5. We are cognizant that trusts and combinations which are designed to enable capital to secure more than its just share of the joint product of capital and labor are a natural consequence of the prohibitive taxes which prevent the free competition which is the life of honest trade, but we believe the worst evils can be abated by law, and we demand the rigid enforcement of the laws made to prevent and control them, together with such further legislation in restraint of their abuses as experience may show to be necessary.

PUBLIC LANDS.

Sec. 6. The Republican party, while professing a policy of reserving the public land for small holdings by actual settlers, has given away the people's heritage till now a few railroad and non-resident aliens, individual and corporate, possess a larger area than that of all our farms between the two seas. The last Democratic administration reversed the improvident and unwise policy of the Republican party touching the public domain, and reclaimed from corporations and syndicates and restored to the people nearly one hundred million acres of valuable land to be sacredly held as homesteads for our citizens, and we pledge ourselves to continue this policy until every acre of land so wrongfully held shall be reclaimed and restored to the people.

THE SILVER QUESTION.

Sec. 7. We denounce the Republican legislation known as the Sherman act of 1890 as a cowardly makeshift, fraught with possibilities of danger in the near future, which should make all of its supporters, as well as its author, anxious for its speedy repeal. We hold to the use of both gold and silver as the standard money of the country, and to the coinage of both gold and silver without discriminating against either metal or charge for mintage, but the dollar unit of coinage of both metals must be of equal intrinsic and exchangeable value or be adjusted through international agreement or by such safeguards of legislation as shall insure the maintenance of the parity of the two metals, and the equal power of every dollar at all times in the markets and in the payment of debts; and we demand that all paper currency shall be kept at par with and redeemable in such coin. We insist upon this policy as especially necessary for the protection of the farmers and laboring classes, the first and most defenseless victims of unstable money and a fluctuating currency.



R. Q. MILLS.

Sec. 8. We recommend that the prohibitory 10 per cent tax on state bank issues be repealed.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

Sec. 9. Public office is a public trust. We reaffirm the declaration of the Democratic national convention of 1876 for the reform of the civil service and we call for the honest enforcement of the laws regulating the same. The nomination of a president, as in the recent Republican convention, by delegations composed largely of his appointees, holding office at his pleasure, is a scandalous satire upon free popular institutions and a startling illustration of the methods by which a president may gratify his ambition. We denounce a policy under which federal officeholders usurp control of party conventions in the states, and we pledge the Democratic party to the reform of these and all other abuses which threaten individual liberty and local self-government.

THE FOREIGN POLICY.

Sec. 10. The Democratic party is the only party that has ever given the country a foreign policy consistent and vigorous, compelling respect abroad and inspiring confidence at home. While avoiding entangling alliances, it has aimed to cultivate friendly relations with other nations, and especially with our neighbors on the American continent, whose destiny is closely linked with our own, and we view with alarm the tendency to a policy of irritation and bluster which is liable at any time to confront us with the alternative of humiliation or war. We favor the maintenance of a navy strong enough for all purposes of national defense and to properly maintain the honor and dignity of the country abroad.

SOME SYMPATHY.

Sec. 11. This country has always been the refuge of the oppressed from every land—exiles for conscience sake and the spirit of the founders of our government. We condemn the oppression practiced by the Russian government upon its Austrian and Jewish subjects, and we call upon our national government in the interest of justice and humanity, by all just and proper means, to use its prompt and best efforts to bring about a cessation of these persecutions in the dominions of the czar, and to secure to the oppressed equal rights. We tender our profound and earnest sympathy to those lovers of freedom who are struggling for home rule and the great cause of local self-government in Ireland.

IMMIGRATION.

Sec. 12. We heartily approve all legitimate effort to prevent the United States from being used as the dumping ground for the known criminals and professional paupers of Europe, and we demand the rigid enforcement of the laws against Chinese immigration and the importation of foreign workmen under contract to degrade American labor and lessen its wages, but we condemn and denounce any and all attempts to restrict the immigration of the industrious and worthy of foreign lands.

PENSIONS.

Sec. 13. This convention hereby renews the expression of appreciation of the patriotism of the soldiers and sailors of the Union in the war for its preservation, and we favor just and liberal pensions for all disabled Union soldiers, their widows and dependents, but we demand that the work of the pension office shall be done industriously, impartially and honestly. We denounce the present administration as incompetent, corrupt, disgraceful and dishonest.

PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS.

Sec. 14. The federal government should care for and improve the Mississippi river and other great waterways of the republic so as to secure for the interior states easy and cheap transportation to the tidewater. When any waterway of the republic is of sufficient importance to demand aid of the government that such aid should be extended on a definite plan of continuous work until permanent improvement is secured.

Sec. 15. In the support of national defense and the promotion of commerce between the states we recognize the early construction of the Nicaragua canal and its protection against foreign control of great importance to the United States.

Sec. 16. Recognizing the World's Columbian exposition as a national undertaking of vast importance, in which the general government has invited the co-operation of all the powers of the world, and appreciating the acceptance by many of such powers of the invitation so extended and the broad and liberal efforts being made by them to contribute to the grandeur of the undertaking, we are of the opinion that congress should make such necessary financial provisions as shall be requisite to the maintenance of the national honor and public faith.

EDUCATIONAL LAWS.

Sec. 17. Popular education being the only safe basis of popular suffrage, we recommend to the several states most liberal appropriation for the public schools. Free common schools are the nursery of good government, and they have always received the fostering care of the Democratic party, which favors every means of increasing intelligence. Freedom of education being an essential of civil and religious liberty as well as a necessity for the development of intelligence, must not be interfered with under any pretext whatever. We are opposed to state interference with parental rights and rights of conscience in the education of children, as an infringement of the fundamental Democratic doctrine that the largest individual liberty consistent with the rights of others insures the highest type of American citizenship and the best government.

STATEHOOD.

Sec. 18. We approve the action of the present house of representatives in passing bills for the admission into the Union as states of the territories of New Mexico and Arizona, and we favor the early admission of all the territories having the necessary population and resources to entitle them to statehood, and while they remain territories we hold that the officials appointed to administer the government of any territory, together with the District of Columbia and Alaska, should be bona fide residents of the territory or district in which their duties are to be performed. The Democratic party believes in home rule and the control of their own affairs by the people of the vicinage.

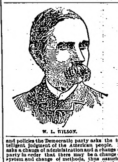
VARIOUS OTHER MATTERS.

Sec. 19. We favor legislation, by congress and state legislatures, to protect the lives and limbs of railway employes and those of other hazardous transportation companies, and denounce the inactivity of the Republican party, and particularly the Republican senate, for causing the defeat of measures beneficial and protective to this class of wage workers.

Sec. 20. We are in favor of the enactment by the states of the laws for abolishing the notorious sweating system for abolishing contract convict labor and for prohibiting the employment in factories of children under fifteen years of age.

Sec. 21. We are opposed to all sumptuary laws as an interference with the individual rights of the citizen.

Sec. 22. Upon this statement of principles and policies the Democratic party asks the intelligent judgment of the American people. It asks a change of administration and a change of party in order that there may be a change of system and change of methods, thus assuring the maintenance unimpaired of institutions under which the republic has grown great and powerful.



W. L. WILSON.

After the vote on the adoption of the platform, Chairman Wilson said:

The next order of business, gentlemen, is the call of the roll of states for the nomination of candidates for the office of president. The clerk will proceed with the call of the roll.

CLEVELAND NAMED.

When New Jersey was called Gov. Abbett arose and, amid cheers, said:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen of the convention: In presenting a name to this convention I speak for the united Democracy of the State of New Jersey, whose loyalty to Democratic principles, faithful services to the party, and whose contributions to its successes entitle it to the respectful consideration of the Democracy of the Union. Its electoral vote has always been cast in support of Democratic principles and Democratic candidates. In voicing the unanimous wish of the delegates from New Jersey I present as their candidate for the suffrage of this convention the name of a distinguished Democratic statesman, born upon its soil, for whom in the two great presidential contests the State of New Jersey has given its electoral vote. The supreme consideration in the mind of the Democracy of New Jersey is the success of the Democratic party and its principles. We have been in the past and will be in the future ready at all times to sacrifice personal preference in deference to the clear expressions of the will of the Democracy of the Union. But it is because he will awaken throughout our state the enthusiasm of the Democracy and insure success; it is because he represents the great Democratic principles and policy upon which this entire convention is a unit; it is because we believe that with him as a candidate the Democracy of the Union will sweep the country and establish its principles throughout the length and breadth of the land that we offer to the convention as a nominee the choice of the Democracy.

GOV. ABBETT.

GROVER CLEVELAND.

If any doubt is in the minds of the Democrats of New Jersey of his ability to lead the great Democratic hosts to victory they would not present his name to-day. With them the success of the party and the establishment of its principles are beyond their love or admiration for any man. We feel certain that every Democratic state, though its preference may be for some other distinguished Democrat, will give its warm, enthusiastic and earnest support to the nominee of this convention. The man whom we present will rally to his party thousands of independent voters, whose choice is determined by their personal conviction that the candidate will represent principles dear to them, and whose public life and policy give assurance that if chosen by the people they will secure an honest, pure and conservative administration, and the great interests of the country will be encouraged and protected. The time will come when other distinguished Democrats who have been mentioned in connection with this nomination will receive that consideration to which the great services they have rendered their party entitle them, but we stand to-day in the presence of the fact that the majority of the Democratic masses throughout the county, the rank and file, the millions of its voters, demand the nomination of Grover Cleveland.

In Massachusetts it gave us a Russell, in Iowa it gave us a Boies. In Wisconsin it gave us a Peck for governor and a Vilas for senator. In Michigan it gave us Winans for governor and gave us a Democratic legislature and will give us eight electoral votes for president. In 1889 in Ohio, it gave us James Campbell for governor, and in 1891, to defeat him, it required the power, the wealth and the machinery of the entire Republican party. In New Hampshire it gave us a legislature of which we were defrauded. In Illinois it gave us a Palmer for senator, and in Nebraska it gave us a Boyd for governor. In the great Southern states it has continued in power, Democratic governor and Democratic legislators. In New Jersey the legislature and the executive are now both Democratic. In the great state of New York it gave us David B. Hill for senator and Roswell P. Flower for governor. With all these glorious achievements [illegible] which will give us a Democratic house of representatives in 1890 and Democratic governors and senators in Republican and doubtful states, are due to the courage and wisdom of Grover Cleveland, and so believing they recognize him as their great leader.

In presenting his name in nomination to the convention it is no reflection upon any of the masterful leaders of the party. The victories which have been obtained are not alone the heritage of these states, they belong to the whole party. I feel that every Democratic state, and that every individual Democrat has reason to rejoice and be proud and applaud these splendid successes. The candidacy of Grover Cleveland is not a reflection upon others. It is not antagonistic to any great Democratic leader. He comes before this convention not as the candidate of any one state. He is the choice of the great majority of Democratic voters. The Democracy of New Jersey, therefore, presents to this convention in this, the people's year, the nominee of the people, the plain, blunt, honest citizen, the idol of the Democratic masses—Grover Cleveland.

Cleveland's nomination was seconded by A. W. Green of Chicago, and W. B. English of Indiana.

HILL NAMED.

When New York was reached in the call William C. Dewitt took the platform and said:

Mr. President and fellow delegates: By the favor of my colleagues, I have now the high honor to speak the voice of the State of New York in this council of the Democracy of the nation. Our majestic commonwealth needs no eulogy here. This gateway of commerce, both from the ocean and from the lakes—vast arsenal of thought through whose press the intelligence of the world is gathered and scattered throughout the land; joined to the agricultural region by the fertile valleys of the Hudson, the Mohawk and the Genesee, the State of New York is none the less paramount in our political than our national affairs. Her great city is the life-giving heart of the Democratic party. Her electoral vote is the keystone of the federal arch upon which we place our hopes. In her present relations with the Democratic party of the nation what was said of the Roman amphitheater:

"While stands the coliseum, Rome shall stand;
When falls the coliseum, Rome shall fall;
And when Rome falls—the world."

In view of this critical and important position occupied by our state, in the impending contest, I take great pride while speaking for its regular organization of the party in pointing to our past triumphs. In 1885 we carried New York by 11,134 majority, in 1886 by 7,897, in 1887 by 17,077, in 1888 by 19,171, in 1889 by 20,527, and in 1891 by 47,937; so that the present organization speaks not only for the state, but is in the presidential campaign. It speaks for a state organized and arrayed upon the lines of victory. These are stubborn facts which hypocrisy cannot conceal nor detraction obliterate. So, too, at the outset this convention should fully understand the true nature of the Democracy of the people of New York. It is fundamental. We believe in the brotherhood of man and in all the hearty doctrines of equality and fraternity which arise from that faith.

INDISPENSABLE TO YOUR SUCCESS

The supreme evil of our age is the use of the law making power of state and nation for the enrichment of the few at the expense of the many. In olden times the bandit armed his followers and descended with fire and sword upon the industrial classes. In modern times the erects a manufactory, organizes a corporation, and through a clause in a tariff act, a donation of the public domain or the acquisition of chartered privileges, effects the same results. Of the four thousand millionaries in the country, one thousand and seven hundred are said to have amassed their fortunes through the tariff, and an equal number through the corporations. Out of these causes all the features of an aristocracy arise. Class distinction and splendor, social dudes and political ascetics have taken the place of the plain earnest people of former generations.

Our people want a leader filled with the aspirations, sacredness, sagacity, hopes, fears, joys and sorrows which crowd their struggle for life and happiness. We therefore present for your suffrages the name of him who, having enjoyed all the honors of our state, still finds his highest boast in the sentiment, "I am a Democrat." Do you ask for his credentials? We point you to the unbroken series of victories by which he has rendered New York a veritable Gibraltar to the Democracy of the Union. When, with all the power and patronage of the federal government at his command, the distinguished ex-president lost the State of New York by a minority of 14,000, by a majority of over 10,000 votes, and at every election during the past ten years he and his friends have met with constantly increasing success. No sane man can reject the force of those statistics. It must outweigh all theory, promises and dreams.

GOV. HILL CARRIED IT

Mr. Hill never had an alliance with malcontents nor any favor in the Republican party. Beginning public life as an associate of Samuel J. Tilden in the legislature, he has been mayor of the city of his home, he was elected lieutenant governor by the largest vote ever given to the candidate of any party in the State of New York. He has been twice elected its governor and represents it in the senate of the United States. It is not essential that I should embark in fulsome eulogy. His signally successful administration of these great trusts establish his capacity, and you will pardon the liberties of a friend when I state that he is a poor man, fully and absolutely devoted to the service of his party, I but do him justice. He is a cavalier rather than a roundhead.

In opposition to sumptuary laws, in persistent advocacy of the bill granting freedom of religious worship, in the increase of public holidays, labor days and half holidays; in supporting out-door sports and pastimes, he has done more than any public man of his time to foster and develop general liberty appropriate to modern civilization. For these services he encounters the hostility of the bigot and the hypocrite. He is a firm adherent to the principles of frugality and so long characteristic of his party. During his administration as governor our state debt of $7,000,000 was reduced virtually to nothing, while the properties and interests of the state were adequately maintained and improved. These things speak in tones of thunder against the villification of his enemies.

We present David B. Hill as the candidate of an unterrified and aggressive Democracy. His experience teaches us that such is the way to succeed. We love him not merely for the enemies he has made but for the enemies he has conquered. He has never been defeated and having just entered upon the high office of senator of the United States, if he entertained the slighest doubt of his ability to carry his state he would not suffer his name to be connected with the nomination. Besides the delegation from New York is not itself, unmindful of its own responsibility; and of the great duty of truth and candor it owes to this body.

We appreciate the responsibility of our position, and would speak to you like men whose blood flows in their words. The common enemy is strongly entrenched in the capitol. You are the generals of the army of invasion; grand council assembled, we hail from Waterloo; and we fearlessly proclaim that Hill is the Blucher who can drive the Republican chieftain to St. Helena in November.

Hill's nomination was seconded by Mr. Fellows of New York.

BOIES NAMED.

When the State of Iowa was called, Mr. Duncomb presented the name of Gov. Boies of Iowa in a very able speech.

Mr. Watterson seconded the nomination of Gov. Boies.

The convention then proceeded to ballot with the following result:

Cleveland	616½
Hill	114
Boies	103
Morrison	3
Campbell	2
Gorman	36½
Stevenson	16½
Carlisle	14
Pattison	1½
Russell	1
Whitney	1

On motion Cleveland's nomination was made unanimous and the New York delegation pledged their support to the candidates.

The convention then adjourned at 3:40 till 2 p. m.

THIRD DAY.

At 2:55 p. m. Chairman Wilson called the convention to order, and prayer was offered by the Rev. Thomas Green of Iowa. At the conclusion of the prayer Chairman Wilson said:

The next in order of business of the convention is the nomination of a candidate for the office of vice president of the United States. The chair will now direct the clerk to call the roll of the states for nominations for that office.

When the clerk called Arkansas Mr. Fordyce stated that Arkansas desired to waive the right to nominate in favor of Indiana.

GRAY NAMED.

Hon. John E. Lamb of Indiana then advanced to the platform and in a very able speech presented the name of Isaac P. Gray of Indiana.

Gov. Gray's nomination received several seconds.

STEVENSON NAMED.

Nicholas E. Worthington of Illinois in a short speech placed in nomination Gen. Adlai Stevenson of Illinois.

The nomination was seconded by several prominent delegates.

MITCHELL NAMED.

Gen. E. S. Bragg of Wisconsin placed in nomination Hon. John L. Mitchell of Wisconsin.

After several seconding speeches the roll of states was ordered called.

There was no choice on the ballot, but immediately on the announcement of the result several states changed their votes to Gen. Stevenson, giving him a majority, and on motion his nomination was made unanimous.

After the usual votes of thanks to officers the convention adjourned sine die.

That Tired Feeling

The marked benefit which people overcome by That Tired Feeling derive from Hood's Sarsaparilla, conclusively proves that this medicine "makes the weak strong." J. B. Emerton, a well known merchant of Auburn, Maine, says: "About five years ago I began to suffer with very severe pain in my Stomach, gradually growing worse. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla, being convinced that I was troubled with Dyspepsia complicated with Liver and Kidney troubles. I improved at once and am certainly very much better and feel more like working.

Mr. J. B. Emerton.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

always gives me relief and great comfort. It is a God-send to any one suffering as I did."

HOOD'S PILLS cure Habitual Constipation by restoring peristaltic action of the alimentary canal.

A Small Bit of Real Estate.

J. C. Robinson, Chicago—I read that a Cincinnati man sold a piece of land for $2.25, which was described in the deed: "The 1-1000th part of an inch from the northeast corner of lot No. 23 and running south one-fourth of an inch; thence west to the back line of said lot; thence north one-fourth of an inch; thence east to point of beginning."

This is paraded as the smallest real-estate transaction on record. As usual, Chicago can beat it. I know a gentleman who holds by a regular form of real-estate conveyance, duly acknowledged, certificate, sealed, delivered and recorded, a described portion of an ordinary city lot so small that the Cincinnati lot described in the clipping could be divided into a million times more proportions of a like size than could the American Continent into lots as large as the Cincinnati property mentioned. The following is the description: "The east vigintillionth of the east vigintillionth" of a certain lot on Oakwood boulevard, and the owner supposes he has an estate of some value, by the sale conveyance, but courts and lawyers know the deed is nonsense.—From the Chicago Tribune.

An Old Custom.

The fashion of saying "God bless you!" after sneezing, originated with the ancients. These people believed that some danger attended sneezing, so they generally made a short prayer such as "Jupiter, help me!" It has been found to be the custom among savages to do the same, and Jewish rabbis also make mention of the fact. An old Roman writer says that the custom originated during a plague, when people who were seemingly in good health sneezed and fell down dead.

Would Rather not Wait.

One of the Melbourne newspapers says that a while ago a woman there advertised for two housemaids. The same day two stylishly dressed young women were shown into her drawing-room, and were treated as callers until they remarked that they had come in answer to the advertisement. They explained that their father had recently lost his property, and consequently they found it necessary to take situations. When asked if they could wait at table, they replied: "Well, yes' we can wait, but we would rather not, as we might meet a lot of friends."

Easy Enough.

Miss Bagley. "Yes; but now you must forgive and forget."

Miss Faraway. "Oh, I can forgive, but it's not so easy to forget."

Miss Bagley. "Nonsense! I can tell you a hundred things I have forgotten."

Economy.

"What led you to go on the stage?" asked the youth of the tragedian.

"Economy," was the answer.

"Economy!"

"Yes. I have thereby saved the price of an indefinite but large number of hair cuts."—Washington Star.

AROUND THE GLOBE.

A Record of the Week's Happenings That are Now Part of the World's History.

The More Important Foreign and Domestic Events Arranged for Rapid Reading.

WASHINGTON.

The battleship Texas is successfully launched at the Norfolk navy yard.

The president issued a proclamation proclaiming reciprocal trade relations with Cuba, under the reciprocity clause of the recent tariff law.

The conferees on the agricultural appropriation bill have reached an agreement. The item relative to the crop reports of the agricultural department stands as it left the senate.

The 4½ per cent bonds redeemed to June 18, inclusive, amounted to $21,023 350; redeemed during the week, $45,700; total, $24,060,050; amount of bonds outstanding, $1,435,650.

The comptroller of the currency has declared a second dividend of 10 per cent in favor of the creditors of the Spring Garden Bank of Philadelphia, Pa., making 20 per cent on all claims proved, amounting to $1,683,676.82.

UNFORTUNATE EVENTS.

Mississippi river towns are again threatened with destructive floods.

In the hotel fire at Sanger, Fresno county, Cal., no lives were lost. Only one person was seriously injured.

Three houses in Berry, a Parisian suburb, were destroyed by fire. A number of the occupants were burned to death. Many others were injured while trying to escape.

At New Castle, Wyo., while dressing Gertie Monroe caught her clothing on fire from a match and was burned from head to foot, the most serious burns being about the face, neck and breast. Recovery is doubtful. John M. Howell, who extinguished the flames, was painfully burned.

While Mrs. John Skillman was playing with a Flobert rifle at Phillipsburg the weapon was discharged, and the ball passed through the heart of an eleven-year-old daughter, killing her instantly. The mother says she did not know the weapon was loaded.

PERSONAL MENTION.

Amedee Ernest Barthelemy Mouchez, the French naval officer, scientist and writer, is dead, aged seventy-one years.

D. D. Bell, the well known turfman and capitalist, died at Lexington, Ky., of paralysis. He was a familiar figure on the Western tracks and leaves a fortune valued at $5,000.

T. Clarke Oliver, the marine painter is dead at Amesbury Mass., aged sixty-eight. Some of his works are widely known, particularly "Kearsage," copies of which have been made in steel.

George Rhett Cathcart, one of the leading members of the American Book company and widely known in business, literary and social circles in this country and Europe died at Newport, R. I. of heart disease. He was for a short time on Gen. Longstreet's staff.

SINS AND SINNERS.

A young man shoots and kills his sister's assailant in court in New York.

A strange dream leads to the arrest of a young woman in St. Paul on the charge of embezzlement.

A young man is arrested in St. Paul for passing sixty-nine spurious checks. A man of the same age is arrested in Minneapolis for forging fifty checks.

Robert Barber killed his brother John, at Cedarville, Ohio, during a quarrel. The murderer literally beat his victim, who is a cripple, to death with his fists.

At Birmingham, Tex., nine convicts, with stone in hand, charged the guard and attempted to escape. The guard fired on them killing one and wounding four others. Two of them are likely to die. Four escaped, one being recaptured.

Over twenty fights occurred one Sunday on an excursion train going from Muncie, Ind., to Celina, Ohio. An unknown man was knocked from the train and is supposed to have been killed. Adolph Oates of Parker, Ind., had his skull crushed and will probably die.

The celebrated Mitchell case, in which Alice Mitchell is to be tried under a plea of present insanity, which she sets up as an excuse for killing Freda Ward, was called in the criminal court in Memphis, and continued until July 18, on account of the state failing to secure two witnesses.

FOREIGN NUGGETS.

Queen Victoria prorogues parliament.

It is reported that the queen of Spain has signed a decree granting minimum tariffs to Germany.

Full returns from all parts of the country of Sunday's election in Mexico make the re-election of President Diaz certain.

Henry Weld Fuller, the only brother of Chief Justice Fuller, died at the residence of his son in New Rochelle, N. Y.

The Canadian Parliament has made appropriations for the world's fair and for the Bering sea arbitration.

Alarming advices from St. Petersburg show that the city is preparing for an outbreak of cholera.

The attacks of the Central European press on the proposed international silver conference do not abate.

A total of 164 cases of cholera has been reported at Baku, Russia, during one week, with seventy deaths from the disease.

The Afghans lost 1,500 men killed and wounded in the recent fighting against the Hazaras.

The cholera has reached Tiflis. In their panic the Russian trans-Captain censors are suppressing cholera telegrams to newspapers.

The great drouth which has been prevailing over Northern Mexico and portions of South-west Texas on the Rio Grande, for the last two years, continues unbroken except in spots.

Seventy-five deaths from cholera have occurred in Central Asia. These are exclusive of the fatal cases which have been reported at Bauku, where 164 persons, seventy of whom succumbed to the malady, were stricken during one week.

The caravel Santa Maria, which is a reproduction of Columbus' vessel, was successfully launched at Cadiz recently in the presence of 10,000 spectators. The American consul and the mate of the bark Yamekden were the only Americans present.

A second search of the apartment of Grenier, the French government clerk, who confessed to selling plans of the French fort to Germany and Italy, and implicated the United States Attache Borup in his crime, has resulted in a fresh discovery. Many important documents were found, including a complete plan of a new French war ship.

A census bulletin gives the number of industrial establishments in Canada at 75,768, an increase of 51 per cent in ten years. The capital invested in these establishments is $353,000,000, an increase of 114 per cent; number of employes, 367,865, an increase of 44 per cent; wages paid, $99,000,000, an increase of $40,000,000; and the value of products, $475,000,000, an increase of $165,000,000.

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

An enthusiastic meeting of Republican clubs is held in New York.

Democrats oppose Senator Washburn's anti-option bill.

Senator Stewart denies that he has bolted the Republican party.

Senator Stewart of Nevada bolts the Republican party, helping along the third party presidential boom.

J. P. Dolliver was renominated for congress in the Tenth Iowa district Republican congressional convention.

Judge Gresham emphatically declares that he will not be the People's party candidate for president.

Senator Brice is quoted as saying that Congressman Ben T. Cable of Illinois will be chairman of the Democratic national committee.

There is talk of the Democrats making no effort to carry New York, but bringing all their energies to bear upon Northwestern states.

THE TOILERS.

A labor riot occurs at Toledo, Ohio.

There are signs of a settlement of the street railroad strikes at Cleveland, Ohio. The matter may be left to arbitration.

The National Brotherhood of Carmen in St. Louis have re-elected the old board of officers and adjourned to meet in Minneapolis in June, 1894.

A number of Pinkerton detectives were sent to Carnegie's steel works at Homestead, Pa., to protect the men now working. It is reported that 300 more Pinkerton men will leave Philadelphia for the works, to be used in case of emergency.

RAILROAD RUMBLINGS.

Representatives of many Chicago lines are summoned before the interstate commerce commission, charged with violating the law.

President Egan, of the Kansas City road, resigns and is succeeded by Ansel Oppenheim of St. Paul. Mr. Egan is elected president of the Chicago Great Western, which absorbs the Kansas City.

Tariffs have been issued, to take effect July 5, reducing the rate on wool in sacks from St. Paul to the seaboard by way of Chicago, from 75 cents to 65 cents per 100 pounds. This is done to meet the latest reduction made by the Soo line on that commodity.

SPORTING TRIFLES.

Chicago has a colored bicycle club.

Alvord is playing a great third with Fort Wayne.

Washington's jump has occasioned some astonishment.

The newspaper men's league has been revived in Cleveland.

Pitcher Terry signed recently by Pittsburg, is proving a good one.

Strayer, Columbus; supreme conductor, A. J. Dowd, Chicago; supreme secretary, G. B. Fragg, Columbus; supreme treasurer, W. E. Carpenter, Columbus; supreme judge, C. H. Potter, Cleveland; supreme sentinel, F. E. Nash, St. Joseph, Mo.

THE NORTHWEST.

A Summary of the Important Events of the Week in the Northwestern States.

Minnesota, Wisconsin, Iowa, North and South Dakota News in a Nutshell.

MINNESOTA.

The ninth annual convention of the Rice County W. C. T. U. opened at Morristown for a two days' session.

The Church of St. Francis, Roman Catholic, of Crow Wing county, has been incorporated with the secretary of state.

J. B. Hunton, a prominent citizen of St. James, died. He was formerly a very successful and extensive lumberman.

In about one month's time 1,184 acres of farming property has changed hands in Rice county at an average of $10 per acre.

Excitement has been produced at Staples by the discovery of petroleum. An expert from the oil regions of Pennsylvania has arrived, and boring for oil is progressing.

John L. Orme, a stonemason, committed suicide at Montevideo by taking rat poison. He refused medical aid and death took place, after intense suffering. Deceased leaves a wife and four children.

Congressman Castle got a gatling gun at Washington for the cavalry battalion Minnesota National Guards and it will be forwarded to Minnesota on a requisition from the adjutant general.

The Commercial Improvement Company, of Duluth with a capital stock of $1,000,000, has been incorporated. The incorporators are well known Duluth capitalists.

A reunion of veterans of McLeod county was held at Hutchinson under command of Gen. Miles. About one hundred including a few from adjoining counties were on hand and enjoyed camp life.

Hans Ugman, aged sixty, a prosperous farmer residing in the town of Fish Lake, seven miles northwest of North Branch, suicided by suspending himself to a tree with barbed wire.

A Contest on election of justice of the peace at Le Sueur last April has just been decided in favor of Felix A. Borner by 12 votes. He had been counted out by one vote.

Wm. Schultz, one of the oldest residents of Wright county, died at his home, about one mile north of Montrose. He was 40 years of age, and leaves a wife and several small children in rather destitute circumstances.

At a meeting of the Stillwater Chamber of Commerce a committee was appointed to secure takers for $50,000 worth of capital stock to the Columbia Electric Company, that proposes to move from St. Paul to Stillwater.

The livery barn, blacksmith shop and printing office at Ellsworth, were destroyed by fire. Twelve horses perished, four of which belonged to a breaker who had stopped there for the night. One mare from Adrian, valued at $1,000, was burned.

C. A. Pierce and son, of Brainerd, were at Pine Knot recently hunting. The son accidently fell down, causing the shot-gun to be discharged. The contents struck John Schunk in the small of the back, and he will probably die.

Gov. Merriam has issued a requisition for C. B. Granger, now under arrest in Chicago. Granger was formerly of St. Paul, and treasurer of Barber's Union No. 1. He is charged with having absorbed about $75 of the funds of the union.

Drews Brother's elevator at Lake Elmo burned. The building and machinery were valued at $3,000 on which there was $2,750 insurance. An engine valued at $1,000 belonging to another party was also destroyed. About $500 worth of flour and grain was also burned. The cause is unknown.

The jury in the famous usury case of J. T. Smith against the Continental Life Insurance company at Windom rendered a verdict substantially for the plaintiff for the entire amount. The $23,000, with the exception of $4,000 transferred to an innocent purchaser, is forfeited on account of usury.

Ex-State Senator Joseph Casper has filed a notice of voluntary assignment with the clerk of the court in St. Cloud. No particulars could be ascertained as to assets and liabilities. Capice is one of the oldest merchants in the county.

A stock company has been formed at Hastings with Charles Espenchied, of St. Louis; G. W. Gardner, of Hastings; M. V. Seymour, of St. Paul, and A. C. Loring of Minneapolis, as incorporators, capital $50,000, to operate the Gardner Mills. A Cleveland Club was organized at Hastings, with R. W. Freeman as president.

The case of the state against Miss Edith Kenny, a public school teacher in Blue Earth county, who was arrested for assault in the third degree committed upon one Lizzie Straton, one of her pupils, has been finished. The state employed four of the best attorneys in the city. City Attorney Young defended the teacher. The case went to the jury who returned a verdict of not guilty after being out about 15 minutes.

The news was received at Winona of the suicide by shooting of L. W. Ady at Clinton, Iowa. Mr. Ady's parents reside in Sparta, Wis., where he spent his boyhood days. He went to Virginia, where he married and went into business. He came here some time ago and was in business here. About six weeks ago he removed to Clinton, Iowa there he entered the grocery business. No reason can be assigned for the suicide other than temporary derangement.

The grand jury indicted H. A. Bruns and Thomas C. Kurtz, copartners as the Merchants' bank of Moorhead. The indictment charges them with having on Feb. 6, issued a New York draft to B. L. Titus for $80.54 and receiving a check for that amount when they had no money in the New York bank. Another indictment of grand larceny in the second degree was returned against Kurtz, charging him with appropriating $1,750 he held as agent for L. S. Brokke. The plea to both indictments is not guilty.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Five hundred dollars' worth of fireworks exploded in T. E. Yerxa's store at Fargo, blowing out the front and doing a large amount of damage.

William Hartman, a deck hand employed on the steamer Alsip, fell overboard and was drowned at Grand Forks. He was a stranger here, and nothing is known of his family.

B. B. Regan, of Grand Harbor, was arrested at Devils Lake on a complaint by Mrs. Mann for sending obscene literature through the mails and held in $500 bonds for trial in the United States court. He came here from Oklahoma years ago.

Barnes county crops are in fine condition, and although sown later than other years, bid fair to catch up with crops of former years. From the outlook now, it is predicted that we will have fully as large a crop as last year.

Mrs. E. E. Hancock was knocked down at Fargo while crossing the North side bridge between Fargo and Moorhead. Her assailant ran away, but she claims to have recognized him. She is said to be in a critical condition.

A Fargo advice says: Wheat has stooled out splendidly, and with the recent rain it will shoot rapidly forward. The acreage in North Dakota is not more than 70 per cent of last year, but the grain is looking even better than at this time last year.

Thomas Graham, employed on the steamer Alsip, was drowned between two grain barges unloading at the Great Northern elevator, Grand Forks. In jumping from one barge to another his foot slipped, throwing him into the water, and the swift current sucked him under the barge.

In a recent thunder shower near Bisbee Station, 13 miles northwest of Cando, fish fell in great quantities on the farm of Senator Bisbee. The fish were from one and a half to three inches long. Some were alive but most of them were dead, although apparently quite fresh.

North Dakota Grand Lodge, A. F. and A. M., elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Grand master, Dr. A. B. Herrick, Lisbon; deputy grand master, W. H. Ganhon, Ellendale; senior grand warden, James McDonald Grafton; junior grand warden, George L. McGregor, Jamestown; treasurer, William James, Barthgate; secretary, Frank J. Thompson, Fargo. The grand lodge meets next year at Devil's Lake.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

The first annual meeting of the South Dakota Dairymen's association was held at Watertown and the people of that city entertained all who attended in an admirable manner. Horticulturists were invited to meet with the dairymen.

Miss Carrie Pullman narrowly escaped burning to death at Aberdeen by the explosion of a gasoline stove. Luckily she was standing on the opposite side of the room and escaped with a severe scorching. The fire was soon extinguished.

Ex.Gov. Bulkley, of Connecticut, and Hon. J. J. Hassler of Wahington, D. C., were at Huron recently. They had been on a visit to Forest City examining the affairs of the Forest City & Sioux City railway, in which both gentlemen are very much interested, Mr. Hassler being its general manager. The road is now being operated by the Chicago & Northwestern Company.

The contract for grading the Yankton & Norfolk railway was awarded John Haughton, of Sioux Falls, who is under bonds to complete the work in sixty days. When this work is finished graders will be transferred to the Yankton & Sioux Falls line. A franchise for a bridge across the Missouri river recently passed congress, and it is believed that the line from Sioux Falls to Norfolk will be operated by the Great Northern or Burlington systems.

The sixth annual reunion of the Black Hills Soldiers and Sailors Association convened at Hot Springs. D. A. S. Stewart, presiding. Col. W. V. Lucas, commandant of the Soldiers Home of Hot Springs, delivered the address of welcome to the soldiers and Gen. A. R. G. Dawson, of Deadwood, responded. The feasibility of uniting the posts of Northern Nebraska and Eastern Wyoming to the Black Hills organization was discussed.

WISCONSIN.

Nels Moe, of Red Lake, was arrested and taken to Madison to answer to the charge of selling liquor to Indians.

Sixteen meat markets and two storage houses in Ashland are charged with selling diseased meat by Meat Inspector Hoefle. The outcome of the charges will be watched with much interest.

The Norway House at Ashland was entered by burglars and $500 in cash, besides numerous valuables, was taken. The robbers climbed to the second story and entered the house through a window.

The Watson will contest has been settled at Eau Claire. Mrs. Clara Morton, the contestor, gets $1 cash, satisfaction of judgment for costs of $300 against her and satisfaction of a mortgage amounting to $22.60 held by the estate on her residence.

At the council chamber at Ashland, City Clerk Fitch, City Treasurer MacDonnel and Mayor Durfee sold the $75,000 5 per cent 20-year bonds. They were bought by N. N. Harris & Co., of Boston, at a premium of $4,000.

One Mike Garrity, of Eagle River, Wis., was jailed on the charge of being a procurer. He had decoyed a young girl from the Woman's Christian Temperance Home for women in Eau Claire. Garrity was arrested in a bagnio. Immediately after the police left the place with Garrity in charge the girl was taken with a fit and is dying.

Details have been completed for the educational conference to be held on July 12 and 13, on Madeline Island, under the auspices of the Lake Superior Congregational Club. Delegates will be present from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Illinois and Michigan.

The suit of the state against ex-State Treasurer Guenther to recover $70,000 of interest collected by him on deposits of public funds was continued till the supreme court has decided the test case of ex-Treasurer McFetridge and Harshaw now pending there on appeal.

Jas. Butler is under arrest at Chippewa Falls for an assault upon David Plummer in a saloon. Both men were under the influence of liquor. Butler struck Plummer with a beer glass and fractured his skull. Plummer is in a semi-conscious condition at the hospital and may die. Butler is held under bonds.

Assistant Chief W. M. Kellogg, of the West Superior fire department, was badly hurt by being thrown from a carriage while running his horse to the Eau Claire House, in response to a fire alarm. The rig struck an obstruction in the street and both horse and driver were thrown. Kellogg was picked up and carried to the Central Station. He was terribly bruised and thought to be injured internally.

IOWA.

Several persons are killed and many injured by a cloudburst in Chickasaw county, Iowa.

The 10-year-old son of H. E. Long, a well known attorney of Des Moines was drowned in the Des Moines river. The body has not been recovered.

Henry Rice, near Kier, while shooting rats accidently shot himself, completely shattering his skull. He died in a few hours.

A man, Tim DeLong, aged 54, was killed by a Rock Island train while walking on the track west of Des Moines. He leaves a large family.

Wallace Clark, 20 years of age and tired of life, attempted suicide at Ottumwa. He shot himself through the stomach and will die.

The body of Vincent Beck an old resident of Burlington, was found in a creek north of Burlington. Evidence shows he committed suicide on account of family troubles.

A fellow giving the name of John Kelly, but believed to be Charles Davenport, was arrested at Cedar Rapids, after victimizing a number of business men by selling fradulent tickets for an alleged raffle.

A Sigourney Special says: John Driver of Chicago, and J. R. Fustain, of Kansas City, have secured options on 4,000 acres of land in this vicinity, and drilling experiments thus far show a fine vein of five-foot coal.

Captain Mariner, of the steamer Rosebud, recently arrived at Sioux City, reports a cyclone at Fort Yates, S. D., June 18, that killed four Sioux Indians and crippled a number of others.

Tom Brody, of Independence, was held up in the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern railway yards in Cedar Rapids and robbed of $35 in money and nearly all his clothes. The robber escaped.

Lulu Sutzin, a 12-year-old girl, was run down at Cedar Rapids by a freight train while crossing a low bridge near Marion recently and instantly killed. No blame is attached to the railway men.

Frank Johnson a clerk at the Burlington Lumber Company, Burlington drew his pay and mysteriously disappeared. His books are all right and his folks think he has been foully dealt with. He is 22 years old and is married.

A clever swindle was worked at Burlington on different parties by a fellow claiming to hail from Quincy Ill. He stated that his mother-in-law had just died and he wished to bring the corpse to this city for burial. He arranged with St. John's Catholic Church and the undertaking firm of Unterkircher & Sons for the burial. He had unfortunately lost his pocketbook on the train and borrowed from several parties enough to get back to Quincy on, the sums aggregating a goodly amount. He then disappeared. The grave was dug and a hearse met the train at the depot, but no corpse arrived. The fellow played the same game at Quincy.

LOVE ON THE STAGE.

It Is By No Means So Pleasant as It Looks.

"When a scene calls for love making," she said, "it is always the man who is the interesting figure. The leading lady turns her face to the audience and looks entranced and joyous and all that, and works up to 'Take me, I am am yours,' and then he takes her, and all the girls in the front say, 'Oh, isn't that lovely!' But it isn't so delightful for us. There is as much art in being taken as there is in taking; just the same chance there is of knocking noses over a kiss, and you are never sure which way these impassioned, just-too-elegant stage lovers are coming at you. It may be exhilarating to the matinee girl to witness a whirlwind rush across the stage and a real-in-earnest, don't-you you-know, embrace. But he is very likely to step on your toe, and that hurts, besides spoiling your slippers.

"While the lovely leading man is supposed to be rapturously kissing you, he is very likely huskily informing you that his suspender has given way, and that he has to cut the scene or, may be, he is roaring a whisper in your ear to the effect that if you wear a corsage bouquet in that act again he'll leave the company. It is hard on a man to have to embrace a girl when he knows a hatpin is going to skewer his lungs together. If you happen to be small the leading man's studs catch in your bangs or scratch your chin. If you are tall the powder comes off your nose on his shoulder. I don't know which is the madder, the woman who looses the powder off her nose or the man who gets it on his coat.

"Sometimes it is you who have to make the rush. That is awful! You are almost sure to catch your foot in the ruffling of your dress and precipitate yourself into a man's diaphragm so he can't speak a word. A leading man hates that. I remember seeing a woman play Lydia Languish once with a very celebrated stage lover. You know the rush Lydia makes into Captain Absolute's arms in the third act? This Captain Absolute sat back into a Chinese urn used as a piece of stage furniture, and they had to ring down the curtain. Cicily Homespun in Heir-at-Law' run's into her lover's arm that same way.

"It upsets one so to have the leading man tell you just where to land. You are sure to land somewhere else on him, and he does not like it. Your nice, calm, slow, indifferent lovers, that girls from the orchestra find so fascinating, are dreadfully hard to play with. They have a way of building you around in a matter-of-fact style that makes you feel as if you were being sort of trundled; besides, you feel so awkward. You would never let a man make love to you that way off the stage, but of course if the leading man makes love best that way that is the way he has got to do it, and it makes no difference about you. Your nice, methodical actor, who puts some life and spirit in his work, but who, for all that, rehearses what he is going to do and then does what he rehearses, is the lover the easiest to play with, whether or no he looks the best from the front."—Pittsburg Post.

WEAVER A MOSES.

The Old-Time Greenbacker Nominated for President by the Ismites.

Gen. J. G. Field of Virginia Receives the Vice-Presidential Nomination.

Omaha, July 5, 2 a. m.—Gen. James B. Weaver of Iowa is the candidate of the People's party for president of the United States. For several days it has been manifest, that with the leaders Weaver was the choice of the vast majority. It was not until the distinguished jurist Judge Gresham positively declined to be a candidate that the delegates turned to their own ranks and with almost one accord selected the veteran green backer as their standard bearer. There were some who feared that greenback predilictions might affect his availability, and it was these gentlemen who brought Senator Kyle of South Dakota to the front; but the sentiment that one of the "old guard" should be selected to lead the party was overwhelming, and Weaver's triumph was finally complete. Indeed the failure of the Gresham movement reacted promptly and powerfully in Weaver's favor. The friends of the Iowans have contended for several days that those who persist in becoming Gresham' supporters were actuated solely by the desire to defeat Weaver.

The candidacy of Kyle was effective only in humiliating the South Dakota friends of the senator. The senator wired that he did not desire that his name should be president to the convention. The senator finally said that if his nomination was demanded by the convention in the interest of harmony he supposed he could not refuse.

In spite of all the leaders, the sentiment that the People's party presidential nominee must be chosen on the Fourth of July was without its fruition, as the nomination was made at 1:50 a. m. July 5.

In order to catch the Southern votes, a Southern man—Gen. J. G. Field of Virginia—was nominated for vice president.

Lowered the Record.

Wilmington, Del., July 5.—The Maple Valley Trotting association's new kite-shaped track, one and one-half miles from Kirkwood station on the Delaware railroad and about ten miles south of Wilmington, was opened this afternoon with 5,000 people in attendance. The feature of the opening was the lowering of the world's double team record of 2:13 by Belle Hamlin and Globe, the holders of the record, owned by C. H. Hamlin of Buffalo, N. Y., and driven by Ed Geers. The pair went around with-[illegible] the half in 1:02 and coming under the wire in 2:12, amid enthusiastic cheers.

He Will Pass Through St. Paul.

Chicago, July 5.—Frank G. Lenz, the Outing representative, who left New York June 4 for a tour of the world on a pneumatic safety bicycle, reached this city late to-night. The entire distance, 1,200 miles, including a trip to Toronto and other side points, was ridden in deep mud, and part of it in heavy rain. Lenz will remain here until Saturday, when he leaves for San Francisco via Milwaukee, St. Paul, Minneapolis, Bismarck, Boise City, Portland and Sacramento. His companion, Robert Bruce of the Outing staff, reached Chicago this afternoon.

Races at Crookston.

Crookston, Minn., Special, July 5.—At the races held here to-day 5,000 people were present. The 2:29 trot was easily won by Belle W., Alkali second, Bessie P. third. In the green trot Mabel W. was first, Farrett second, Time Medium third. Running race was won by Flora McDonald, Twenty-One second. The half-mile bicycle race was closely contested and won by A. J. Baldwin, R. C. Farwell second. To-morrow the programme will be more interesting even than to-day, and a large crowd is expected.

Settlement Wanted.

Texas Siftings: Mr. Harlem Bridges was asked by his grocer to pay for six pounds of coffee.

"When did I get this coffee?" asked Mr. Bridges, with rage stamped on every lineament of his countenance.

"It was last year you got that coffee."

"Then it is settled long ago, and if it isn't, coffee that won't settle in a year shouldn't be paid for, anyhow.

A motion to consider was promptly laid on the table.

Evanston Regatta.

Chicago, July 5.—The annual regatta of the Evanston Boat club was the most successful one it has ever held. Long before the time set for the opening event the large piazzas of the club house were filled to overflowing and the shore for half a mile was lined with sightseers, while the lake was alive with craft of all sorts. There were six races, most of them having exciting finishes.

Hanlan the Winner.

Hartford, Conn., July 5.—Hanlan beat Hosmer about ten feet to-day in a three-mile race with three turns on the Connecticut river. Time, 18:55.

Cricket at Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Special, July 5.—The Brainerd, Minn., cricket team spent the Fourth in Winnipeg as guests of the local club. In the afternoon a match was played, which resulted disastrously for Brainerd. The Winnipegs won by an inning and seventy runs to spare. The visitors leave for home to-morrow.

Will Investigate the Seizures.

Ottawa, Ont., Special, July 5.—Sir John Caldwell Abbott, premier, said to-day that all facts in connection with the Bering sea seizures have been submitted to Lord Salisbury, and if late information justifies it the Dominion government will lodge a protest with the British government against the United States.

Miss Willard and the Wheel.

New York World: Over the wires this week flashed the startling news that Miss Frances Willard has taken up bicycle riding. It would have been more impressive if it had not been so old. Fully six years ago Miss Willard on her wheel was a familiar figure in the highways and byways of Evanston. She rode morning, noon and night for several weeks until one dark day she rode down an embankment and landed at the bottom a confused heap of woman and bicycle. A broken arm, six weeks in bed and a general lack of interest in wheels resulted from this experience. Now with characteristic courage, the apostle of temperance will try again.

CONDENSED TELEGRAMS.

A meeting of Anarchists in St. Denis, Paris yesterday, adopted a resolution to blow up the Mont Brison prison and rescue Ravachol.

Maj. Richard J. Falls, a veteran of the war with Mexico and of the war of the rebellion, and leader of the famous charge at Cedar Creek, died in San Francisco Sunday night of general disability.

The new Kansas state house at Topeka, not yet completed, is in danger of falling down owing to poor material used. There has been expended on this building nearly $2,250,000 and it is not yet completed.

Samuel C. Graham, an American citizen, condemned to twenty years' imprisonment for the murder of a Mexican in the State of Jalisco, has, upon the recommendation of Congressman Springer and others, been pardoned by the Mexican government.

An international complication is liable to grow out of the seizure of the steamer Joseph Oteri, Jr., by the Honduran revolutionists. Joseph Oteri, the owner, states that he will make a demand through the United States government upon Honduras for $70,000 damages for detention of the vessel.

THE DAY'S ACCIDENTS.

A Catalogue of Casualties More or Less Serious.

St. Paul, Special Telegram, July 5.—A sad drowning accident occurred at Spring Park, Minnetonka, yesterday, in which three well known young people of St. Paul—Laura Lewis, Ida Swanson and Rufus Hogan—were the victims. In company with thirteen other young people from this city and four from Minneapolis the young people named started for the lake yesterday morning for a picnic and after spending the morning in celebrating the day, decided to go out on the lake.

The party left Spring park in four boats, with four people in each. In one boat were the three people who were drowned, and Oscar Sandell of this city. The boat taken by this party was a broad-bottomed craft, but as it was not easily handled the young people went back to shore and took a narrow boat, pointed at both ends. While rowing in deep water about thirty rods from shore, and before assistance could reach them three of the young people were drowned.

THE BOAT WAS OVERTURNED,

Just how the accident occurred, no one can definitely state. According to the statements of Mr. Sandell, who was rescued, all the members of the party were sitting down, but others who were on the lake say that Miss Swanson leaned over the edge of the boat, and one of the men caught her as the boat tipped. The extra weight upset the boat, and Sandell, who was rowing, came up under the overturned craft. Mr. Brote, the owner of the boats witnessed the accident from the shore and started in a skiff to rescue the unfortunate people. Long before he had reached the spot where the accident occurred, however, all but Sandell had been drowned. Sandell was found under the boat, almost exhausted, and was taken ashore.

The search for the bodies commenced at once, and the remains of the two young ladies were soon recovered. Hogan's body [illegible], although the place where the drowning took place had been carefully marked.

James H. Burns, proprietor of the St. Paul Herald, met with a serious accident at 10:30 last night, which resulted in the loss of his right hand. He was discharging a large firecracker near his home, corner of Goodhue and Western avenues and held the explosive too long in his hand. It burst with great force and shattered Mr. Burns' right hand. He was taken to his residence and Doctors C. F. Sweney and Anton Shimonek were called in to attend to the injury. So severely was the hand mangled that the surgeons found it necessary to amputate it above the wrist. Late last night the injured man was doing well, though suffering severely from the shock.

Joe Bothke, a young man who runs a saloon at 170 West Third street, had his right hand so badly shattered by the explosion of a giant fire cracker yesterday morning that amputation at the wrist was necessary. One of a crowd of young fellows, when passing, threw the lighted cracker into the saloon and it struck Mr. Badke's hand and exploded. Doctors Ancker and Shimonek were called and performed the operation. Bodke was doing as well as expected by the physicians when heard from late last night, and the doctors anticipate no serious result.

THE DEADLY TOY CANNON.

A lad of nine years named Davern, and living at 549 Lafayette avenue, was seriously hurt at 5 o'clock yesterday morning by the explosion of a small cannon at the corner of Seventh and Pine streets. The boy's patriotism had routed him out of bed at the break of day, and he proceeded to a conspicuous point to welcome the sunrise with his new toy cannon. The cannon proved defective, exploding and flying into a thousand pieces at the first discharge. The boy's face was shockingly burned and his eyes were closed by the powder. He was taken home, where a physician attended him.

NO LIVES LOST.

A boat capsized near the spiritualistic camp grounds, by running against the rope of the St. Paul Park ferry, and threw Miss Bailey and Miss Latimore of Newport, together with Ellery Williams and Will Graves of St. Paul Park into the water. The ladies clung to the boat, and were rescued with the assistance of Frank Truax, the ferryman. The gentlemen escaped with a ducking.

THREATENED BY FIRE.

Sibley, Iowa, Fighting Against a General Conflagration.

Sibley, Iowa, Special, July 5.—The large Northwestern Hotel and a feed and storage building in this place are now burned to the ground and the fire is raging in close proximity to the business portion of the town. This fire is owing to the Fourth of July celebration. Several smaller buildings have been pulled away and it is hoped to save the town by hard work. The Gazette building and Northwestern State Bank are in imminent danger, but may be saved.

Hanged Himself.

Washburn, Wis., Special, July 5.—A Pole named Adolph Smith committed suicide to-day by hanging. He was about thirty-five years old and married. His wife is now en route from the old country.

Remington's Troubles in Russia.

London Cable New York Sun: Poultney Bigelow, whose canoe cruise with Frederick Remington in Russian waters was prevented by imperial authority, wrote to a friend in London from Germany this week: "Our canoes are confiscated, with all their contents. Remington and I are turned adrift and shall draggle along home as well as may be. Remington has made lots of military studies, however, in spite of the Russian police. We are now at Trakenhain, the German stud farm, the biggest in the world, and having a royal time in spite of the czar."

FIFTY CENTS IN CASH

Will secure the Spectator from now to Jan. 1st 1893, a hot political campaign is now on and we will try to make the Spectator interesting we make this low offer so that every farmer in this part of the country can afford to subscribe.

The 4th of July was duly celebrated in this place every part of the program was carried out to the letter and no accident occured to mar the pleasures of the day. D. E. Hatlested, of Crookston was orator of the day and delivered an able and eloquet speech after which the races and games were held. A large crowd was present and all seemed to thorougly enjoy themselves. The free Bowery dance in the evening was well attended and the dancing was kept up untill morning.

An exchange thus defines a moss back: A mossback, gentle reader, is a cross betwe en the fifth century and and fifteenth. He is found in fossilized form in every city in the United States and and still lives. He raises his rents, detests room, loves to have others bear all the taxes, hates a new enterprises, despises anyhow which smacks of progress and won't help a paper boom its own town. They are as drones to the hive of industrious bees, and like the live bees buisness men should avoid these drones and patronize those who are an advantage to the place they reside in

LEGISLATIVE CONVENTION

The legislative convention was called to order in the court house at Crookston last Thursday and E. E. Lommen was elected chairman and G. W. Swift secretary. The committee on credentials reported sixteen delegates entitled to seats as follows: Polk 11, Norman 4, Beltrami 1. A resolution prevailed that Norman county should have the selection of two candidates for the legislature. They selected as their candidates O. E. Olson and B. M. Chesley by acclimation. J. D. Kandson of Polk county, was nominated by acclimation. Speeches were made by the candidates nominated and others after which the convention adjourned.

A story of brutality comes from Ada that surpasses anything that has come to our notice for some time. Ada is a no license town, but maintains a wholesale liquor establishment where original packages can be purchased. Saturday night a lot of Germans from the rural districts purchased some "originals" and proceeded to a harness store to make away with it. They became too noisy and the village marshall was called upon to quit the orgies. He succeeded in his task and also arrested one of the party. This so enraged the ballance —fifteen in number—that they went to the jail and demanded the liberty of their companion. Upon a refusal of the request they laid violent hands upon the marshall and almost killed him before they were dispersed. The injured man was taken home and a surgeon summoned who found him in a precarious condition, Knives had evidently been used in the attack as the abdomen of the wounded man was cut open and his intestines protruded from the terrible gash. He was bruised and battered all over his person, and besides internal injuries which may prove fatal. Warrants were sworn out for the arrest of the mob who had made the assault, and six of them were immediately arrested and placed under $500 bonds, and the remainder will be taken by the officials. The citizens are up in arms over the outrage, as the marshall was highly respected. He was a quiet, industrious man, energetic in the discharge of his duties, and has been a resident of Ada but about two years, and has a wife and one child.—Crookston Times.

PEOPLE'S PARTY CONVENTION.

The People's party county convention for the nomination of county officers was held at the court house in the city of Crookston on Wednesday June 29th. E. E. Lommen was chosen chairman and M. Jeffers, Secretary, The chairman appointed committees on permanent organization, credentials and resolutions and the convention adjourned until afternoon. Upon reassembling in the afternoon the convention was found to be composed of 136 delegates. The first business under the call was the election of eleven delegates to the legislative convention. E. E. Lommen was elected as delegate at large and two by each of the five commissioners districts as follows.

1st district—W. G. Hunt, Geo. T. A Jorgenson.

2nd district—M. Finseth, J. Merrill.

3rd district—Chris. Housten, O. Christianson,

4th district—Swan Anderson, Noah Bronson.

5th district—John Dwyer, Martin Purcell.

The 1st, 3rd and 5th districts also nominated county commissioners as follows:

1st district—John Oppegaard.

3rd district—Chris. Hanson.

6th district—Robert Anderson.

The next in order was the nomination of county auditor. C. U. Webster the present incumbent, and W. A. Marian were nominated. Mr. Webster being nominated on the first ballot by a large majsrity. For county treasurer J. T. Beaudry, the present officials was nominated by acclamation, The fight of the convention occurred on the register of deeds, eleven candidates being voted for on the first ballot, The battle soon narrowed down to A. P. Toupin and John Amundson, Amundson winning on the third ballot. The present popular sheriff was renominated on the second ballot over several able competitors. County attorney was next in order and A. R. Holston was the winner on the third ballot over J. G. McGrew and L. E. Gossman. The present judge of probate, C. M. Benson, won in a canter on the first ballot. For county surveyor O. L. Hamery was nominated by acclamation. For county supt, of schools, V. D. Carruth and Miss Martha Crookshanks were nominated. Miss Crookshanks was nominated but declined the honor, and on the next ballot A. A. Lommen was nominated. For coroner Henry Shepard was nominated by acclamation. J. G. McGrew was an easy winner in the race for court commissioner. The chairman was instructed to name a county central committee and the convention adjourned.

Harmony prevailed and the ticket nominated is undoubtedly a winning one.

S. M. Owen, the alliance candidate for governer two years ago, has the following to say in an article in the New York World,

"You ask me what is the prospect of a fusion between the People's party and the democratic party in this state and the Dakotas? Frankly none whatever It it nearly out of the question as the union of the people's party and republicanism as practiced by the leaders of the party of Lincolon and Grant at the present time; The republican organization is hopelessly given over to plutocracy and corporation intrest The democratic party, as it exists in Minnesota is scarcley a whit better, its leaders are dominated by the comportions exactly the same as are the republican leaders. I regard both parties as office hunting machines that will, sacrifice principle and right for all the sake of expediencey. You cannot interduct a democrat leader inh in his state to do any thing contrary to the wishes of the railway magnates, who rooles us with a rod of iron.

The Mankato Free Press, in a leading article attacks Ignatius Donnelly and abuses him roundly for calling John Sherman the "Arch Fiend of American politics." The Free Press says:

John Sherman stands as one of the world's great financiers, and to him, perhaps more than to any other American, belongs the honor of preserving the nation's credit by resumption of specie payment. His name, connected with financial affairs has for many years been a guaranty for honest money. Probably no man is more hated by the advocates of cheap money than he is,"

Cheap money! Will the Free Press man tell us what he means by cheap money? Does he mean silver which John Sherman helped to demonitize in in 1873, so that his bank in New York and his brother bankers might absorb all the gold in the country and thus gain control of the money markets of the world, and to then dictate their own terms to the farmer, the mechanic and the laborer? Or does he mean treasury notes, based upon the good auth and credit of the nation, It is refreshing to note the ignorance and cupidity, so intimately mixed, that seems to control the minds of the average old party editor, and when they attempt to air their views on such grave questions as finance and tarifs, they usually show the length of their ears. The howl for honest money is too specious and flimsey to catch any votes this year; the common people of today know as much about finance as the average country editor, and when you tell him that silver is dishonest money he classes you with the enemies of his country; and if you intimate that the treasury note, the greenback, is not as good and safe cash to lay away in his strong box as the gold, he laughs at you and calls you a simpleton. He knows, and thinks you ought to know, that a ten dollar note, issued by the United States Treasury, and having the nation's wealth behind it, is just as good and just as safe to pile up for a wet day as a gold eagle. It is the rankest folly to keep up this tirade of abuse against the attempt of the people to regulate their own finances. Two years ago the people were educating themselves and such trash and buncome in the papers then might have had some weight in balancing the vote cast; but to-day and henceforth the people will do their own thinking. They know what they want, what will be for their best interests and they are determined to have it, not because it is for the interest of a peculiar class, but because it will benefit the whole nation, and because it is right and lawful, They know that silver was debased to make the circulating medium scarce and to put gold at a premium. They know that a treasury note based upon the faith and credit of the nation, is just as good as a gold dollar and they care not whether it be based upon gold in the treasury or upon the taxable property of the nation; they know that all the gold in the country does not amount to five per cent of the amount needed to carry on the great and diversified business of the country; they know that the bankers and brokers of Wall street want gold for a basis of circulation, not for the good it will do the country, but that the circulating medium may be scarce and hard to get: they know that the time is not distant when all the money of the world will be in the hands of the money lords and the millionaries unless some radicle change be made. We know that adheraunce to the old parties will insure an "innings" when the "crumbs" from the rich man's table are distributed and that for some years to come we shall be able to eke out a miserable existance; but we are tired of living on "crumbs", the support is too uncertain and precarious. We think that a fair and equitable distribution of the wealth of the country will more surely conduce to our interests than to have all the money in the country in the hands of the rich few, Let up on your twaddle and let the poor man have a chance.

Hard on Peet.

Mr. Peet, a rather diffident man, was unable to prevent himself being introduced one evening to a fascinating young lady, who, misunderstanding his name, constantly addressed him as Mr. Peters, much to the gentleman's distress. Finally summoning courage, he bashfully but earnestly remonstrated, "Oh, don't call me Peters—call me Peet." "Ah, but I don't know you well enough, Mr. Peters," said the young lady blushing, as she playfully withdrew part way behind her fan.—Red Gulch Bazoo.

Hall Bros. have received a large consignment of the celebrated Fish Bros. lumber wagons. Call and look them over.

HUMOR

HE WAS ALL RIGHT.

Case of a Man Who Was Not Such a Fool as He Looked.

A tall, slim fellow, with a vacant stare, walked into the police station of a western city, stepped up to the officer on duty and said in a hollow voice:

"Sir, I have an important communication to make. I am dead. I was murdered, and I entreat you to find the murderer and have me buried."
